Last page of docket
SHOW PROCEEDINGS AND ORDERS DATE: [03/31/89]

CASE NBR: [88106341] CSY STATUS: [ ]
SHORT TITLE: [Bonin, William G.]
VERSUS [California] DATE DOCKETED: [011489]
PAGE: [01]

DATE	NOTE	PROCEEDINGS & ORDERS
Dec 7 1988		Application (A88-457) to extend the time to file a petition for a writ of certiorari from December 18, 1988 to January 17, 1989, submitted to Justice O'Connor.
Dec 8 1988		Application (A88-457) granted by Justice O'Connor extending the time to file until January 17, 1989.
Jan 14 1989		Petition for writ of certiorari and motion for leave to proceed in forma pauperis filed.
Feb 23 1989		Brief of respondent in opposition filed.
Mar 2 1989		DISTRIBUTED. March 17, 1989
Mar 20 1989		The petition for a writ of certiorari is denied. Dissenting opinion by Justice Marshall with whom Justice Brennan joins. (Detached opinion.)
		**********

NO. 88 - 88-6341 (2)

ORIGINAL

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1988

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN,	)
	)
Petitioner,	)
	)
v.	)
	)
STATE OF CALIFORNIA,	)
	)
Respondent.	)

Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED
JAN 14 1989
JOSEPH F. SPANIOL, JR.
CLERK

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
AND MOTION FOR LEAVE TO PROCEED IN FORMA PAUPERIS

HARVEY R. ZALL
State Public Defender

ADRIAN K. PANTON
Supervising Deputy
State Public Defender

107 South Broadway, Suite 9111
Los Angeles, California 90012
Telephone: (213) 620-5430

Attorneys for Petitioner

127 pp

QUESTION PRESENTED

Was the death judgment invalid under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments where the jury was misled as to the scope of its sentencing responsibility and discretion by the prosecutor's (1) emphasis in argument on the jury instructions' mandatory direction that death shall be imposed if factors in aggravation outweigh those in mitigation, and (2) improper argument that the absence of evidence supporting a statutory factor in mitigation is to be considered an aggravating circumstance?

* * * * *

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
QUESTION PRESENTED	1
PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA	1
OPINION BELOW	1
JURISDICTION	1
STATUTES AND CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED	2
STATEMENT OF THE CASE	2
A. Procedural History	2
B. Factual Summary	3
C. Raising of Federal Question	4
REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT	5
ARGUMENT	6
THE PENALTY INSTRUCTIONS AND THE PROSECUTOR'S ARGUMENT COMBINED TO MISLEAD THE SENTENCING JURY	6
A. Impropriety of "Shall" Language	6
B. Absence of Mitigation As Aggravation	10
C. CONCLUSION	12
MOTION FOR LEAVE TO PROCEED IN PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI IN FORMA PAUPERIS	14

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

Cases	Pages
Caldwell v. Mississippi 472 U.S. 320 (1985)	6,9
California v. Brown 479 U.S. 538 (1987)	6,8,9
Gregg v. Georgia 428 U.S. 153 (1976)	11
Jackson v. Dugger 837 F.2d 1469 (11th Cir. 1988)	9
Lockett v. Ohio 438 U.S. 586	6
Mills v. Maryland 486 U.S.____, 100 L.Ed2d 384 (1988)	12
Peek v. Kemp 784 F.2d 1479 (11th Cir. 1986)	6
People v. Bonin 46 Cal.3d 659, ____P.2d____ (1988)	2,5,8,10-12
People v. Brown 40 Cal.3d 512 (1985)	6-9
People v. Davenport 41 Cal.3d 247 (1985)	10
Sumner v. Shuman 483 U.S. ____, 97 L.Ed.2d 56 (1987)	9
Zant v. Stephens 462 U.S. 862 (1983)	5,11,12
Statutes
California Penal Code
§ 187	2
§ 190	2
§ 190.1	2
§ 190.2	2
§ 190.2(a)(3)	2
§ 190.3	2,6
§ 190.3(a)-(k)	4,10
§ 190.4	2
§ 190.4(e)	2
§ 211	2
§ 12022.7	2
28 U.S.C., § 1257(3)	1

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES (CONT.)

Constitutions	Pages
United States
Amend. VIII	2
Amend. XIV	2
Rules of Court
California Rules of Court rule 17.1(c)	5,6
rule 27(b)	2
Jury Instructions
CALJIC
No. 8.84.1	4
No. 8.84.2	4,5,7,8

NO. 88 - _____

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1988

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN,
Petitioner,
v.
STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
Respondent.

PETITION FOR A WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN respectfully prays that a writ of certiorari issue to review the decision of the Supreme Court of the State of California, affirming his sentence of death.

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the California Supreme Court is reported at 46 Cal.3d 659, ___ P.2d ___, and is reproduced in the Appendix at A1-A54. The unreported order denying the petition for rehearing appears at A55.[1]

JURISDICTION

Jurisdiction of this Court is invoked pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1257(3).

The judgment of the Supreme Court of California affirming petitioner's conviction of capital murder and the sentence of death imposed by the trial court was rendered on August 29, 1988. A petition for rehearing was timely filed on September 13, 1988 (Cal. Rules of Court, rule 27 (b)), and denied on October 19, 1988 (Appendix A55). On December 8, 1988, Justice O'Connor extended the time for filing this petition to and including January 17, 1989 (Appendix A56).

[1] In the proceedings below, petitioner William George Bonin appeared as defendant and appellant; the People of the State of California appeared as plaintiff and respondent.

STATUTES AND CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

United States Constitution, Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, and California Penal Code sections 190, 190.1, 190.2, 190.3 and 190.4 are set forth in full at Appendix A57-A64.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

A. Procedural History

On August 2, 1983, a jury declared petitioner guilty of four counts of murder (Cal. Pen. Code § 187) and four counts of robbery with great bodily injury (Cal. Pen. Code §§ 211, 12022.7). As to each murder count, the jury found as a special circumstance that petitioner in the same proceeding had been convicted of more than one offense of murder. The special circumstance findings rendered petitioner eligible for the death penalty (Cal. Pen. Code § 190.2(a)(3)); Appendix A59).

Following a penalty trial, the jury on August 22, 1983, returned four death verdicts. The trial court denied petitioner's automatic motion for a reduction of the penalty on August 26, and imposed a death judgment (see Cal. Pen. Code § 190.4(e); Appendix A64).

On automatic appeal to the California Supreme Court, the conviction and judgment were affirmed (People v. Bonin, 46 Cal.3d 659 ___ P.2d ___ (1988)).

//

//

B. Factual Summary

Between December 2, 1979 and May 18, 1980, the nude bodies of four young males, ranging in age from 14 to 17, were found in various locations in Orange County. Three of the bodies were discovered in either park or campsite grounds adjacent to a highway and the fourth was discovered at a gas station.

Each victim died of ligature strangulation and the bodies bore ligature marks on the ankles and wrists and exhibited signs of beating. Also, each victim displayed indications of sexual activity prior to death.

To establish petitioner's identity, the homicides of two other young males, aged 15 and 18, were admitted as evidence through the testimony of two accomplices. These homicides occurred in February and June 1980. As with the other four victims, both individuals died of ligature strangulation, their bodies were discovered in public places and each showed signs of having been bound, beaten and sexually involved. Triskelion-shaped fibers found on each of the six bodies were linked to carpeting in petitioner's van.

Petitioner admitted to a local television reporter his responsibility for the deaths of the six victims. In 1975, petitioner, in two separate incidents, mentioned that he would kill witnesses to his sexual escapades.

At the penalty trial, petitioner's criminal history was presented. In separate incidents in 1968 and 1969, he sexually attacked four boys ranging in age from 12 to 18. These activities resulted in his commitment in 1969 to a state mental hospital as a mentally disordered sex offender. He was transferred to state prison in 1971 upon a finding that he was unamenable to treatment and dangerous.

Petitioner was again sentenced to prison in 1975 for a sexual attack on a 14-year-old boy. He was also shown to have been responsible for ten sex-related killings between August 1979 and June 1980.

Although petitioner did not testify, he presented as evidence in mitigation the fact that he was sodomized as a young boy, family problems caused by a father who drank and gambled and the onset of his violent, nonconsensual homosexual activities during his tour of duty in Vietnam. His mother and brothers corroborated his changed character following his return from Vietnam and proclaimed that he was a good person known for his good deeds.

C. Raising of Federal Question

At the penalty trial, the instructions given to guide the jury's sentencing discretion were CALJIC[2] Nos. 8.84.1 (V CT pp. 216-217, attached as Appendix A65-A66)[3] and 8.84.2 (V CT p. 249, attached as Appendix A67). CALJIC No. 8.84.1 informed the jury of the specific, statutory (Cal. Pen. Code § 190.3(a)-(k); Appendix A61-A62) aggravating and mitigating factors they could use in the sentencing process and CALJIC No. 8.84.2, in relevant part, directed the jury that "if you conclude that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of death."

In his closing argument (RT pp. 10,063-10,100, attached as Appendix A68-A105), the prosecutor emphasized that "[t]he applicable standard is 'shall' . . . [and that] [i]t doesn't give any discretion once you have found the factors either aggravating or mitigating." (RT p. 10,074; Appendix A78.) He further argued that the absence of evidence on each of the statutory mitigating factors was to be considered a circumstance in aggravation (RT pp. 10,094-10,098; Appendix A99-A103).

---

2 "CALJIC" is the acronym for California Jury Instructions - Criminal.

3 The designations "CT" and "RT" refer to the Clerk's Transcript and the Reporter's Transcript respectively.

Before the California Supreme Court, petitioner argued that the prosecutor's argument, in combination with the instructions, misled the jury as to its sentencing discretion and responsibility. With respect to the prosecutor's emphasis on the word "shall" in CALJIC No. 8.84.2, the court held that although this mandatory language was in fact misleading, the jury was not misled because the theme of the prosecutor's argument "was that the evidence called for the penalty of death." (46 Cal.3d at pp. 706, 707, fn. 7; emphasis in original.)

The court's majority further held that although the prosecutor erroneously argued that the absence of mitigating evidence renders a factor aggravating, it was presumed that the instructions properly guided the jury with respect to its sentencing discretion and responsibility (id., at p. 702). In a separate concurring opinion, Justice Broussard disagreed that the instructions created a presumption of jury rejection of the improper argument but concluded nonetheless that the error was harmless (46 Cal.3d at pp. 710-711 (conc. opn. of Broussard, J.)).

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

Certiorari should be granted because,

-- within Rule 17.1(c), the California Supreme Court has "decided an important question of federal law which has not been, but should be, settled by this Court," [namely, the effect of a sentencing jury's consideration of an invalid aggravating circumstance left open in Zant v. Stephens, 462 U.S. 862, 890, 77 L.Ed.2d 235, 258 (1983)], and

-- within Rule 17.1(c), the California Supreme Court has "decided a federal question in a way in conflict with applicable decisions of this Court" [namely, California v. Brown, 479 U.S. 538, 93 L.Ed.2d 934 (1987) and Caldwell v. Mississippi, 472 U.S. 320, 86 L.Ed.2d 231 (1985)].

ARGUMENT

THE PENALTY INSTRUCTIONS AND THE PROSECUTOR'S ARGUMENT COMBINED TO MISLEAD THE SENTENCING JURY

A. Impropriety of "Shall" Language

Petitioner's jury was instructed in the mandatory sentencing language of California Penal Code section 190.3, which told them that they "shall consider, take into account and be guided by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances referred to in this section, and shall impose a sentence of death if [they] conclude[d] that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances." This instruction, combined with the prosecutor's argument, created "the risk that the death penalty w[ould] be imposed in spite of factors which may [have] call[ed] for a less severe penalty.'" (Lockett v. Ohio, 438 U.S. 586, 605, 57 L.Ed.2d 973, 990 (1978) [plur. opn.].) Furthermore, the instruction effectively "skewed the jury towards death and misled the jury with respect to its absolute discretion to grant mercy regardless of the existence of 'aggravating' evidence." (Peek v. Kemp, 784 F.2d 1479, 1488 (11th Cir. 1986).)

Although upholding the constitutionality of Penal Code section 190.3 in People v. Brown, 40 Cal.3d 512, 709 P.2d. 440 (1985), reversed on other grounds sub nomine California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. 538, the California Supreme Court nevertheless recognized that, when delivered in an instruction, the provision's mandatory sentencing language might mislead jurors as to the scope of their sentencing discretion and responsibility (40 Cal.3d at p. 544, fn. 17).

Specifically, the court believed that a juror might reasonably understand that language to define the penalty determination as "simply a finding of facts" (40 Cal.3d at p. 540) or "a mere mechanical counting of factors on each side of the imaginary 'scale'" (id., at p. 541). It also believed that a juror might reasonably understand the language to require him to vote for death if he finds that the evidence in aggravation outweighs the evidence in mitigation -- even if he determines that death is not the appropriate penalty under all the circumstances (id., at pp. 540-544.) For this reason it directed trial courts to instruct jurors in conformity with the principles set forth therein, rather than in the bare words of the statute.[4] (Ibid.) With respect to cases -- such as the present -- in which the jurors had been instructed in the statutory language, it announced that it would examine each such appeal on its merits to determine whether the jurors may have been misled to defendant's prejudice (ibid.) The relevant inquiry is

---

4 In response to the Court's analysis of CALJIC 8.84.2 in Brown, this instruction was subsequently modified to include the following admonition:

> "The weighing of aggravating and mitigating circumstances does not mean a mere mechanical counting of factors on each side of an imaginary scale, or the arbitrary assignment of weights to any of them. You are free to assign whatever moral or sympathetic value you deem appropriate to each and all of the various factors you are permitted to consider. In weighing the various circumstances you simply determine under the relevant evidence which penalty is justified and appropriate by considering the totality of the aggravating circumstances with the totality of the mitigating circumstances. To return a judgment of death, each of you must be persuaded that the aggravating evidence (circumstances) is (are) so substantial in comparison with the mitigating circumstances that it warrants death instead of life without parole." (Emphasis added.)

Petitioner's trial was held before this modification.

"whether the jury instructions, taken as a whole, and considered in combination with the prosecutor's argument, adequately informed the jury of its [sentencing] responsibility . . . ." (California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. at p. 546 (conc. opn. of O'Connor, J.).)

As noted in the opinion, petitioner's jury was instructed in the potentially misleading language of the statute (46 Cal.3d at p. 705). Further, the court acknowledged that the prosecutor's argument, which emphasized that "[t]he applicable standard is 'shall, shall,'" was erroneous (46 Cal.3d at p. 707). Although the court concluded that the theme of the argument was that the evidence called for the death penalty (46 Cal.3d at p. 706), it is significant to note that the erroneous comment occurred during the prosecutor's explanation of the final instruction.[5]

It is plain that in his closing argument the prosecutor caused the very harm the court feared in People v. Brown. First, he misled the jury as to the nature of the weighing process. He effectively told the jurors that, just as in the guilt phase, their determination would be "simply a finding of fact. . . ." (People v. Brown, supra, 40 Cal.3d at p. 540.) He also presented the penalty-fixing process as essentially a "mere mechanical counting of 5 The prosecutor introduced his commentary by reading in its entirety, CALJIC 8.84.2 which he referred to as the "final instruction with respect to this whole area . . . ." (RT 10,073; Appendix A78.) He concluded this reading with the explanation quoted in the court's opinion.

---

> "'The applicable standard is 'shall, shall.' In other words, if you find as a group that the aggravating factors outwiegh the mitigating, then the law requires that you shall return a death penalty. If you find as a group that the mitigating factors outweigh the aggravation, then you shall return a verdict of life without parole. [¶] It doesn't give any discretion once you have found the factors either aggravating or mitigating. You have to do it one way or the other once you've found that to be true.'" (46 Cal.3d at p. 707.)

factors on each side of the imaginary 'scale' . . . ." (Id., at p. 541.)

Second, the prosecutor misled the jurors about the scope of their discretion by suggesting the responsibility for the decision on life or death did not rest entirely with the jury but was mandated by a properly-passed law. In Brown the court held that the penalty decision "is the responsibility of the jury and no one else." (Id., at p. 540 citing Caldwell v. Mississippi, supra, 472 U.S. at pp. 328-329.)

Justice O'Connor's concurrence in California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. at p. 545, reaffirmed the principle that the capital trial is aimed at "the individualized assessment of the appropriateness of the death penalty," a "moral inquiry into the culpability of the defendant" under all the circumstances. The core determination, made only with the "heightened reliability demanded by the Eighth Amendment," is "whether the death penalty is appropriate in a particular case." (Sumner v. Shuman, 483 U.S. ____, 97 L.Ed.2d 56, 63 (1987.).)

By directing the jury through both instructions and argument that death shall be imposed if aggravating circumstances outweigh those in mitigation, a misunderstanding was created whereby the proper inquiry into appropriateness was replaced with a presumptive formula. In Jackson v. Dugger, 837 F.2d 1469 (11th Cir. 1988), the court condemned the "presumption" aspect of an instruction directing a jury that death is proper sentence unless mitigating circumstances "override" aggravating circumstances: "such a presumption, if employed at the level of the sentencer, vitiates the individualized sentencing determination required by the Eighth Amendment." (Id., at p. 1473.) The misleading instructions and argument here skewed the decision-making process away from the individualized assessment demanded by the Eighth Amendment.

B. Absence of Mitigation As Aggravation

At petitioner's penalty trial, the prosecutor went through each of the factors enumerated in subdivisions (a) through (k) of California Penal Code section 190.3 and as to each of the mitigating and neutral factors specified in subdivisions (d) through (j) (Appendix A62), he argued that the absence of mitigating evidence rendered them aggravating (RT 10,094-10,098; Appendix A99-A103; 46 Cal.3d at pp. 700-701).

The California Supreme Court in People v. Davenport, 41 Cal.3d 247, 710 P.2d 861 (1985), while reversing a death judgment on other grounds, condemned as improper the prosecutor's argument that the absence of mitigating evidence on a statutory factor in subdivisions (a) through (k) of California Penal Code section 190.3 transformed it into an aggravating circumstance (41 Cal.3d at pp. 288-290). In concluding that this form of argument was "likely to confuse the jury as to the meaning of 'aggravation' and 'mitigation' under the statute," the court noted that (1) in a given case the irrelevant factors should be disregarded and (2) because aggravation contemplates circumstances increasing guilt, the enormity or the injurious consequences of the offense, and mitigation a reduction in the degree of moral culpability, "the absence of mitigation would not automatically render the crime more offensive than any other murder of the same general character." (Id., at pp. 289-290.)

As Justice Broussard explained in his concurring opinion in Bonin, "[t]he vice of Davenport error is that it tells the jury that factors are applicable when as a matter of law they are not and that factors are aggravating when as a matter of law they are neutral or mitigating. Nothing in the judge's instructions would dispel such erroneous impressions." (46 Cal.3d at p. 710.)

This Court in Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U.S. 153, 49 L.Ed.2d 859 (1976), observed that the problem inherent in capital sentencing by lay jurors with "little, if any, previous experience in sentencing" would be "alleviated if the jury [were] given guidance regarding the factors about the crime and the defendant that the State, representing organized society, deems particularly relevant to the sentencing decision." (428 U.S. at p. 192.) Characterizing neutral or mitigating statutory factors as aggravating results in the very problem Gregg admonished against.

The resolution of this problem was left open in Zant v. Stephens, supra, 462 U.S. 862. There, this Court upheld a death judgment where a jury relied upon both valid and invalid aggravating circumstances[6] which, under the Georgia statutory scheme, served to narrow the class of death-eligible offenders. The judgment was deemed valid because, aside from this narrowing function, the death penalty legislation also provided for both "individualized determination and appellate review at the selection stage," i.e., the stage determining the imposition of the sentence (id., at pp. 879, 891). Because of these protections, "[t]he absence of legislative or court-imposed standards to govern the jury in weighing the significance of either or both of [the] aggravating circumstances [did] not render the Georgia sentencing statute invalid . . . ." (Id., at p. 880.)

Expressly left open, however, was an "opinion concerning the possible significance of a holding that a particular aggravating circumstance is 'invalid' under a statutory scheme in which the judge or jury is specifically instructed to weigh statutory aggravating and mitigating circumstances in exercising its discretion whether to impose the death penalty." (Id., at p. 890.) As previously indicated, California is such a jurisdiction (ante, p. 6).

---

6 The Georgia Supreme Court held the invalid circumstance to be unconstitutionally vague (462 U.S. at p. 867, fn. 5).

In this regard, it is significant to note the observation in Zant that had the 'aggravating' label in the Georgia statute attached to an invalid factor which suggested a lesser penalty, due process considerations would have required that the death judgment be set aside (462 U.S. at p. 885). This commentary is also noteworthy because it was in reponse to the accused's contention that the judgment warranted reversal because the jury had been instructed to consider the invalid aggravating circumstance (ibid.)

Although the penalty jury here was urged by the prosecutor to consider the improper aggravating circumstances, the remedial consequences are no less compelling since proper instructions could not cure the erroneous impressions left upon the jury (People v. Bonin, supra, 46 Cal.3d at p. 710 (conc. opn. of Broussard, J.)).

C. CONCLUSION

Where the jury might have been misled as to the fundamental nature of the penalty decision and the proper consideration of all mitigating evidence, Mills v. Maryland, 486 U.S. ____, 100 L.Ed.2d 384, provides the required inquiry:

> "The critical question, then is whether the [improper] interpretation of the sentencing process is one a reasonable jury could have drawn from the instructions given by the trial judge . . . ." (100 L.Ed.2d at p. 394; emphasis added.)

The standard for reversal is:

> "Unless we can rule out the substantial possibility that the jury may have rested its verdict on the 'improper' ground, we must remand for resentencing." (Id., at pp. 395-396.)

instructed to weigh statutory aggravating and mitigating circumstances in exercising its discretion whether to impose the death penalty." (Id., at p. 890.) As previously indicated, California is such a jurisdiction (ante, p. 6).

In this regard, it is significant to note the observation in Zant that had the 'aggravating' label in the Georgia statute attached to an invalid factor which suggested a lesser penalty, due process considerations would have required that the death judgment be set aside (462 U.S. at p. 885). This commentary is also noteworthy because it was in reponse to the accused's contention that the judgment warranted reversal because the jury had been instructed to consider the invalid aggravating circumstance (ibid.)

Although the penalty jury here was urged by the prosecutor to consider the improper aggravating circumstances, the remedial consequences are no less compelling since proper instructions could not cure the erroneous impressions left upon the jury (People v. Bonin, supra, 46 Cal.3d at p. 710 (conc. opn. of Broussard, J.)).

C. CONCLUSION

Where the jury might have been misled as to the fundamental nature of the penalty decision and the proper consideration of all mitigating evidence, Mills v. Maryland, 486 U.S. ____, 100 L.Ed.2d 384 (1988), provides the required inquiry:

> "The critical question, then is whether the [improper] interpretation of the sentencing process is one a reasonable jury could have drawn from the instructions given by the trial judge . . . ."
> (100 L.Ed.2d at p. 394; emphasis added.)

The standard for reversal is:

> "Unless we can rule out the substantial possibility that the jury may have rested its verdict on the 'improper' ground, we must remand for resentencing." (Id., at pp. 395-396.)

For the reasons expressed above, the petition for writ of certiorari should be granted.

Dated this 13th day January 1989, at Los Angeles, California.

Respectfully submitted,

HARVEY R. ZALL
State Public Defender

Adrian K. Panton

ADRIAN K. PANTON
Supervising Deputy
State Public Defender

Attorneys for Petitioner

NO. 88 - 88-6341

ORIGINAL

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1988

Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED
JAN 14 1989
JOSEPH F. SPANIOL, JR.
CLERK

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN,

Petitioner,

v.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

Respondent.

MOTION FOR LEAVE TO PROCEED IN PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI IN FORMA PAUPERIS

The petitioner, WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, asks leave to file the attached Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the Supreme Court of the State of California, without prepayment of costs and to proceed in forma pauperis pursuant to rule 46 of the United States Supreme Court Rules and 28 USC 1915(a).

Petitioner was indigent in the California Supreme Court below and the California State Public Defender was appointed as counsel. He was committed to the California Department of Corrections and is presently awaiting execution of a death sentence.

Petitioner's affidavit in support of this motion is attached hereto.

Respectfully submitted,

HARVEY R. ZALL
State Public Defender

By Adrian K. Panton
ADRIAN K. PANTON
Deputy State Public Defender

Member of the Supreme Court of the United States

Attorneys for Petitioner

NO. 88 - 88-6341

ORIGINAL

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1988

Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED
JAN 14 1989
JOSEPH F. SPANIOL, JR.
CLERK

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN,

Petitioner,

v.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

Respondent.

AFFIDAVIT IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO PROCEED ON WRIT OF CERTIORARI IN FORMA PAUPERIS

I, WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, first being duly sworn, depose and say that I am the petitioner in the above-entitled case; that in support of my motion to proceed on writ of certiorari without being required to prepay fees, costs or give security therefor, I state that because of my poverty I am unable to pay the costs of said proceeding or to give security therefor, and that I believe I am entitled to redress.

I am presently a state prisoner incarcerated at the California Department of Corrections facility at San Quentin State Prison in Tamal, California, under a sentence of death.

I further swear that the responses which I have made to the questions and instructions below relating to my ability to pay the cost of these proceedings are true.

1. Are you presently employed? No.

2. Have you received within the past twelve months any income from a business, profession or other form of self-employment, or in the form of rent payments, interest, dividends, or other sources? No. If yes, state amount ($_____).

3. Do you own any cash or checking or savings account? No. If yes, state appropriate current balance ($_____).

4. Do you own any real estate, stocks, bonds, notes, automobiles, or other valuable property (excluding ordinary household furnishings and clothing)? No. If yes, describe (_____)

5. List the persons who are dependent upon you for support and state your relationship to those persons. If none, so indicate (_____).

I understand that a false statement or answer to any questions in this affidavit will subject me to penalties for perjury.

OFFICIAL SEAL
ARNOLD W. GERRITSEN
NOTARY PUBLIC — CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF MARIN

William George Bonin
WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN

Duly witnessed and sworn to before me, a Notary Public, this ninth day of January, 1989.

NOTARY PUBLIC (or other notary notation)

Let the applicant proceed without prepayment of costs or fees or the necessity of giving security therefor.

JUSTICE

[No. S004565, Crim. No. 23286. Aug. 29, 1988.]

THE PEOPLE, Plaintiff and Respondent, v.
WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, Defendant and Appellant.

SUMMARY

Following a jury trial in a capital case, defendant was convicted of the first degree murders of four victims. As to each murder count, he was found to have been convicted in the same proceeding of more than one offense of murder within the meaning of the multiple-murder special circumstance (Pen. Code, § 190.2, subd. (a)(3)). For each of the four murders defendant received the penalty of death. The prosecution arose out of the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies had been found along local freeways. Before defendant's trial in this proceeding, he had been tried by a jury in a neighboring county, and was convicted of the first degree murder and robbery of 10 other victims; for each murder conviction in that other county he received the penalty of death. (Superior Court of Orange County, No. C-47500, Kenneth E. Lee, Judge.)

The Supreme Court affirmed. As to the guilt phase, it held the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for change of venue, despite extensive news coverage concerning defendant and the killings. It also held the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for additional peremptory challenges during jury selection, despite extensive pretrial publicity. Also, the prosecutor's misconduct, if any, could not be deemed prejudicial, even though he elicited testimony from a television reporter to the effect that defendant had admitted numerous other killings in addition to the murders for which defendant was on trial and which were properly introduced to establish identity. However, the court held it was error for the prosecution to allege four multiple-murder special circumstances instead of one; thus, three of the four multiple-murder special circumstance findings were vacated.

As to the penalty phase, it held the trial court erred in instructing the jurors to consider four multiple-murder special-circumstance findings instead of one; however, such error was not prejudicial. It also held the trial court erred under Pen. Code, § 1095 (number of counsel who may argue the cause), in refusing to allow both members of the defense team to present closing argument, even though the prosecutor declined rebuttal after one member of the defense team gave a full and unrestricted closing argument. However, such error did not amount to a constitutional violation as a denial of or an infringement on defendant's right to the assistance of counsel; also, such error was harmless. It further held that the trial court did not err when it failed to instruct the jurors on its own motion that they could consider sympathy in choosing the appropriate penalty. The court also held the imposition of the penalty of death on defendant did not violate U.S. Const., 8th Amend. (prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment), since the jury's guilt phase verdicts implied a finding that defendant actually killed, and intended to kill, the victims. (Opinion by Mosk, J., with Lucas, C. J., Panelli, Eagleson and Kaufman, JJ., concurring. Separate concurring opinion by Broussard, J., with Arguelles, J., concurring.)

A1

HEADNOTES

Classified to California Digest of Official Reports, 3d Series

(1a, 1b) Venue § 31—Criminal Cases—Change of Venue—Grounds—Pretrial Publicity—Extensive News Coverage—Multiple Killings.—In a capital case for the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies were found along local freeways, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for change of venue (Pen. Code, § 1033), despite extensive news coverage concerning defendant and the killings. Defendant failed to carry his burden of proving that there was a reasonable likelihood that jurors drawn from the county would have formed such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they could not make the determinations required of them with impartiality. Defendant may have shown the possibility of an unfair trial in the county, but this was insufficient. The size of the community was very large; defendant had no particular status in the county; the victims were similarly without status in the community as a whole; and pretrial publicity, although extensive before defendant's sentence in a related action, had been minimal thereafter.

(2) Venue § 33—Criminal Cases—Change of Venue—Grounds—Factors Considered.—In passing on a motion for change of venue based on pretrial publicity, the trial court looks to many factors, including the nature and gravity of the offense, the size of the community, the status of the defendant, the popularity and prominence of the victim, and the nature and extent of the publicity.

A2

(3) Venue § 31—Criminal Cases—Grounds—Pretrial Publicity—Reasonable Likelihood.—The ultimate question that the trial court must consider, on a motion for change of venue based on pretrial publicity, is whether on the particular facts of the individual case there is a reasonable likelihood that the jurors who will be, or have been, chosen for the defendant's trial have formed such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they cannot make the determinations required of them with impartiality. The phrase "reasonable likelihood" means something less than "more probable than not." But it must also mean something more than merely "possible." As the moving party, the criminal defendant seeking change of venue bears the burden of proof.

[See Cal.Jur.3d (Rev), Criminal Law, § 2450; Am.Jur.2d, Criminal Law, § 378.]

(4) Venue § 35—Criminal Cases—Mandamus and Appeal—Standard of Review.—In considering a contention on appeal that the trial court erred in denying a criminal defendant's motion for change of venue, the appellate court reviews the trial court's resolution of factual questions under the deferential substantial-evidence standard. The appellate court reviews the trial court's resolution of legal questions under the nondeferential de novo standard. The appellate court generally reviews the trial court's resolution of mixed questions of law and fact—that is, the application of law to fact—under the de novo standard as well. The ultimate question of the reasonable likelihood of a fair and impartial trial is plainly such a mixed question.

(5) Venue § 31—Criminal Cases—Change of Venue—Grounds—Pretrial Publicity—Extensive News Coverage—Renewal of Motion on Completion of Jury Selection.—In a capital case for the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies were found along local freeways, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for change of venue (Pen. Code, § 1033), as renewed on completion of jury selection, despite extensive news coverage concerning defendant and the killings. Defendant failed to carry his burden of proof that there was a reasonable likelihood that any of the 12 jurors and the 4 alternates had formed such a fixed opinion as a result of pretrial publicity that any such juror could not make the determinations required with impartiality. Although 10 of the 12 jurors and 3 of the 4 alternates had in fact been exposed to related news coverage, defendant established, at most, the possibility of an unfair trial; such showing was insufficient. Also, most of the jurors had been exposed to news coverage indirectly and to a minimal degree.

A3

(6) Jury § 47—Challenges and Corrections—Peremptory—Motion for Additional Challenges.—In a capital case for the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies were found along local freeways, the trial court did not err in denying defendant's motion for additional peremptory challenges, despite extensive pretrial publicity. Defendant made his motion before he had exhausted the challenges allotted to the defense; although the court denied the motion without prejudice to renew it later in the process of jury selection, defendant never renewed the motion. Thus, the motion was premature and properly denied as such. Also, defendant failed to show that in the absence of such additional challenges he was reasonably likely to receive an unfair trial before a partial jury.

(7a, 7b) Criminal Law § 448—Argument and Conduct of Prosecutor—Examination of Witnesses—Eliciting Prejudicial Testimony—Defendant's Admission of Other Killings.—In a capital case for the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies were found along local freeways, the prosecutor's misconduct, if any, could not be deemed prejudicial, even though he had elicited testimony from a television reporter that defendant had admitted numerous other killings in addition to the murders for which defendant was on trial and which were introduced to establish identity. Despite a bench ruling that declared testimony of the additional murders to be inadmissible, the prosecutor intentionally violated that ruling, although the record supported an inference that he may have done so unintentionally. Nevertheless, such conduct constituted an isolated instance in a lengthy and otherwise well-conducted trial; thus, it could not have rendered the proceeding fundamentally unfair. Also, the evidence of guilt was overwhelming.

(8) Criminal Law § 559—Appellate Review—Presenting and Reserving Objections—Argument and Conduct of Prosecutor—Request for Curative Admonition.—To preserve a claim of prosecutorial misconduct before a reviewing court, the defendant must generally assign the conduct in question as error at trial and request the court to instruct the jury to disregard its effect. Simply to object or make an assignment of misconduct without seeking a curative admonition is generally not enough. The trial court should be given an opportunity to correct the abuse and thus, if possible, prevent by suitable instructions the harmful effect upon the minds of the jury. Nevertheless, in a capital case, defense counsel achieved substantial compliance with such requirements by making her motions for a mistrial and to strike the challenged portion of a witness' testimony, since counsel effectively gave the trial court more than ample opportunity to correct the prosecutor's abuse regarding that testimony.

A4

(9) Criminal Law § 648—Argument and Conduct of Counsel—Prosecutor—Examination of Witnesses—Inadmissible Testimony.—It is, of course, misconduct for a prosecutor to elicit inadmissible testimony.

(10a, 10b) Homicide § 33—Charging Offense—Special Circumstances—Multiple Murder.—In a capital case for the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies were found along local freeways, it was error for the prosecution to allege four multiple-murder special circumstances instead of one. The plain words of Pen. Code, § 190.2, subd. (a)(3) ("The defendant has in this proceeding been convicted of more than one offense of murder"), suggest that no matter how many murder charges are tried together, they constitute a single multiple-murder special circumstance. Thus, three of the four multiple-murder special-circumstance findings were subject to being vacated. However, such error did not amount to prejudice at the penalty phase, since it could not be concluded that the jurors would reasonably have given the invalid special-circumstance findings any significant independent weight.

(11) Criminal Law § 77—Rights of Accused—Aid of Counsel—Refusal to Allow Closing Argument—Two Members of Defense Team.—In a capital case, the trial court erred under Pen. Code, § 1095 (number of counsel who may argue the cause), in refusing to allow both members of the defense team to present closing argument at the penalty phase, even though the prosecutor declined rebuttal after one member of the defense team gave a full and unrestricted closing argument. The statute plainly gives each side in a capital case the right to present argument by two counsel. Also, it does not require alternation of arguments or allow two counsel on one side to argue only if the other side presents two arguments.

(12a-12c) Criminal Law § 649—Appellate Review—Harmless Error—Trial—Penalty Phase—Refusal to Allow Closing Argument by Both Members of Defense Team.—In a capital case, the trial court's error under Pen. Code, § 1095 (number of counsel who may argue the cause), in refusing to allow both members of the defense team to present closing argument at the penalty phase, did not amount to a constitutional violation as a denial of or an infringement on the right to the assistance of counsel. One defense counsel presented a full and unrestricted argument on behalf of defendant, and the federal and state Constitutions impliedly grant a criminal defendant the right to have defense counsel present closing argument, not each member of the defense team. Also, the defense's opportunity to participate was not significantly limited, and the counsel who had argued apparently considered his argument to be sufficient and further argument by the other counsel to be dispensable. Moreover, the error was harmless under any standard of review. (Disapproving In Re William F. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 249 [113 Cal.Rptr. 170, 520 P.2d 986], to the extent it implies that error adversely affecting defense counsel's closing argument necessarily infringes on the defendant's constitutional right to the assistance of counsel.)

A5

(13a, 13b) Criminal Law § 77—Rights of Accused—Aid of Counsel—Right to Have Counsel Present Closing Argument.—A criminal defendant has a constitutional right to assistance of counsel. That right ensures to the defense in a criminal trial the opportunity to participate fully and fairly in the adversary fact-finding process. The constitutional right to the assistance of counsel encompasses the right to have counsel present closing argument. However, the right is not infringed when the opportunity of the defense to participate fully and fairly in the adversary fact-finding process is not significantly limited.

(14) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Explanation to Jury—Meaning of Life Imprisonment Without Possibility of Parole.—The trial court in a capital case was not required to instruct the jury in the penalty phase, on its own motion, that the phrase of the pattern instruction, "confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole," actually meant what its words declared—that is, confinement for life without possibility of parole. Such term was used in the common and nontechnical sense that the plain meaning of its words convey. When a term is commonly understood by those familiar with the English language and is not used in a technical sense peculiar to the law, the court is not required to give an instruction as to its meaning in the absence of a request.

(15) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Inapplicable Sentencing Factors.—In a capital case, the trial court did not err at the penalty phase by instructing on all the statutory sentencing factors (Pen. Code, § 190.3), and by failing to delete such factors as were inapplicable on the facts. By providing that the trier of fact shall take into account any of the specified factors if relevant, the statute (1) directs the trier of fact to the criteria that the legislative body has determined to be significant in choosing between life and death and (2), requires the trier of fact to consider those criteria, insofar as they are actually applicable, in making that choice. Under such a reading only those factors that are applicable on the evidence adduced at trial are to be taken into account in the penalty determination in the individual case. The statutory provision contemplates that not all factors will be relevant in all cases, and further that a factor which is not relevant to the evidence in a particular case should be disregarded.

A6

(16) Criminal Law § 610—Appellate Review—Scope—Presumptions and Inferences—Trial—Jurors.—A reviewing court presumes that jurors follow the trial court's instructions.

(17) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Absence of Evidence in Mitigation as Factor in Aggravation—Failure to Instruct on Court's Own Motion.—In a capital case, the trial court did not err at the penalty phase in failing to instruct, on its own motion, that the absence of evidence in mitigation did not establish a factor in aggravation. Pen. Code, § 190.3 (determination of penalty), necessarily bars the trier of fact from considering an inapplicable factor as aggravating. Also, the trial court properly directed the jurors to consider the sentencing factors only if applicable. When, as here, the instruction under challenge is adequate, the trial court is under no obligation to amplify or explain in the absence of a request.

(18a, 18b) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Absence of Evidence in Mitigation as Factor in Aggravation—Prosecutorial Misconduct.—In a capital case, the prosecutor did not commit misconduct at the penalty phase, even though he misstated the law by arguing that the absence of mitigating factors under Pen. Code, § 190.3 (determination of penalty), established a factor in aggravation. Defendant made no objection, and thus the point was not preserved for review on appeal. Also, evidence of bad faith was altogether lacking. Moreover, even if such comments amounted to misconduct, they were not prejudicial. The court instructed the jurors to consider the sentencing factors if applicable; also, the factors in aggravation were overwhelming and the factors in mitigation were virtually nonexistent.

(19) Criminal Law § 451—Prosecutor—Closing Argument—Bad Faith.—A prosecutor is not guilty of misconduct with regard to his argument of the law to the jury, if he is wrong as to the law. Misconduct occurs only where an erroneous proposition of law was argued in bad faith.

(20a, 20b) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Defendant's Prior Criminal Activity.—In a capital case for the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies were found along local freeways, the trial court did not err at the penalty phase in instructing on the sentencing factor in Pen. Code, § 190.3, subd. (b), regarding any prior criminal activity involving force or violence. Although the statute must be construed to limit the scope of that factor to crimes other than those of which the defendant was convicted in the capital proceeding, such instruction did not invite the jury to "double count" the circumstances of the capital offense under § 190.3, subd. (b) and Pen. Code, § 190.3, subd. (a) (the circumstances of the crimes of which the defendant was convicted in the present proceeding and the existence of any special circumstances found to be true). A reasonable jury would not double count such factors, in the absence of misleading argument by the prosecutor inviting them to do so, and there was no such misleading argument here. Also, the court made it plain that factor (b) was limited to crimes other than those of which defendant was convicted in the subject proceeding.

A 7

(21) Criminal Law § 676—Appellate Review—Harmless and Reversible Error—Instructions.—In determining the meaning conveyed by an instruction, a reviewing court gives the charge the meaning that a reasonable juror would give. To determine how a reasonable juror could interpret an instruction, a reviewing court must focus initially on the specific language challenged. If the specific instruction fails muster, the court then reviews the instructions as a whole to see if the entire charge delivered a correct interpretation of the law.

(22) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Age as Aggravating Factor.—Mere chronological age should not of itself be deemed an aggravating factor at the penalty phase of a capital case. By the same token, mere chronological age of itself should not be deemed a mitigating factor. Age alone is plainly a factor over which one can exercise no control and as such is not relevant to the issue of penalty. The word "age" in statutory sentencing factor Pen. Code, § 190.3, subd. (i) (the age of the defendant at the time of the crime), is used as a metonym for any age-related matter suggested by the evidence or by common experience or morality that might reasonably inform the choice of penalty.

(23) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Jurors' Responsibility to Determine Penalty—Mandatory Sentencing Language.—In a capital case, the trial court's instruction at the penalty phase, incorporating the mandatory sentencing language of Pen. Code, § 190.3 (jury shall impose sentence of death if it finds that aggravating circumstances outweigh mitigating circumstances), did not mislead the jurors as to the scope of their sentencing responsibility and discretion to determine the appropriate penalty. Also, the prosecution's closing argument was not misleading, since the theme was that the evidence called for the penalty of death. Even though the prosecutor erroneously argued that the applicable standard was "shall" and that the jury lacked discretion, such comment was short and isolated and hence was swallowed up in the theme that the evidence called for the penalty of death.

A 8

(24) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Instructions on Sympathy.—In a capital case, the trial court did not err at the penalty phase in failing to instruct on its own motion that the jurors could consider sympathy in choosing the appropriate penalty and that they should not be guided by the antisympathy instruction of a pattern jury instruction that had been given at the guilt phase. The jurors were adequately instructed regarding sympathy when the court told them that they could consider any factor offered by defendant as a circumstance in mitigation; in the absence of a request, the court was not required to amplify or explain such instruction. Also, the guilt phase antisympathy instruction could not be deemed to have been carried over to the penalty phase, since the court instructed the jurors that they could consider, as a sentencing factor under Pen. Code, § 190.3, subd. (k), any factor offered by defendant as a circumstance in mitigation. In context, the court would have been understood to imply that the jurors could exercise sympathy if they believed the facts allowed them to do so.

(25) Homicide § 101—Punishment—Death Penalty—Intent to Kill.—In a capital case for the multiple killings of young men and boys whose nude bodies were found along local freeways, the jury's guilt phase verdicts implied a finding that defendant actually killed, and intended to kill, the victims. Also, substantial evidence supported this finding. Thus, the imposition of the death penalty on defendant did not violate U.S. Const., 8th Amend. (prohibition against cruel and unusual punishment).

COUNSEL

Frank O. Bell, Jr., State Public Defender, under appointment by the Supreme Court, Monica Knox, Chief Assistant State Public Defender, and Adrian K. Panton, Deputy State Public Defender, for Defendant and Appellant.

John K. Van de Kamp, Attorney General, Steve White, Chief Assistant Attorney General, Jay M. Bloom, John W. Carney and Steven H. Zeigen, Deputy Attorneys General, for Plaintiff and Respondent.

A9

OPINION

MOSK, J.—This is an automatic appeal from a judgment of death (Penal Code § 1239 subd. (b)) imposed under the 1978 death penalty law (id., § 190.1 et seq.).

After a jury trial defendant was convicted of the first degree murder (Pen. Code, § 187) and robbery (id., § 211) of Dennis Frank Fox, Glenn Barker, Russell Rugh, and Lawrence Sharp. As to each murder count, he was found to have been convicted in the same proceeding of more than one offense of murder within the meaning of the multiple-murder special circumstance of Penal Code section 190.2, subdivision (a)(3). For each of the four murders he received the penalty of death.

As we shall explain, we conclude that the judgment must be affirmed.

I. THE FACTS

As a result of his activities in Southern California in the years 1979 and 1980, defendant—who was then in his early 30's—was dubbed the "Freeway Killer" and his murders the "freeway killings." Before he was tried in this Orange County proceeding, he was tried by a jury in Los Angeles County action No. A360975. There he was convicted of the first degree murder and robbery of Marcus Grabs, Donald Hyden, David Murillo, Charles Miranda, James Macabe, Ronald Gatlin, Harry Todd Turner, Steven Wood, Darin Lee Kendrick, and Steven Wells; as to each murder count, special circumstance allegations of multiple murder and felony murder-robbery (Pen. Code, § 190.2, subd. (a)(17)(i)) were found true; and for each murder he received the penalty of death.

The tale that is told by the evidence introduced at the guilt phase of the lengthy trial of this action is as follows.

On December 2, 1979, the nude body of 17-year-old Dennis Frank Fox was found on the side of the Ortega Highway in Casper's Regional Park in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Fox had been killed by ligature strangulation about November 30. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

On March 22, 1980, the nude body of 15-year-old Russell Rugh was found off the Ortega Highway in the San Juan Campgrounds in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Rugh had been killed by ligature strangulation on March 21 or 22. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

A10

On the same day and in the same place that Rugh's body was discovered, the nude body of 14-year-old Glenn Barker was found; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Like Rugh, Barker had been killed by ligature strangulation on March 21 or 22. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

On May 18, 1980, the nude body of 17-year-old Lawrence Sharp was found at a gasoline station on the corner of Westminster Boulevard and Bolsa Chica in Westminster in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Sharp had been killed by ligature strangulation on May 17 or 18. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists, as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the head hair.

In order to establish that it was defendant who had perpetrated the killings, the prosecution presented expert testimony that the triskelion-shaped fibers discovered on the body of each of the victims were consistent with carpeting in a van owned by defendant, and that the van was stained in several places with human blood.

To establish identity, the prosecution also introduced "other crimes" evidence relating to the killing of Charles Miranda and Steven Wells.[1]

On February 3, 1980, the nude body of 15-year-old Charles Miranda was found in an alley in downtown Los Angeles; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Miranda had been killed by ligature strangulation in the late night of February 2 or in the early morning of February 3. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as on the neck,

[1]The prosecution had moved to introduce "other crimes" evidence relating to James Mackie and Darin Lee Kendrick as well as Miranda and Wells. The court granted the motion as to the latter two victims but denied it as to the former.

revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore the same kind of triskelion-shaped fiber in the pubic area that the bodies of Fox, Rugh, Barker, and Sharp bore.

Gregory Miley, a sexual partner of defendant and about 19 years old at the time relevant here, testified that it was defendant who was responsible for the death of Miranda. Specifically, he said that he was with defendant as defendant was driving his van on the night of February 2, 1980, defendant picked up Miranda in Hollywood and consensually sodomized him in the back of the van; he then tied him up; afterwards, he said to Miley, "Kid's going to die. Kid's going to—this kid's going to die," Miley responded, "Why don't you just let the kid go?," and defendant replied, "No, because he'll know us and he'll know the van"; defendant then proceeded to strangle Miranda with Miley's help, dumped his body in an alley in downtown Los Angeles, and disposed of his clothing and other property in various locations.

On June 3, 1980, the nude body of 18-year-old Steven Wells was found behind a gasoline station in Huntington Beach; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Wells had been killed by ligature strangulation on June 2. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore the same kind of triskelion-shaped fiber that the bodies of Fox, Rugh, Barker, Sharp, and Miranda bore.

James Munro, a sexual partner of defendant and about 19 years old at the time relevant here, testified that it was defendant who was responsible for the death of Wells. Specifically, he said that he was with defendant as defendant was driving his van on June 2, 1980; defendant picked up Wells as he was hitchhiking and participated in mutual consensual oral copulation with him in the back of the van; the trio eventually arrived at defendant's home in Downey; there, defendant and Wells continued their sexual activity; soon defendant persuaded Wells to allow himself to be tied up; defendant took money and items of identification from Wells's wallet; he then proceeded with Munro's help to strangle Wells and to dump his body behind a gasoline station in Huntington Beach; defendant told Munro that he was the "Freeway Killer," and that Miley was involved with him in the killings.

To establish identity, the prosecution also introduced evidence of extrajudicial admissions by defendant linking him to the charged crimes. Among other witnesses it called one David Lopez, a reporter for Los Angeles television station KNXT. Lopez testified that defendant had admitted that it was he who killed Fox, Rugh, Barker, and Sharp, and also Miranda and Wells. Other witnesses gave testimony to the effect that defendant had said he would not leave witnesses to his criminal activity alive.

Through the examination of its own witnesses and the cross-examination of the prosecution's, the defense attempted to show that the evidence could not support a determination beyond a reasonable doubt that it was defendant who killed Fox, Rugh, Barker, and Sharp or even Miranda and Wells. Specifically, in its case-in-chief it attacked Munro's credibility and tried to undermine the persuasiveness of the prosecution's expert testimony concerning the triskelion-shaped fibers found on the victims' bodies.

At the penalty phase the prosecution presented evidence in aggravation. Some of that evidence related to prior adjudicated felonies and told the following tale. Defendant committed sexual attacks in late 1968 and early 1969 against 12-year-old Lawrence B., 14-year-old William J., 17-year-old John T., and 18-year-old Jesus M. As a result of his activities, in the spring of 1969 he was convicted of molesting and forcibly orally copulating Lawrence B., kidnapping and sodomizing William J., sodomizing John T., and forcibly orally copulating Jesus M., and was committed to Atascadero State Hospital as a mentally disordered sex offender amenable to treatment. In 1971 he was returned to court, declared unamenable to treatment, and committed to prison. Subsequent to his release, defendant committed a sexual attack on 14-year-old David M. in September 1975. Later that year he was convicted of forcibly orally copulating the boy and was sentenced to prison.

The prosecution also introduced evidence relating to the Los Angeles killings. Specifically, it attempted to prove that in Southern California between August 1979 and June 1980 defendant sexually attacked and killed Marcus Grabs, Donald Hyden, David Murillo, Charles Miranda, James Macabe, Ronald Gatlin, Harry Todd Turner, Steven Wood, Darin Lee Kendrick, and Steven Wells, all of whom were children or youths. It also attempted to show that Kendrick was killed in the performance of a ritual of the black art.

In mitigation the defense presented evidence that told the following tale. Although his father caused the family serious problems as a result of drinking and gambling, defendant was a good and helpful child. At a young age he was sodomized by older men. He joined the armed forces and served in Vietnam. There he earned a medal for gallantry for saving a soldier at the risk of his own life. There also he began to engage in violent nonconsensual homosexual activity. He returned from Vietnam a changed man. His downward course into sexual criminality continued, culminating in murder.

A13

Apart from his difficulties with regard to sex, however, he was a good and helpful man.

II. GUILT ISSUES

Defendant makes three claims bearing on the issue of guilt. As we shall explain, none establishes reversible error.

A. Denial of Motion for Change of Venue

(1a) Defendant contends that the court erred when it denied a motion he made seeking a change of venue because of pretrial publicity.

Penal Code section 1033 (hereinafter section 1033) provides in relevant part as follows. "In a criminal action pending in the superior court, the court shall order a change of venue: [¶] (a) On motion of the defendant, to another county when it appears that there is a reasonable likelihood that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county." The provision is in essence a codification of the "standard of reasonableness" that we laid down in Maine v. Superior Court (1968) 68 Cal.2d 375 [66 Cal.Rptr. 724, 438 P.2d 372], to guide trial courts in ruling on motions for change of venue and appellate courts in reviewing such rulings. (Id. at p. 383.) The Maine standard, in turn, is ultimately an implementation of Sixth and Fourteenth Amendment safeguards relating to the right of a criminal defendant to receive a fair trial before an impartial trier of fact. (See id. at pp. 381-384.)

Under section 1033 a criminal defendant may make a motion for change of venue based on pretrial publicity and its effect on the community from which the jurors for his trial are drawn. (E.g., People v. Anderson (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1104, 1130 [240 Cal.Rptr. 585, 742 P.2d 1306]; People v. Harris (1981) 28 Cal.3d 935, 948 [171 Cal.Rptr. 679, 623 P.2d 240] (plur. opn.).)

(2) In passing on such a motion, the trial court looks to the following factors, among others: the nature and gravity of the offense, the size of the community, the status of the defendant, the popularity and prominence of the victim, and of course the nature and extent of the publicity. (See, e.g., People v. Anderson, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 1130 [stating the factors as guides for an appellate court's review of a change-of-venue ruling]; People v. Harris, supra, 28 Cal.3d at p. 948 [same].)

(3) The ultimate question that the trial court must resolve, however, is whether on the peculiar facts of the individual case (see Maine v. Superior Court, supra, 68 Cal.2d at p. 388) there is a reasonable likelihood that the jurors who will be, or have been, chosen for the defendant's trial have formed such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they cannot make the determinations required of them with impartiality. (Cf. Patton v. Yount (1984) 467 U.S. 1025, 1035 [81 L.Ed.2d 847, 856, 104 S.Ct. 2885] [holding that for the resolution of a claim that pretrial publicity so infected a criminal trial as to deny the defendant his Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury, "The relevant question is . . . whether the jurors . . . had such fixed opinions that they could not judge impartially the guilt of the defendant"].)

A14

The phrase "reasonable likelihood," we have explained, means something less than "more probable than not." (E.g., Martinez v. Superior Court (1981) 29 Cal.3d 574, 578 [174 Cal.Rptr. 701, 629 P.2d 502].) But in view of the plain meaning of its words it must also mean something more than merely "possible."

Finally, as the moving party the criminal defendant seeking change of venue bears the burden of proof. (See People v. Boyce (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 850, 856-859 [180 Cal.Rptr. 573]; People v. Whalen (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 710, 716 [109 Cal.Rptr. 282].)

The facts relevant to defendant's claim are as follows. In June 1980 defendant was arrested in connection with the "freeway killings." He was subsequently charged in Los Angeles County and Orange County. In October 1981 trial in the Los Angeles action commenced with jury selection. In the course of trial, evidence of the four Orange County murders was introduced to establish identity. In January 1982 the jury found defendant guilty of 10 counts of robbery and 10 counts of first degree murder with special circumstances as to each count, and fixed the punishment for each murder at death. In March 1982 the court entered judgment in accordance with the jury's verdicts. The news coverage relating to defendant and to the "Freeway Killer" and the "freeway killings" was extensive.

In July 1982, prior to commencement of trial in this action, defendant moved for change of venue because of pretrial publicity. After a lengthy hearing, the court denied the motion in November of the same year. Its reasoning was as follows.

"Bearing in mind the criteria which the court must take into consideration in evaluating the pending motion, the court has made the following determinations.

"First of all, with reference to the nature and gravity of the offense, certainly the court can think of no offense or offenses which would be more grave than those which are pending in this particular case. [¶] There are pending the four murder charges.

"Secondly, with reference to the size of the community, the evidence is clear that we have a community that is approximately two million people—consists of approximately two million people. [¶] Additionally, the voter registration is in excess of one million. [¶] The court . . . also notes that the panels now drawn also consist of both people who have registered to vote, and, in addition thereto, we also draw from people who have obtained driver's licenses that may not be registered. [¶] Consequently, it is the court's determination from those facts that the pool which would be available is in excess of the number of people who are registered to vote.

"The next criteria is the status of the defendant in the community or of the victims in the community. Certainly there is nothing in the record that would indicate that either of the individuals have any particular status except when we are dealing with numerous victims, then we do have a situation where, within isolated groups within particular communities which comprise the county as a whole, then a certain status does arise.

"And then the last is the nature and extent of the coverage. Obviously this is a case that has commanded a great deal of media coverage both by radio—pardon me, both television and newspaper, and in addition thereto, some radio coverage. [¶] The determination that the court has to make just what effect has this coverage had on the minds of the community which would lead the court to believe that the defendant could not—there is a reasonable likelihood that the defendant would not obtain a fair trial within this county.

"Where the court has some difficulty, and I might state for the record a reason that I have this question, I have sat on cases which in my mind have commanded a great deal of publicity when I've thought there's absolutely no way that we can get anyone who has not heard of this case, and whether they've even formed an opinion, but they've never heard of the case.

". . . . . .

"In this case, I don't have anything, be it a poll taken informally by somebody at a shopping center, I don't have a poll that was taken in what might be called a formal way of someone, what percentage of the people have heard of the case, formed any opinions with reference to the case.

"I don't have any evidence as to who watched what on television, what channels they watched, if in fact they do watch, what newspapers they take.

if in fact they take any newspapers, and what effect, if in fact they do take newspapers, anything that they might have read has had upon them.

"Additionally, it appears to the court that we're not talking, and one of the manners in which the court can perhaps dilute adverse publicity, if it determines that some exists, is for continuances so that the coverage has been diluted to the extent that perhaps it would not reflect adversely upon the defendant's right for a fair trial.

"In this case, the court does note that there has been a minimum amount of publicity regarding this case, at least since the imposition of the sentence in Los Angeles County.

"The court, in taking the totality of the evidence that has been presented, makes a determination at this time that there has been an inadequate showing that the defendant is likely not to receive a fair trial in Orange County.

"I think based upon the size of the community, that there is undoubtedly a large group of individuals who either have not heard about the case or if they have heard of it, heard so little that in no way is the defendant not going to be able to get a fair trial in Orange County.

". . . . . .

"The motion for change of venue is denied." (Some paragraphing not original.)

In March 1983 trial commenced with jury selection. A total of 204 prospective jurors were subjected to voir dire. Of this number, 174 had been exposed in some degree to pretrial publicity either directly or indirectly, including 60 who had been exposed to news coverage relating to the Los Angeles action; of the 204 prospective jurors, 39 were excused because of bias. In the course of the selection process, but before he had exhausted the 26 challenges allotted to the defense, defendant moved for 8 to 10 additional peremptory challenges. The court denied the motion without prejudice to renewal later in the process. Subsequently, defendant exhausted his peremptory challenges but did not renew his motion. Twelve jurors and four alternates were eventually selected. Ten of the jurors and all the alternates had been exposed to pretrial publicity, including three jurors and one alternate who had come upon news coverage relating to the Los Angeles action. Most of these persons, however, had been exposed to such publicity indirectly and to a minimal degree.

In June 1983, after selection of the jury was completed, defendant renewed his motion for change of venue in light of the record of voir dire. He argued, in substance, that practically all the jurors and alternates had been exposed to pretrial publicity and that their memories would be refreshed by the evidence introduced at trial. The court denied the motion. Its reasoning was as follows.

"The court has examined the transcripts relating to the various prospective jurors. The court has reached the determination that there does not exist a reasonable likelihood that in the absence of a change of venue the defendant would not obtain a fair trial in this particular county.

"I think based on the court's interpretation of the answers given by the prospective jurors and those who ultimately were seated as jurors in this particular case, it is the court's opinion that the defendant will, in fact, receive a fair trial as it relates to the pending charges against him.

"The matter can be subject to much speculation as to what people potentially can do based upon having memories refreshed. The whole question is that there is no evidence that any of them have memories that would, in fact, be refreshed, any memories of the incidents that would in fact be refreshed based upon the information that they provided to the court and to counsel in the examination.

"In totality, the court has exercised its discretion in various—as it relates to various prospective jurors. The court has excused certain ones because of the evaluations made by the court based upon the demeanor, the method of answering questions and the answers given to the various questions propounded to the prospective jurors.

"Those that the court did not excuse for cause, the court in its view did so justifiably.

"In the court's ultimate decision, there is no reason to grant a change of venue. The motion is denied."

Defendant now claims that the court erred by denying his motion for change of venue. (4) In considering his point, we review the trial court's resolution of factual questions under the deferential substantial-evidence standard. (People v. Louis (1986) 42 Cal.3d 969, 985 [232 Cal.Rptr. 110, 728 P.2d 180].) We review its resolution of legal questions under the nondeferential de novo standard. (Ibid.) And we generally review its resolution of mixed questions of law and fact—i.e., its application of law to fact—under the de novo standard as well. (Id. at pp. 985-987.) The ultimate question of the reasonable likelihood of a fair and impartial trial is plainly such a mixed question. (Cf. id. at p. 988 [concluding that the issue of whether the pros-cution has exercised due diligence in procuring a witness's attendance is a mixed question of law and fact].)

(11b) We believe that the trial court did not err when it denied the original motion. Specifically, the court's essentially factual determination that the crimes charged were grave; that the size of the community was very large; that defendant had no particular status in the county; that the victims were similarly without status in the community as a whole; and that pretrial publicity, though extensive in the period preceding imposition of sentence in the Los Angeles action in March 1982, had been minimal in the time that followed—each of these findings is clearly supported by substantial evidence.

Further, the court's determination of the ultimate mixed law-fact question of the reasonable likelihood of an unfair trial was proper: on independent review, we believe that defendant failed to carry his burden.

To begin with, the factors relating to the size of the community, the status of the defendant, and the popularity and prominence of the victims weigh in favor of the likelihood of a fair trial.

It is true that the factors relating to the nature and gravity of the offense and the nature and extent of pretrial publicity go in the other direction. Among other things, the record reveals the following. As noted above, news coverage concerning defendant was extensive. There were reports that defendant had a hand in the "freeway killings" and was in fact the "Freeway Killer"; he had a history of mental illness and of prior convictions for sexual offenses against young men and boys; he was involved in homosexuality, torture, and "black magic"; he had been linked to the killing of as many as 44 young men and boys; he was implicated in certain murders by alleged accomplices; and he had himself admitted to 21 killings. It was also reported that a dispute had arisen between prosecutors in Los Angeles and Orange Counties as to who would try defendant first. Further, there were reports concerning the Los Angeles action. Among other things, these stories recounted the evidence introduced at trial—including the four Orange County murders—and stated that defendant was convicted of ten murders and sentenced to death.

We believe, however, that the weight of the factors relating to the nature and extent of the pretrial publicity must be reduced to less than that of the other countervailing factors. The potentially prejudicial effect of the news coverage here must be presumed to have diminished. As the trial court observed, the coverage had been minimal since imposition of sentence in the Los Angeles action. "That time soothes and erases is a perfectly natural phenomenon, familiar to all." (Patton v. Yount, supra, 467 U.S. at p. 1034 [81 L.Ed.2d at p. 856].)

In conclusion, we are of the opinion that defendant failed to carry his burden of proving that there was a reasonable likelihood that jurors drawn from Orange County would have formed such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they could not make the determinations required of them with impartiality. Defendant, we concede, may have shown the possibility of an unfair trial in Orange County. But such a showing, as we have explained, is insufficient. Hence, the court did not err by denying the original change-of-venue motion.

(5) We also believe that the trial court did not err when it denied the motion for change of venue as renewed on completion of jury selection: on independent review and after consideration of the record of voir dire, we are of the opinion that defendant failed to carry his burden. The record, to be sure, reveals that 10 of the 12 jurors and 3 of the 4 alternates had in fact been exposed to news coverage relating to defendant—although most of them indirectly and to a minimal degree. But it simply does not support the conclusion that there was a reasonable likelihood that any of those 16 persons had formed such a fixed opinion as a result of pretrial publicity that he could not make the determinations required of him with impartiality.

Against our conclusion, defendant argues in effect as follows. The pretrial publicity in this case, he begins, carried a great potential for prejudice: this proposition, he asserts, is established by the number and enormity of the crimes involved and the extensiveness of the coverage, and is confirmed by the fact that 39 of the 204 prospective jurors subjected to voir dire were excused because of bias. This great potential for prejudice, he goes on, cannot be deemed to have diminished substantially between March 1982, when sentence was imposed in the Los Angeles action and coverage became minimal, and March 1983, when jury selection in this proceeding began: a year is simply too brief a period of time. In view of this great and undiminished potential for prejudice, he concludes, we must presume that, at least when they had their memories refreshed by the evidence introduced at trial, the jurors and alternates might not have been able or willing to be fair and impartial.

Defendant's argument is to no avail. To begin with, it appears to be essentially empty of persuasive force, supported as it is more by conjecture than by evidence. In any event, it seems to establish at the very most the mere possibility of an unfair trial. But such a showing, as we have explained, is insufficient.

Defendant may also be understood to argue that the fact that he exhausted his 26 peremptory challenges supports his claim that there was a reasonable likelihood of an unfair trial before partial jurors. Such an argument, however, would be unpersuasive. On this record the exhaustion of peremptory challenges establishes only defendant's dissatisfaction with 26 prospective jurors and not the reasonable likelihood of bias on the part of any of the jurors or alternates actually selected.

In conclusion, we are of the opinion that defendant failed to carry his burden of proving that there was a reasonable likelihood that the jurors and alternates actually selected for his trial had formed, or would at trial form, such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they could not make the determinations required of them with impartiality. Hence, the court did not err by denying the renewed change-of-venue motion.

B. Denial of Motion for Additional Peremptory Challenges

(6) Defendant contends that the court erred by denying his motion for additional peremptory challenges. Specifically, he argues that in view of the pretrial publicity in this case and its potentially prejudicial effect the federal and state constitutional guaranties of a fair trial before an impartial jury required the court to grant his motion. We do not agree.

We believe that the court's ruling was justified on procedural grounds. As noted above (see pt. II.A, ante), defendant made his motion for additional peremptory challenges before he had exhausted the 26 peremptory challenges allotted to the defense. The court denied the motion without prejudice to renewal later in the process of jury selection. Defendant, however, never renewed the motion. On these facts, we conclude, defendant's motion was premature and properly denied as such.

We also believe that the court's ruling was sound on the merits. We are of the opinion that to establish the constitutional entitlement to additional peremptory challenges argued for here, a criminal defendant must show at the very least that in the absence of such additional challenges he is reasonably likely to receive an unfair trial before a partial jury. (Cf. Sheppard v. Maxwell (1966) 384 U.S. 333, 363 [16 L.Ed.2d 600, 620, 86 S.Ct. 1507] ["where there is a reasonable likelihood that prejudicial news prior to trial will prevent a fair trial, [to protect the criminal defendant's due process rights] the judge should continue the case until the threat abates, or transfer it to another county not so permeated with publicity"].) But as we concluded above (see pt. II.A, ante), defendant has failed to make such a showing. Accordingly, we hold the court's denial of his request was proper.

C. Prosecutorial Misconduct

(7a) Defendant contends that the prosecutor engaged in misconduct by eliciting from television reporter David Lopez testimony to the effect that defendant had admitted to 14 killings in addition to the murders of Fox, Barker, Rugh, and Sharp—for which he was on trial—and the murders of Miranda and Wells—which were introduced to establish identity. The facts relevant to this claim must be presented at length.

As noted above (see fn. 1, ante), the court had previously ruled admissible only that "other crimes" evidence which related to the killing of Miranda and Wells. After Lopez took the witness stand but before his examination commenced, a colloquy ensued among the court and counsel at the bench out of the hearing of the jury. In relevant part the discussion was as follows:

"[DEFENSE COUNSEL TRACY] STEWART: When Bryan [Brown, the prosecutor,] and I discussed this morning before lunch that Lopez might be called this afternoon and I told Bryan I would prefer that [Defense Counsel William Charvet] do the cross-examination of Lopez because I didn't have any transcript and Bryan was nice enough to photocopy some transcripts for me. [¶] But in looking at those briefly, I'm concerned that a number of things may come up that would be very prejudicial. [¶] He testified in the L.A. trial of all of the—I think 23—23 murders. [¶] I don't know to what extent he's been cautioned not to mention the others.

"THE COURT: Let me indicate this. I don't know where we are going for sure. Before we get into other things, because once again I don't know where we are going, be sure to let me have a chance to find out what it is. In other words, if you want to do it now or what—

"MR. BROWN: Would you like an offer at this time?

"THE COURT: Sure.

"MR. BROWN: Can I get my notes?

"THE COURT: Sure.

". . . . . .

"MR. BROWN: Mr. Lopez is a reporter for KNXT Channel Two News. He will testify that he has had a number of different conversations with Mr. Bonin starting in December of 1980 and proceeding through April 1981; that Mr. Bonin has described approximately 21 different killings to Mr.

Lopez. [¶] I don't know if the court wants me to make an offer of proof of what I intend to elicit at this time.

"THE COURT: Well, what I'm interested in, based upon what Tracy said, obviously if Bonin admitted the four that we are concerned with down here and the two that were admitted as similar acts, I don't have any great problem with those. [¶] Now, if we're getting into 17 other murders, then I want to know why.

"MR. BROWN: Okay. I don't intend to elicit any conversations between Bonin and Lopez with respect to murders other than Fox, Rugh, Barker, Sharp, Wells and Miranda. [¶] Mr. Bonin has told Mr. Lopez about other murders, but I do not intend to do that at this time.

"THE COURT: Okay.

"MR. BROWN: I was going to save those in the event that we do reach a penalty phase.

"THE COURT: All right.

"MS. STEWART: The only problem I have is as far as I know, Lopez has never testified that Bonin mentioned names specifically; at least, it doesn't appear in Lopez' testimony.

"MR. BROWN: He has. Bonin mentioned Rugh and Barker's name and the—there is an issue here that Tracy's talking about. This is the issue: [¶] With respect to Fox, Bonin never mentioned Fox' name. But in that respect—I don't mind if you read my notes; that's okay. That's all right. [¶] With respect to Fox, Lopez said—or excuse me. There were 21—there was a list of 21 homicide victims that was generally recognized and that Mr. Lopez and Mr. Bonin had talked about and agreed on. [¶] Fox' name was on that list at the time Mr. Lopez talked to Bonin. The defendant said that he killed everyone on the list except one. The one he did not kill was a fellow named Lundgren, L-U-N-D-G-R-E-N. And Lundgren was a kid that was killed in Los Angeles and has his penis severed, and Bonin indicated to Mr. Lopez that Bonin does not cut dicks off little kids, are the words he used. [¶] So Bonin admitted to Lopez that he killed everyone on the list of 21 except Lundgren. [¶] Fox is on the list. Okay? [¶] Bonin also said that he dumped two kids, Rugh and Barker, not far from where he dumped another body off, which would be Fox, in that Fox is just several miles down the Ortega towards the I-5 freeway. [¶] And that's the only—Fox is the only person that the defendant was talking about when he was talking about the other body dumped. [¶] Now, with respect to Rugh and Barker, Bonin gave Lopez their names. Rugh and Barker's names.

"THE COURT: Well, I might indicate, I'm not sure that I need to go into a whole lot more. I was concerned into the breadth of what you were going to go into; in other words, whether you're going to talk to him about 21 murders. [¶] And as I understand, all that you're doing right now is you're going to talk to him about the four with which he's charged here in the manner that you've described. [¶] And in some way they have to be tied into it I mean either directly by name or some other circumstantial deal. [¶] And the other two, Miranda and Wells, and so I don't have any particular problem with it.

"MR. BROWN: Okay.

"THE COURT: So, you know, it appears to me to be—

"MR. BROWN: That's fair.

"THE COURT: Okay.

"MS. STEWART: Are you offering this as an admission?

"MR. BROWN: Yes.

"THE COURT: Well, it's an admission and/or confession.

"MR. BROWN: Right, it's really a confession." (Italics added.)

Thereupon the prosecutor began to question Lopez. He elicited testimony that defendant admitted to the killing of Barker and Rugh. He then turned to the killing of Fox.

"Q Now, with respect to Frank Fox, did you have a conversation with Mr. Bonin concerning Frank Fox?

"A Never by name.

"Q Okay. Mr. Bonin at no time mentioned Frank Fox' name?

"A Never.

"Q Did Mr. Bonin talk to you about a—an individual that he had killed and dumped near the Ortega Highway?

A 23

A 24

"A He said it—

"Ms. STEWART: Objection, relevance.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"THE WITNESS: He said it in this manner: 'I dumped Rugh and Barker not far from where I dumped the other kid.' And I never pursued who the other kid was.

"Ms. STEWART: Objection. Nonresponsive.

"THE COURT: What was the last, Miss Stewart?

"Ms. STEWART: As to his answer, he's nonresponsive. Motion to strike everything after the response, which was yes or no.

"THE COURT: Overruled. Motion to strike denied.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: Had Mr. Bonin—or did Mr. Bonin at any time indicate to you that he had, though, killed Frank Fox without using Mr. Fox' name?

"A Well, again, the way he said it is that he dumped the bodies of Rugh and Barker—

"Ms. STEWART: Objection.

"THE WITNESS: —not far from where he dumped the other kid.

"MR. BROWN: There's an objection pending.

"THE COURT: What was the objection?

"Ms. STEWART: The answer was nonresponsive to the question. It called for a yes or no answer. I would request that the court—

"THE COURT: No, I think the answer was responsive. The question was objectionable as calling for a conclusion. [¶] Proceed.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: Did you talk to Mr. Bonin about a list of homicide victims, murder victims, that included the name of Frank Fox?

"A Yes.

"Q What was that particular conversation?

"Ms. STEWART: Objection. Lack of foundation of the list itself. Th question is not relevant.

"THE COURT: Lack of foundation and what's the latter part?

"Ms. STEWART: Relevance.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"THE WITNESS: In answering that question, I'm going to have to refe some names that deal with the Los Angeles case. Do you want me to answ that question?

"MR. BROWN: No.

"THE COURT: Just listen very carefully to the questions and just answ the questions if you will.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: It's not comfortable being up on the witness stan is it?

"A Well, it's—

"Q Because you—

"A I would much rather be doing a story that I'm supposed to be doi today, to be quite honest with you.

"Q We all understand that.

(Laughter.)

"Let me ask you this: did you talk to Mr. Bonin about a list homicide victims that included the name of Frank Fox?

"A That's correct, yes, I did.

"Q How many victims were on that list?

"Ms. STEWART: Objection. Relevance. And also on the court's pr ruling.

"THE COURT: Overruled. He may answer that.

"THE WITNESS: There were 21 names on that list.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: And was Mr. Fox' name included on that list?

"A Yes.

"Q Was this list at some time published?

"A Yes.

"Q And was it published in a number of different media?

"A Yes.

"Q Newspapers and television?

"A Yes.

"Q And specifically was it published in the Orange County Register?

"A Yes.

"Q At the time it was published at least in the Register, were there photographs of these 21 individuals published with the list?

"A I think there were actually 20 photographs—

"MS. STEWART: Objection.

"THE WITNESS: With one John Doe. But to answer the question—

"THE COURT: Just a minute, Mr. Lopez.

"MS. STEWART: Objection on the grounds of relevancy as to the photographs. And it's hearsay.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: Now, was Frank Fox' photograph also included—

"A Yes, it was.

A27

"Q —in the photographs with the list?

"A Yes, it was.

"Q Did Mr. Bonin indicate to you whether or not he had murdered the people that were on that list?

"MS. STEWART: Objection. The question is ambiguous, and it's not relevant.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"THE WITNESS: I asked him that point blank. And his answer was through a quote, 'I killed all but one. I didn't kill Lundgren because I don't cut the dicks off little kids.'

"MS. STEWART: Can we approach the bench, Your Honor?

"THE COURT: Yes."

Thereupon Defense Counsel Stewart moved for a mistrial. The court denied the motion. Counsel then moved to strike the testimony under challenge. The court denied that motion as well. The relevant colloquy was as follows.

"MS. STEWART: Why did you have to do that?

"MR. BROWN: I didn't do anything. What did I do?

"MS. STEWART: There are 21 names on the list. You just asked him if killed them, and he said: Yes, all of them but Lundgren.

"MR. BROWN: So? That's—that's Fox. That's what we were talking about up here.

"THE COURT: How else was he going to get in Fox?

"MS. STEWART: Then why did you—you brought out the 21 names which is why I objected to the relevance. And now you're—now we have admission before the jury that he's—that he's allegedly killed all of these people.

"MR. BROWN: Right. That's what we talked about up here, Your

A28

"MS. STEWART: We didn't talk about 21. We only talked about—

"MR. BROWN: Yes, we did. That's what—that was my offer of proof with respect to Fox.

"MS. STEWART: It's my understanding we were only going as to the six.

"THE COURT: You know, if you keep objecting, there's no way that he can get the thing in other than this way.

"MS. STEWART: I know, but he keeps—Lopez keeps going so far beyond the question, I can't tell where he's going. But my understanding was he wasn't—

"THE COURT: What is it that you want to do now?

"MS. STEWART: I'm making a motion for a mistrial.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"MS. STEWART: All right. Then as to—before we go away, I want to—

"THE COURT: I should say 'denied.' Pardon me.

"MS. STEWART: It was my understanding that only information as to the four here plus Wells and Miranda would be coming in through Lopez' testimony. Is that your ruling?

"THE COURT: That's all that I wanted to get in. But, you know, he was asking about these and then you object; and I don't know how else he's going to get it in. This is the way it came about.

"MS. STEWART: Well, this is why I started objecting as soon as that list came up with the 21 people because I was afraid that was going to come up.

"THE COURT: What is it you want? In other words, if you said, all right, fine, just tell them that there are six of them and he admitted that he killed all six of them, I mean, that's not the way that it went down.

"MS. STEWART: All right. Motion to strike, at least.

"MR. BROWN: I don't think it should be stricken.

"THE COURT: I'm not going to strike it unless—unless, you know—, I don't know how I can help it. If that's the way that he admitted killing these four—

"MR. BROWN: That's the only way that you can tie the defendant's confession into Fox. . . . He never mentioned Fox' name. Bonin did not mention Fox' name.

"MS. STEWART: Well, we have an admission of 21 now.

"THE COURT: Well, in my view, the probative value of this whole line far outweighs any prejudice.

"MS. STEWART: It's—

"MR. BROWN: It's really the only evidence on Fox that ties the defendant to Fox.

"MS. STEWART: All right. Then is it the court's ruling that he can continue to refer to any—the number 21 on the list? And—

"THE COURT: This is the only thing—. As I understand it from Mr. Brown, this is the only one that we need to do that in. Fox is the only one that he didn't mention by name, as I understand it,—

"MR. BROWN: That's correct.

"THE COURT: —of our six.

"MR. BROWN: That is correct.

"THE COURT: And the only way we could tie Fox in as one of Bonin's victims is in this manner. That's my understanding of what he said.

"MR. BROWN: That's correct.

"THE COURT: Okay." (Italics added.)

Resuming his examination, the prosecutor elicited testimony that defendant admitted to the killing of Sharp, Wells, and Miranda.

At the threshold we must determine whether the claim that the prosecutor engaged in misconduct by eliciting from Lopez defendant's admissions the 14 killings not relevant to the issue of guilt is properly before this court. (8) To preserve such a point, the defendant must generally assign the conduct in question as error at trial and request the court to instruct the jury to disregard its effect. (People v. Chi Ko Wong (1976) 18 Cal.3d 698, 723 [135 Cal.Rptr. 392, 557 P.2d 976], disapproved on another point in People v. Green (1980) 27 Cal.3d 1, 34 [164 Cal.Rptr. 1, 609 P.2d 468].) Simply to object or make an assignment of misconduct without seeking a curative admonition is generally not enough. (People v. Beivelman (1968) 70 Cal.2d 60, 75 [73 Cal.Rptr. 521, 447 P.2d 913].) "The reason for this rule, of course, is that 'the trial court should be given an opportunity to correct the abuse and thus, if possible, prevent by suitable instructions the harmful effect upon the minds of the jury.'" (People v. Green, supra, at p. 27.)

As the facts stated above reveal, defense counsel Stewart failed to strictly comply with the requirements of the rule. But she did achieve substantial compliance: by making her motions for a mistrial and to strike the challenged portion of Lopez's testimony, Stewart effectively gave the court more than ample opportunity to "correct the abuse."

We turn now to the merits. Defendant's claim is substantial. (9) It is, of course, misconduct for a prosecutor to "intentionally elicit inadmissible testimony." (People v. Sims (1976) 64 Cal.App.3d 544, 554 [134 Cal.Rptr. 566]; accord, People v. King (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 437, 464 [72 Cal.Rptr. 478], citing authorities.) (7b) It appears that the prosecutor must have known that the testimony he elicited concerning the 14 other killings was inadmissible: that evidence was plainly irrelevant to the issues material to the question of guilt, and had been ruled such by the court. It also appears that the prosecutor elicited such testimony intentionally. Had it been his intent to elicit only defendant's admission to the killing of Fox, he would simply have pressed Lopez to answer the question he had already asked: "[D]id Mr. Bonin at any time indicate to you that he had . . . killed Frank Fox without using Mr. Fox' name?" Had he failed in his attempt, he could then have asked whether Fox's name appeared on the list of homicide victims and, if so, whether defendant admitted to killing him either expressly or by implication.

In response to defendant's claim, the Attorney General may be understood to argue to the following effect. "Prosecutorial misconduct," he begins in his brief, "involve[s] the resorting to the use of deceptive or reprehensible methods in an attempt to persuade the jury." No such methods, he continues, were used here: the only way that the prosecutor could elicit the admission at issue was to question Lopez as he did; moreover, the prosecutor did not violate the court's ruling—the purpose of that ruling being merely to govern how he should elicit defendant's admission to the killing of Fox, not to bar him from eliciting defendant's admission to the 14 other killings; finally, if the prosecutor did in fact elicit inadmissible evidence, he did so unintentionally.

The Attorney General's argument is not lacking in persuasive force. It is true that not all his points are strong. For example, it is plain that the purpose of the court's ruling was not to govern the form of the prosecutor's examination: the court recognized, and declared, that the 14 other killings were not relevant to the issue of guilt. It is also plain that the prosecutor could have elicited defendant's admission to the Fox murder without eliciting his admission to the 14 other murders: we explained above how the prosecutor could have conducted his examination, and hence rejected the opinion of the trial judge, who stated that the "only way [the prosecutor] could tie Fox in as one of Bonin's victims is in th[e] manner [he used]." One of the Attorney General's points, however, cannot be rejected out of hand. The record is not without support for an inference that the prosecutor may have elicited the inadmissible evidence unintentionally, having lost his concentration at a crucial point as he was questioning a hard-to-control witness.

But whether the prosecutor's examination of Lopez can be held to be misconduct is a question we need not resolve: having reviewed the record in its entirety, we have come to the conclusion that the conduct under challenge could not be deemed prejudicial. Defendant argues that the "misconduct" was so egregious as to render the trial fundamentally unfair and as such requires reversal whether or not it can be shown to have caused specific prejudice. We are not persuaded. To our mind, the "misconduct" could not properly be termed "egregious." Moreover, it constituted an isolated instance in a lengthy and otherwise well-conducted trial, and therefore could not have rendered the proceeding fundamentally unfair.

Defendant next argues that even if not prejudicial per se, the "misconduct" requires reversal under the "reasonable probability" standard of People v. Watson (1956) 46 Cal.2d 818, 836 [299 P.2d 243]. Again, we are not persuaded. We recognize that in the abstract such misconduct as is claimed here could pose a not insubstantial threat of prejudice. Nevertheless, we believe that in this case the threat would not have been realized: since the evidence of guilt—albeit in large part circumstantial—was overwhelming, there is not a reasonable probability that in the absence of the "misconduct" an outcome more favorable to defendant would have resulted.[3]

[3]Defendant also contends that the introduction of Lopez's testimony about his admission to the 14 other killings amounted to reversible error in and of itself. The point must be rejected. The testimony, to be sure, was plainly irrelevant to the issue of guilt and as such inadmissible. But as the discussion above shows, it did not subject defendant to prejudice.

III. Special Circumstance Issues

Defendant raises a single contention as to the validity of the special circumstance findings. (10a) Specifically, he claims that it was error for the prosecution to allege four multiple-murder special circumstances instead of one. He is correct. As we explained in People v. Anderson, supra, 43 Cal.3d at page 1150: "The plain words of section 190.2(a)(3)—'The defendant has in this proceeding been convicted of more than one offense of murder'—suggest that no matter how many murder charges are tried together, they constitute a single multiple-murder special circumstance. That reading is supported by certain constitutional considerations: '. . . "alleging two special circumstances for a double murder improperly inflates the risk that the jury will arbitrarily impose the death penalty, a result also inconsistent with the constitutional requirement that the capital sentencing procedure guide and focus the jury's objective consideration of the particularized circumstances of the offense and the individual offender. [Citations.]" . . . [Accordingly,] appropriate charging papers should allege one multiple-murder special circumstance separate from the individual murder counts.' [Citation.]" It follows that three of the four multiple-murder special-circumstance findings must be vacated.

IV. Penalty Issues

Defendant makes several claims bearing on the issue of penalty. As we shall explain, none establishes reversible error.

A. Refusal to Allow Two Members of Defense Team to Present Closing Argument

(11) Defendant contends that by refusing to allow Defense Counsel Stewart to make a closing argument the court committed error under Penal Code section 1095 (hereinafter section 1095) and in fact denied him, or at least infringed on, his constitutional right to the assistance of counsel. The facts relevant to this claim are as follows.

Prosecutor Brown delivered a closing argument. Defense Counsel Charvet then followed with a full and unrestricted argument of his own. When he finished, the following colloquy ensued in open court.

"THE COURT: Mr. Brown.

"MR. BROWN: I don't have any rebuttal.

"THE COURT: All right. May I see counsel just for a moment? If you would approach."

Thereupon the colloquy continued at the bench out of the hearing of the jury.

"THE COURT: The reason that the court is having counsel approach, it is my understanding that Miss Stewart has indicated that she was going to argue in the penalty phase and I'll be very honest with you, that I know that the law says that two counsel can argue in the penalty phase. Whether or not that would apply like where we are right now where the prosecution has not exercised its right to, in essence, rebut the argument of the defense, and I don't really know what the answer is.

"MS. STEWART: Can I make a suggestion?

"THE COURT: Sure.

"MS. STEWART: Since it's almost four o'clock, I could research tonight and we'll return in the morning. I can either give it or—

"MR. BROWN: Let's get it over with today.

"MS. STEWART: I don't think I can do it that quick.

"THE COURT: What I am getting at, I don't want to put anybody at a disadvantage here. I don't want to prevent the right of the defendant to have Miss Stewart argue if he has a right to argue under these circumstances.

"MR. CHARVET: May we have five minutes just to look it up? [¶] It's my understanding and I can be wrong that we have a right to two arguments only if he exercises his right.

"THE COURT: That is the normal situation.

"MS. STEWART: What is it, 1095, I think.

"MR. CHARVET: I think we can look it up in just a few moments.

"THE COURT: All right. Let's take a couple minutes. That may be worthwhile."

The colloquy soon concluded as follows out of the hearing of the jury

"THE COURT: All right. The record should reflect that the court has reviewed the annotations to section 1095 of the Penal Code, and it appears to the court that the existing law prescribes that argument where you have two counsel to argue should proceed alternately. [¶] And in this particular case, inasmuch as Mr. Brown has waived his rebuttal argument, there would be no rebuttal argument provided.

"MR. CHARVET: I understand that, and it's—of course, he doesn't have to tell us, but had we known that, it would have been a different situation. But anyway—

"MR. BROWN: I told everybody.

"MR. CHARVET: —I think we can go to final argument at this point.

"MR. BROWN: I told everybody.

"MR. CHARVET: He told us, but I didn't believe him.

"THE COURT: Okay."

The court then proceeded to deliver the penalty phase instructions.

We agree with defendant that in ruling as it did the court erred. Section 1095 provides: "If the offense charged is punishable with death, two counsel on each side may argue the cause. In any other case the court may, in its discretion, restrict the argument to one counsel on each side." The statute plainly gives each side in a capital case the right to present argument by two counsel. Further, it does not require alternation of arguments or allow two counsel on one side to argue only if the other side presents two arguments.

As is revealed by a perusal of the cases collected following section 1095 in both 50A West's Annotated Penal Code (1970 ed.) at page 572 and Deering's Annotated Penal Code (1971 ed.) at page 281, the court's ruling is evidently based on the decision in People v. Fair (1872) 43 Cal. 137. Fair, however, does not govern the issue at bar. In holding that alternation was required, the Fair court merely followed section 364 of the Criminal Practice Act of 1851 (hereinafter section 364). That provision declared as follows: "If the indictment be for an offence punishable with death, two counsel on each side may argue the cause to the jury, in which case they must do so alternately. If it be for any other offense the Court may in its discretion restrict the argument to one counsel on each side." (Stats. 1851, ch. 29, § 364, p. 252, italics added.) Of course, the Criminal Practice Act of 1851 is no longer in effect. (Stats. of 1873, continued in force, ch. 52, § 664, p. 361.)

Hence, section 364, together with its requirement of alternation, cannot govern the question we address here.

We recognize that in light of the similarity of language section 364 should be presumed to be the source of section 1095. But we cannot infer from such a relationship that the later provision continues the requirement of alternation contained in the earlier. First, section 1095 does not impose such a requirement by its express terms. Second, it cannot reasonably be read to impose such a requirement by implication. In enacting section 1095 in the form that it did, the Legislature chose not to continue the express requirement of alternation contained in section 364. In so doing, it evidenced an intent to change the former law by removing the requirement. Hence, section 1095 must be read as lacking such a requirement.[3]

(12a) Although we agree with defendant that the court's ruling was error, we cannot agree that it amounted to a constitutional violation as a denial of or an infringement on his right to the assistance of counsel. (13a) We recognize, of course, that the criminal defendant has a constitutional right to assistance of counsel. (U.S. Const., Amend. VI; Cal. Const., art. I, § 15.) That right "ensures to the defense in a criminal trial the opportunity to participate fully and fairly in the adversary factfinding process." (Herring v. New York (1975) 422 U.S. 853, 858 [45 L.Ed.2d 593, 598, 95 S.Ct. 2550].) We further recognize that the constitutional right to the assistance of counsel encompasses the right to have counsel present closing argument. (Herring v. New York, supra, at pp. 856-862; In re William T. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 249, 255 [113 Cal.Rptr. 170, 520 P.2d 986].) (12b) Nevertheless, we cannot conclude that the court's erroneous ruling effected a constitutional violation here.

First, the ruling did not amount to a denial of the constitutional right. As noted above, Defense Counsel Charvet presented a full and unrestricted argument on behalf of defendant. That Defense Counsel Stewart was not allowed to make an argument is, to our mind, constitutionally immaterial on this point: the federal and state Constitutions impliedly grant the criminal defendant the right to have defense counsel present closing argument, not each member of the defense team.

[3]The Attorney General argues that our decision in People v. Beedhouse (1967) 66 Cal.2d 526 [58 Cal.Rptr. 332, 426 P.2d 900], requires alternation of arguments and allows two counsel on one side to argue only if the other side presents two arguments. This is incorrect. In Beedhouse we did not even consider section 1095. In that case we held only that even though in criminal trials generally the prosecution opens the argument, the defendant responds, and the prosecution closes, at the penalty phase of a capital trial the defense must be given the opportunity to close with a summed argument. (Id. at pp. 530-531.) In arriving at our conclusion we recognized, to be sure, the practice of alternation. But we did not state or imply that two counsel on one side may be allowed to argue only if the other side presents two arguments.

Second, the ruling did not amount to an infringement of the constitutional right. (13b) In our view, the right is not infringed when "the opportunity [of the defense] to participate fully and fairly in the adversary factfinding process" (Herring v. New York, supra, 422 U.S. at p. 858 [45 L.Ed.2d at p. 598]) is not significantly limited. (13c) Here, we believe, the defense's opportunity to participate was not significantly limited: as noted above, Defense Counsel Charvet presented a full and unrestricted argument. We recognize, to be sure, that the court did not allow Defense Counsel Stewart to make an argument. But we cannot conclude that it thereby significantly limited the defense's opportunity to participate. Indeed, as the record reveals, Charvet himself apparently considered his argument to be sufficient and further argument by Stewart to be dispensable.

Defendant maintains that "The omission of Ms. Stewart's argument was critical inasmuch as she had assumed the primary defense responsibilities. . . . Her rapport with the jury was probably better than Mr. Charvet's, and her familiarity with the evidence was probably greater. This made her perspective of greater significance than Mr. Charvet's." In urging his point defendant asks us in effect to leave analysis behind and to embark on the path to speculation and conjecture. There, however, we cannot and will not go. Thus, we must reject his point.

Accordingly, we conclude that the court's ruling did not significantly limit the defense's opportunity to participate in the adversary process and hence did not infringe on defendant's constitutional right to the assistance of counsel.[6]

But even though the court's ruling did not amount to a constitutional violation, it was, as we have concluded, error under section 1095. The question to which we must now turn is whether the error was prejudicial. We believe that it was not. Of course, we do not and cannot know what Defense Counsel Stewart may have said to the jurors or whether she may have moved them or in what way. But as we have noted above, Defense Counsel Charvet apparently considered his argument to be sufficient and further argument by Stewart to be dispensable. Lacking any indication as to the nature and likely effect of Stewart's intended argument, we can do nothing other than accept Charvet's assessment. Accordingly, we are compelled to hold that under any standard of prejudice the error must be deemed harmless.[7]

[6]To the extent that In re William F., supra, 11 Cal.3d 249—a case in which no argument at all was permitted—implies that error adversely affecting defense counsel's closing argument necessarily infringes on the defendant's constitutional right to the assistance of counsel (id. at p. 256, fn. 4), it is overruled and is hereby disapproved.

[7]Defendant requests that pursuant to Evidence Code sections 452, subdivision (d), and 459, we take judicial notice of the record on appeal in People v. Bunnell (B003499, opp. pending) and People v. Maxwell (B007390, opp. pending). In support he argues that Bunnell and Maxwell have each been convicted of crimes as egregious as those of which he has been convicted, but have nevertheless received the penalty of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. He then argues that the records in their cases are relevant to the issue whether any errors that occurred at the penalty phase of his trial were prejudicial. We are not persuaded. Under the modern system of capital punishment, which "require[s] a particularized inquiry into ' "the circumstances of the offense together with the character and propensities of the offender" ' " (McClesky v. Kemp (1987) __ U.S. __, __ [95 L.Ed.2d 262, 285, 107 S.Ct. 1756, 1772]), we fail to see how the record in one case can be relevant to the evaluation of prejudice in another, no matter how similar the cases appear to be. Accordingly, we are compelled to reject defendant's request.

B. Claims Relating to CALJIC Nos. 8.84, 8.84.1, and 8.84.2

Defendant makes a number of claims relating to the core penalty instructions delivered by the court. In accordance with CALJIC No. 8.84 as modified and ultimately with section 190.2 of the Penal Code (hereinafter section 190.2), the court instructed the jurors as follows. "The defendant in this case has been found guilty of four counts of murder of the first degree. The charge that each of said murders was committed under the special circumstance has been specially found to be true.

"It is the law of this state that the penalty for a defendant found guilty of murder of the first degree shall be death or confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole in any case in which the special circumstance [sic] charged in this case have [sic] been specially found to be true.

"Under the law of this state, you must now determine which of said penalties shall be imposed on defendant as to each of the four murder convictions in this case."

In accordance with former CALJIC No. 8.84.1 as modified and ultimately with section 190.3 of the Penal Code (hereinafter section 190.3), the court then gave the following instruction to the jurors. "In determining which penalty is to be imposed on defendant, you shall consider all of the evidence which has been received during any part of the trial of this case, except as you may be hereafter instructed. You shall consider, take into account and be guided by the following factors, if applicable:"(a) The circumstances of the crimes of which the defendant was convicted in the present proceeding and the existence of any special circumstances found to be true.

"(b) The presence or absence of criminal activity by the defendant which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or the expressed or implied threat to use force or violence.

"(c) The presence or absence of any prior felony conviction.

"(d) Whether or not the offense was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance.

"(e) Whether or not the victim was a participant in the defendant's homicidal conduct or consented to the homicidal act.

"(f) Whether or not the offense was committed under circumstances which the defendant reasonably believed to be a moral justification or extenuation for his conduct.

"(g) Whether or not the defendant acted under extreme duress or under the substantial domination of another person.

"(h) Whether or not at the time of the offense the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was impaired as a result of mental disease or defect or the effects of intoxication.

"(i) The age of the defendant at the time of the crime.

"(j) Whether or not the defendant was an accomplice to the offense and his participation in the commission of the offense was relatively minor.

"(k) Any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime, or any other factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation."

Finally, in accordance with former CALJIC No. 8.84.2 as modified and ultimately with section 190.3, the court instructed the jurors in relevant part as follows.

"It is now your duty to determine which of the two penalties, death or confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole, shall be imposed on defendant.

"After having heard all of the evidence, and after having heard and considered the arguments of counsel, you shall consider, take into account and be guided by the applicable factors of aggravating and mitigating circumstances upon which you have been instructed.

"If you conclude that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of death. However, if you determine that the mitigating circumstances outweigh the aggravating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of confinement in the state prison for life without the possibility of parole."

A39

1. Failure to Explain "Life Imprisonment Without Possibility of Parole" Sua Sponte

(14) Defendant contends that the court erred when it failed to explain to the jury sua sponte that the phrase of CALJIC No. 8.84.2, "confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole," actually means what its words declare—i.e., confinement for life without possibility of parole. The point must be rejected.

When a term is commonly understood by those familiar with the English language and is not used in a technical sense peculiar to the law, the court is not required to give an instruction as to its meaning in the absence of a request. (People v. Anderson (1966) 64 Cal.2d 633, 639 [51 Cal.Rptr. 238, 414 P.2d 366].) In this case, the term "confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole" was used in the common and nontechnical sense that the plain meaning of its words convey. Accordingly, the court was not required to give an instruction as to its meaning sua sponte.

Defendant argues that jurors share a "common and widespread misconception" that the sentence of "confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole" does not actually mean confinement for life without possibility of parole, and hence should be instructed on the court's own motion that "without possibility of parole" means "without possibility of parole." We are not, however, persuaded that the argument's factual premise is supported. We recognize that 10 out of the total of 204 prospective jurors examined on voir dire—none of whom was selected as a juror or alternate—may have labored under the "misconception" of which defendant speaks. But we cannot conclude from that fact—or from any other fact presented by defendant—that such a "misconception" was "common and widespread." Because we cannot accept defendant's premise, we must reject his conclusion.

2. Failure to Delete Sentencing Factors Inapplicable on the Evidence

(15) Defendant contends that the court erred by instructing on all the statutory sentencing factors and by failing to delete such factors as were inapplicable on the facts of this case. We rejected a similar point in People v. Ghent (1987) 43 Cal.3d 739, 776-777 [239 Cal.Rptr. 82, 739 P.2d 1250], and we reject this point here.

A40

Section 190.3, the statutory source of CALJIC No. 8.84.1, states in relevant part: "In determining the penalty, the trier of fact shall take into account any of the [specified] factors if relevant . . . ." (Italics added.) We read the provision (1) to direct the trier of fact to the criteria that the legislative body has determined to be significant in choosing between life and death and (2) to require the trier to consider those criteria, insofar as they are actually applicable, in making that choice. Under such a reading of the statute, all the factors are "relevant" in a broad sense: together they establish the normative framework within which the penalty determination in the individual case must constitutionally be made. Further, under such a reading only those factors that are applicable on the evidence adduced at trial are to be taken into account in the penalty determination in the individual case: the statutory provision "seems to contemplate that not all factors will be relevant in all cases and further that a factor which is not relevant to the evidence in a particular case should be disregarded." (People v. Davenport (1985) 41 Cal.3d 247, 289 [221 Cal.Rptr. 794, 710 P.2d 861] (plur. opn.).)

Defendant argues that instructing the jurors on factors inapplicable on the evidence adduced at trial may cause them to focus on constitutionally irrelevant matters: "The focus," he maintains in words quoted from Enmund v. Florida (1982) 458 U.S. 782, 798 [73 L.Ed.2d 1140, 1152, 102 S.Ct. 3368], "must be on his culpability, . . . for [the United States Supreme Court] insist[s] on 'individualized consideration as a constitutional requirement in imposing the death sentence.'" We do not find defendant's argument to be persuasive.

In this case, the jurors were instructed: "You shall consider, take into account and be guided by [specified] factors, if applicable . . ." (Italics added.) In other words, they were directed to focus on defendant's culpability and on the evidence relevant to that issue. (16) We presume that jurors follow the court's instructions. (E.g., Delli Paoli v. United States (1957) 352 U.S. 232, 242 [1 L.Ed.2d 278, 285-286, 77 S.Ct. 294], overruled on other grounds in Bruton v. United States (1968) 391 U.S. 123 [20 L.Ed.2d 476, 88 S.Ct. 1620].) We are presented with no reason to believe that the jurors in this case did not follow the instruction here.

3. Failure to Instruct That Absence of Evidence in Mitigation Does Not Establish a Factor in Aggravation

(17) Defendant contends that the court erred by failing to instruct the jury sua sponte that the absence of evidence in mitigation does not establish a factor in aggravation. The point must be rejected.

A41

We recognize that section 190.3 impliedly provides that the trier of fact should disregard a factor that is inapplicable on the evidence adduced at trial (see pt. IV.B.2, ante), and that in so doing it necessarily bars the trier from considering such a factor as aggravating (see People v. Rodriguez (1986) 42 Cal.3d 730, 788-789 [230 Cal.Rptr. 667, 726 P.2d 113]; People v. Davenport, supra, 41 Cal.3d at p. 289).

We believe, however, that the court adequately instructed the jury in this regard. As we concluded above (see pt. IV.B.2, ante), the court properly directed the jurors to consider the sentencing factors only "if applicable." Defendant argues in substance that the court should have amplified or explained its words. But when as here the instruction under challenge is adequate, the court is under no obligation to amplify or explain in the absence of a request. (People v. Anderson, supra, 64 Cal.2d at p. 639.)

(18a) Defendant may be understood to claim that the prosecutor committed misconduct by making comments in closing argument that were predicated on, and thereby communicated, an erroneous understanding of the law in this regard. The remarks under challenge were as follows.

"Going now to whether or not the offense was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance.

". . . . . .

"There's absolutely no evidence whatsoever that the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance. I would suggest to you on that basis that that's an aggravating factor, that he was not under the influence of emotional disturbance.

"Item E, whether or not the victim was a participant in the defendant's homicidal conduct or consented to the homicidal act. [¶] There can be no question that neither of the four victims in this case consented to be killed by the defendant. [¶] Russell Rugh, Glen[n] Barker, we know a little bit about them. We don't know too much about Lawrence Sharp and Frank Fox. But there's no evidence whatsoever that they consented to being killed. So that would be an aggravating factor.

"Whether or not the offense was committed under circumstances which the defendant reasonably believed to be a moral justification or extenuation for his conduct. [¶] There can be no moral justification for this. This would be—at least, I can speculate that a case may come up for moral justification where you have someone dying, terminally ill of cancer or something, and you do—you participate in a mercy-type killing or something like that. That could be moral justification. Not—nothing that we have seen here in court. So that would also be an aggravating factor.

A42

"Whether or not the defendant acted under extreme duress or under the substantial domination of another person. [¶] The one that's really got that is—would be James Munro or Greg Miley. If you are prosecuting Miley or Munro here, they could probably get up and make a big whoop-de-do about that because they were under the substantial domination of the defendant, but it's not the other way around. So that would be an aggravating factor here. [¶] There's no evidence whatsoever that the defendant acted under duress or domination of another person.

"Whether or not at the time of the offense the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was impaired as a result of mental disease or defect or the effects of intoxication. [¶] There's no evidence of that.

". . . . . .

"So with respect to the evidence concerning that particular factor, it's aggravating. There's no evidence of mental disease or defect or intoxication. It's just the opposite.

". . . . . .

"Whether or not the defendant was an accomplice to the offense and his participation in the commission of the offense was relatively minor.

". . . . . .

". . . [T]he defendant is, there's no evidence at all that he's an accomplice. He is the force that causes all this. He is the force that seeks out Gregory Miley, the force that seeks out James Munro and turns them into killers. So that would be an aggravating factor in this case." (Italics added.)

Having reviewed the matter closely, we are of the opinion that defendant's claim of prosecutorial misconduct must be rejected at the threshold. As stated above, it is settled that a defendant cannot complain on appeal of misconduct at trial unless he made a timely objection thereto and requested that the jury be instructed to disregard the improper remark. (E.g., People v. Green, supra, 27 Cal.3d at pp. 27-34.) In this case defendant made no objection whatever. It is true that the rule stated above does not apply in a situation in which a timely objection and admonition would not have cured the harm. (Ibid.) Such a situation, however, is not present here. Accordingly, we conclude that defendant's point is not preserved for review on appeal. (See, e.g., People v. Ghent, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 775; People v. Allen (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1222, 1283-1284 [232 Cal.Rptr. 849, 729 P.2d 115] (lead opn. by Grodin, J.).)

A43

We are also of the opinion that defendant's claim must be rejected on the merits. The prosecutor's remarks, to be sure, amounted to a misstatement of the law. Though erroneous, however, they cannot be characterized as misconduct. (39) "'[A] prosecutor is not guilty of misconduct because, in his argument of the law to the jury, he is wrong as to the law. Misconduct occurs only where an erroneous proposition of law was argued in bad faith [citation].'" (People v. Moseley (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 41, 61 [105 Cal.Rptr. 432]; accord, People v. Pineiro (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 915, 923 [179 Cal.Rptr. 883]; People v. Colpito (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 212, 222 [88 Cal.Rptr. 64]; People v. Jones (1962) 205 Cal.App.2d 460, 467 [23 Cal.Rptr. 418]; People v. Gould (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 489, 492 [338 P.2d 938].) (38b) In this case evidence of bad faith is altogether lacking, and defendant makes no claim to the contrary. Hence, we find no misconduct.

But even if we could characterize the prosecutor's comments as misconduct, we could not hold that they require reversal. The court instructed the jurors to consider the sentencing factors only "if applicable" and to "accept and follow the rules of law as I state them to you." The court thereby told the jurors, in effect, to be guided by its proper statement of the law and not by the prosecutor's misstatement. As we said above, we generally presume that jurors follow the court's instructions. We are presented with no reason to believe that the jurors in this case acted contrary to that presumption. Further, having reviewed the record in its entirety, we believe that the remarks could have had no marginal effect on the balance of aggravating and mitigating factors or on the consequent determination of the appropriateness of death: under the sentencing guidelines as properly construed and applied, the factors in aggravation were overwhelming and the factors in mitigation virtually nonexistent. Accordingly, even if the prosecutor's comments amounted to misconduct, they were neutralized by the court's instructions and in any event could not be deemed prejudicial on this record.

4. Statutory Sentencing Factor (a) and "Multiple" Multiple-murder Special Circumstance

(10b) Defendant contends that the court's instruction as to statutory sentencing factor (a) was prejudicial error because it effectively directed the jurors to consider four multiple-murder special-circumstance findings instead of one. We agree that the instruction was erroneous: as we concluded above (see pt. III, ante), there can be only one such finding in a proceeding. We cannot agree, however, that the error requires reversal. Although we presume that the jurors considered the invalid special-circumstance findings independent of their underlying facts, we cannot conclude that they could reasonably have given them any significant independent weight.

A44

5. The Scope of Statutory Sentencing Factor (b)

(20a) Defendant contends that the court's instruction as to statutory sentencing factor (b) was error. In support he argues that section 190.3 must be construed to limit the scope of that factor to crimes other than those of which the defendant was convicted in the capital proceeding. He then argues that the court's instruction failed to so limit the scope of that factor and thereby invited the jury to "double count" the circumstances of the capital offense under both factors (a) and (b).

We agree that section 190.3 should be construed to contain the limitation defendant discerns. (People v. Miranda (1987) 44 Cal.3d 57, 105-106 [241 Cal.Rptr. 594, 744 P.2d 1127].)

We cannot agree, however, that the factor (b) instruction was erroneous. (21) In determining the meaning conveyed by an instruction, we give the charge the meaning that a reasonable juror would give. (E.g., California v. Brown (1987) 479 U.S. 538, __ [93 L.Ed.2d 934, 940, 107 S.Ct. 837, 839].) "To determine how a reasonable juror could interpret an instruction, we 'must focus initially on the specific language challenged.' [Citation.] If the specific instruction fails . . . muster, we then review the instructions as a whole to see if the entire charge delivered a correct interpretation of the law." (Ibid.)

(20b) When we focus on the specific language challenged, we are unable to conclude that "the [factor (b)] instruction per se amounts to error. As we stated in Miranda, supra, 44 Cal.3d 57[, 105-106,] we doubt a reasonable jury would 'double count' under [factors] (a) and (b), in the absence of misleading argument by the prosecutor inviting it to do so." (People v. Kimble (1988) 44 Cal.3d 480, 505 [244 Cal.Rptr. 148, 749 P.2d 803] [construing identical instruction under 1977 death penalty law, former Pen. Code, § 190 et seq., Stats. 1977, ch. 316, § 5 et seq., p. 1256 et seq.].) In this case there was no such misleading argument.

Nor can we conclude that the factor (b) instruction was erroneous when we review the charge in its entirety. Elsewhere in the instructions the court made it plain that factor (b) was limited to crimes other than those of which defendant was convicted in this proceeding. Specifically, the court delivered the following charge to the jury.

"Evidence has been introduced for the showing that the defendant WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN has committed the following 'criminal activity' which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or the express or implied threat to use force of violence: [¶] The homicide of Marcus Graba . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of Donald Hyden . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of David Murillo . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of Charles Miranda . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of James McCabe [sic] . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of Ronald Gatlin . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of Harry Todd Turner . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of Steven Wood . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of Darin Lee Kendrich [sic] . . .[,] [¶] The homicide of Steven Wells . . .[,] [¶] Before you may consider any of such criminal activity as an aggravating circumstance in this case, you must first be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN did in fact commit such criminal activities. You may not consider any evidence of any other criminal activity, as an aggravating circumstance other than those which are set forth in this instruction." (Italics added.)

When the factor (b) instruction is considered in connection with the foregoing instruction, no error appears: the latter properly limits the former. (See People v. Rodrigues, supra, 42 Cal.3d at p. 787.)

6. Failure to Instruct on "Burden of Proof" in Determining Penalty

Defendant contends that the due process clause required the court to instruct the jurors that they might return a verdict of death only if they were persuaded beyond a reasonable doubt that the evidence in aggravation outweighed the evidence in mitigation and that death was the appropriate penalty. We rejected the substance of this claim, however, in People v. Rodrigues, supra, 42 Cal.3d 730, 778, footnote 15.

7. The Meaning of Statutory Sentencing Factor (j)

(22) Defendant contends in substance that contrary to the legislative intent informing section 190.3, the language of factor (j) of the instruction on the sentencing factors may have misled the jurors to consider his "age . . . at the time of the crime" as a circumstance in aggravation. The point is without merit.

As we recently held in People v. Lucky (1988) 45 Cal.3d 259, 302 [247 Cal.Rptr. 1, 753 P.2d 1052], "It is true that 'mere chronological age of itself should not be deemed an aggravating factor.' [Citations.] By the same token, mere chronological age of itself should not be deemed a mitigating factor. Age alone is plainly 'a factor over which one can exercise no control' [citation] and as such is not relevant to the issue of penalty. . . . [¶] In our view, the word 'age' in statutory sentencing factor (i) is used as a metonym for any age-related matter suggested by the evidence or by common experience or morality that might reasonably inform the choice of penalty."

Thus, we are of the opinion that the language of factor (i) of the instruction on the sentencing factors was not misleading. First, that language is identical to the relevant language of section 190.3. Second and more important, it would be understood by a reasonable juror in accordance with the interpretation of the statute set forth above. Accordingly, we hold that the court's instruction was not erroneous.[8]

8. Brown Error

(23) Defendant contends that former CALJIC No. 8.84.2, incorporating the section 190.3 mandatory sentencing language, may have misled the jurors to his prejudice as to the scope of their sentencing responsibility and discretion in violation of the constitutional principles set forth in People v. Brown (1985) 40 Cal.3d 512, 538-544 [220 Cal.Rptr. 637, 709 P.2d 440], reversed on other grounds sub nomine California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. 538 [93 L.Ed.2d 934, 107 S.Ct. 837].

Section 190.3 states in relevant part that "the trier of fact shall consider, take into account and be guided by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances referred to in this section, and shall impose a sentence of death if the trier of fact concludes that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances." (Italics added.)

[8]Defendant claims in substance that the prosecutor's comments on factor (i) were improper. Those remarks were as follows:

"The age of the defendant at the time of the crime. . . . [T]he defendant was born January 9, 1947. [¶] That means, as I count anyway, that the defendant was 32 when he killed Frank Fox and was 33 when he killed Rusty Rugh, Glen[n] Barber and Lawrence Story. [¶] I would think if a person was very young, that might be a mitigating factor. One might want to say a young person hasn't had the opportunity to experience in life those experiences which mature a person. And he may not be responsible. We see that all the time. [¶] My kids. Whenever they step out of line, you're saying to them, 'they are not really responsible for everything they do,' because they haven't—they haven't attained the maturity or the maturation that one would have as an adult. [¶] Here again, where someone is very old, one might say that would be a mitigating factor because there may be some type of mental impairment when one gets very old. [¶] But when one is 32 and 33, I would submit to you that that's an aggravating factor. That person has lived 32 years, a little over 32 years when he killed Frank Fox. He's had all of the chances he could have, and he still chose to kill Frank Fox, chose to murder him. [¶] The age in this case I would submit to you is an aggravating factor."

Under the analysis set forth above, we believe that the prosecutor's comments were proper and accordingly reject defendant's claim.

In Brown we held that section 190.3, as construed therein, was not unconstitutional. (40 Cal.3d at p. 538-544.) In conformity with settled constitutional principles, we interpreted the statutory language to require jurors to make " . . . 'an individualized determination on the basis of the character of the individual and the circumstances of the crime' " (id. at p. 540, italics deleted) and a " ' " . . . moral assessment of [the] facts . . . " ' " (ibid.)—and thereby decide "'which penalty is appropriate in the particular case'" (id. at p. 541).

Although in Brown we upheld the constitutionality of section 190.3, we nevertheless recognized that when delivered in an instruction the provision's mandatory sentencing language might mislead jurors as to the scope of their sentencing discretion and responsibility. (40 Cal.3d at p. 544, fn. 17.) Specifically, we believed that a juror might reasonably understand that language to define the penalty determination as "simply a finding of facts" (id. at p. 540) or "a mere mechanical counting of factors on each side of the imaginary 'scale' " (id. at p. 541). We also believed that a juror might reasonably understand the language to require him to vote for death if he finds that the evidence in aggravation outweighs the evidence in mitigation—even if he determines that death is not the appropriate penalty under all the circumstances. (See id. at pp. 540-544.) For this reason we directed trial courts thereafter to instruct jurors in conformity with the principles set forth therein, rather than in the bare words of the statute. (Ibid.) With respect to cases—such as the present—in which the jurors had been instructed in the statutory language, we announced that we would examine each such appeal on its merits to determine whether the jurors may have been misled to the defendant's prejudice. (Ibid.)

We turn now to the case at bar. After reviewing the record of the penalty phase in its entirety, we cannot conclude that the jurors may have been misled to defendant's prejudice by former CALJIC No. 8.84.2. We believe that they were adequately informed as to what they were to do, and how they were to proceed, in the determination of penalty, and that neither concern expressed in Brown was substantially implicated.

Defendant argues in effect that the prosecutor's closing argument made the potentially misleading language of former CALJIC No. 8.84.2 misleading in the context of this case. We are not persuaded.

The theme of the prosecutor's argument was that the evidence in aggravation was overwhelming and the evidence in mitigation was virtually nonexistent. In other words, the theme was that the evidence called for the penalty of death. Such a theme, of course, does not offend the principles of Brown.

We recognize that in setting forth and commenting on the instructions the prosecutor made the following statement. "The applicable standard is 'shall, shall.' In other words, if you find as a group that the aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating, then the law requires that you shall return a death penalty. If you find as a group that the mitigating factors outweigh the aggravation, then you shall return a verdict of life without parole. [¶] It doesn't give any discretion once you have found the factors either aggravating or mitigating. You have to do it one way or the other once you've found that to be true."

In spite of this erroneous comment, we do not believe that the prosecutor's argument made the language of former CALJIC No. 8.84.2 misleading in the context of this case. This is so because when the argument is considered as a whole this remark was short and isolated and hence was swallowed up in the theme that the evidence called for the penalty of death. Further, the remark did not go unchallenged. Defense counsel argued: "[I]n making the decision of whether or not you intend to kill Bill Bonin or whether you intend to allow him to live really requires not just an evaluation of all of the testimony in a very rote, numerical type fashion, but it involves a lot of soul-searching because each of you is a judge and in this particular case each of you is an executioner. [¶] So you have to look individually inside of yourself and look again at the evidence that you had during the penalty phase and look at it very carefully again, then look at the evidence that was presented during the—. I mean, that was the guilt phase. I'm sorry. [¶] But then look at the evidence that was presented during the penalty phase and look very deeply for the reasons as to why a person—and in this case, Mr. Bonin as he sits there—why he should live or why he should die. And that's why we're here."

In conclusion, on this record we find no Brown error.[9]

9. Instructions on Sympathy

(34) Defendant contends in substance that the court erred when it failed to instruct the jurors sua sponte that they (1) could consider sympathy in choosing the appropriate penalty and (2) should not be guided by the antisympathy instruction of CALJIC No. 1.00 which was given at the guilt phase. The point must be rejected.

[9]Defendant claims in substance that in making the comment quoted above the prosecutor intended to minimize the jurors' sense of responsibility in determining penalty and that he effectively did so. To be sure, we recognize that such a remark is constitutionally objectionable. (Cf. People v. Brown, supra, 40 Cal.3d at pp. 538-544 [discussing the mandatory sentencing language of § 190.3].) But on the facts of this case, we cannot conclude that the prosecutor intended to minimize the jurors' sense of responsibility: as noted above, the theme of the prosecutor's argument was that the evidence called for the penalty of death, not that the "law" required that sanction. Nor can we conclude that the prosecutor effectively minimized the jurors' sense of responsibility: as also noted above, the comment in question was short and isolated.

First, we believe that the court was not required to instruct on sympathy sua sponte. To the extent defendant argues that the jurors should have been instructed that they could indulge in sympathy unrelated to any of the evidence adduced at trial, he is unpersuasive. In California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. 538 [93 L.Ed.2d 934, 107 S.Ct. 837], the United States Supreme Court implied that such an instruction might unchannel the jury's guided discretion by allowing it to rely "on extraneous emotional factors, which, we think, would be far more likely to turn the jury against a capital defendant than for him." (Id. at p. ___ [93 L.Ed.2d at p. 941, 107 S.Ct. at p. 840].) It also suggested that insofar as such an instruction frees the jury to consider matters outside the record, it might frustrate "the Eighth Amendment's 'need for reliability in the determination that death is the appropriate punishment in a specific case.'" (Ibid.) Finally, the court implied that by freeing the jury's penalty considerations from record evidence, such an instruction might undermine "the availability of meaningful judicial review, another safeguard that improves the reliability of the sentencing process." (Ibid.)

To the extent defendant argues that the court should have instructed the jurors sua sponte that they could consider sympathy grounded in the evidence adduced at trial, he is also unpersuasive. We believe that the jury were adequately instructed on the point when the court told them that they could consider "any . . . factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation." Defendant may be understood to claim that the court should have provided an amplification or explanation of these words. But in the absence of a request, it was under no obligation to do so. (People v. Anderson, supra, 64 Cal.2d at p. 639.)

Second, we believe that the court was not required to instruct the jurors sua sponte that they should not be guided by the antisympathy instruction of CALJIC No. 1.00 given at the guilt phase.

Defendant argues as follows: at the guilt phase the court told the jurors that the instructions given during that stage of the trial "apply to this case" (italics added), and hence might have been understood to mean that the antisympathy instruction governed the penalty phase—if such was to be had—as well as the guilt phase. We are not persuaded.

By telling the jurors that they could consider, under statutory sentencing factor (k), "any . . . factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation," in the context of this case the court would have been understood to imply that they could exercise sympathy if they believed the facts allowed them to do so. The reasons for our conclusion are two. The defense had presented background and character evidence in an attempt to minimize defendant's personal culpability and thereby arouse sympathy. Moreover, in argument defense counsel had pleaded for sympathy from the jurors, and the prosecutor had acknowledged that they could consider sympathy under statutory sentencing factor (k).

In view of the foregoing, we believe that the guilt phase antisympathy instruction cannot be deemed to have carried over to the penalty phase. Accordingly, the court did not err by failing to caution the jurors not to be guided by that instruction. (See People v. Miranda, supra, 44 Cal.3d at p. 102; People v. Gates (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1168, 1209 [240 Cal.Rptr. 666, 743 P.2d 301]; People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at pp. 785-786.)[9]

C. Attack on the Constitutionality of the Sentence of Death

Defendant contends that the imposition of the sentence of death was "unconstitutionally arbitrary, discriminatory, and disproportionate, considering the facts of the offense and [his] personal characteristics." He presents, however, neither evidence nor argument in support of his point. Hence, we are compelled to reject the claim as not properly raised.

D. Attack on the Constitutionality of the 1978 Death Penalty Law

Defendant contends that the 1978 death penalty law is unconstitutional on various grounds. (25) (See fn. 9.) We rejected the substance of this claim in People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at pages 777-779.[9]

[9]Defendant may be understood to contend that on the facts of this case the giving of CALJIC No. 1.00 at the guilt phase may have misled the jurors "into believing that mitigating evidence about [his] background or character . . . must be ignored" (California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. at p. __ [93 L.Ed.2d at p. 942, 107 S.Ct. at p. 842] (conc. opn. of O'Connor, J.)) on the ground that they were not adequately instructed that they could and should take such evidence into consideration. The argument must be rejected because its ultimate premise is false. As noted above, the jurors were expressly instructed to "consider, take into account and be guided by" specified factors and "Any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime, or any other factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation." (Italics added.) Hence, the jurors did receive adequate instructions on background and character evidence.

[9]We are of the opinion that in view of the theories presented and the evidence introduced, the jury's guilt phase verdicts imply a finding that defendant actually killed, and intended to kill, the victims (Enmund v. Florida, supra, 458 U.S. at pp. 788-801 [73 L.Ed.2d at pp. 1145-1154]). Having reviewed the record in its entirety, we conclude that this finding is amply supported by the evidence and adopt it as our own. Accordingly, we hold that the imposition of the penalty of death on defendant does not violate the Eighth Amendment. (Cabana v. Bullock (1986) 474 U.S. 376, 386 [88 L.Ed.2d 704, 716, 106 S.Ct. 689].)

A51

PEOPLE v. BONIN
46 Cal.3d 659, — Cal.Rptr. —, — P.2d — [Aug. 1988]
709

stood to imply that they could exercise sympathy if they believed the facts allowed them to do so. The reasons for our conclusion are two. The defense had presented background and character evidence in an attempt to minimize defendant's personal culpability and thereby arouse sympathy. Moreover, in argument defense counsel had pleaded for sympathy from the jurors, and the prosecutor had acknowledged that they could consider sympathy under statutory sentencing factor (k).

In view of the foregoing, we believe that the guilt phase antisympathy instruction cannot be deemed to have carried over to the penalty phase. Accordingly, the court did not err by failing to caution the jurors not to be guided by that instruction. (See People v. Miranda, supra, 44 Cal.3d at p. 102; People v. Gates (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1168, 1209 [240 Cal.Rptr. 666, 743 P.2d 301]; People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at pp. 785-786.)[9]

C. Attack on the Constitutionality of the Sentence of Death

Defendant contends that the imposition of the sentence of death was "unconstitutionally arbitrary, discriminatory, and disproportionate, considering the facts of the offense and [his] personal characteristics." He presents, however, neither evidence nor argument in support of his point. Hence, we are compelled to reject the claim as not properly raised.

D. Attack on the Constitutionality of the 1978 Death Penalty Law

Defendant contends that the 1978 death penalty law is unconstitutional on various grounds. (25) (See fn. 9.) We rejected the substance of this claim in People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at pages 777-779.[9]

[9]Defendant may be understood to contend that on the facts of this case the giving of CALJIC No. 1.00 at the guilt phase may have misled the jurors "into believing that mitigating evidence about [his] background or character . . . must be ignored" (California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. at p. __ [93 L.Ed.2d at p. 942, 107 S.Ct. at p. 842] (conc. opn. of O'Connor, J.)) on the ground that they were not adequately instructed that they could and should take such evidence into consideration. The argument must be rejected because its ultimate premise is false. As noted above, the jurors were expressly instructed to "consider, take into account and be guided by" specified factors and "Any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime, or any other factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation." (Italics added.) Hence, the jurors did receive adequate instructions on background and character evidence.

[9]We are of the opinion that in view of the theories presented and the evidence introduced, the jury's guilt phase verdicts imply a finding that defendant actually killed, and intended to kill, the victims (Enmund v. Florida, supra, 458 U.S. at pp. 788-801 [73 L.Ed.2d at pp. 1145-1154]). Having reviewed the record in its entirety, we conclude that this finding is amply supported by the evidence and adopt it as our own. Accordingly, we hold that the imposition of the penalty of death on defendant does not violate the Eighth Amendment. (Cabana v. Bullock (1986) 474 U.S. 376, 386 [88 L.Ed.2d 704, 716, 106 S.Ct. 689].)

A52

The judgment is affirmed.

Lucas, C. J., Panelli, J., Eagleson, J., and Kaufman, J., concurred.

BROUSSARD, J.—I concur in the result reached by the majority opinion, but respectfully object to its discussion of penalty phase issue number 3, the prosecutor's erroneous argument that the absence of mitigating evidence renders a factor aggravating.

People v. Davenport (1985) 41 Cal.3d 247, 289-290 [221 Cal.Rptr. 794, 710 P.2d 861], first established that the absence of evidence of a mitigating factors does not transform it into an aggravating factor. In the present case, tried before Davenport, apparently both prosecutor and defense counsel were unaware that such a rule might be established. Thus the prosecutor incorrectly argued that mitigating factors unsupported by evidence were aggravating factors, and defense counsel did not object.

The majority begin their discussion of this issue by noting that defendant's failure to object bars review of this issue, and that the prosecutor's misstatement of the law cannot be characterized as misconduct. This portion of the majority's discussion is pointless, for this court has unanimously resolved that in cases of this type it will review the merits of defendant's contention despite trial counsel's failure to object or the prosecutor's putative good faith. As we explained in People v. Lucero (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1006, 1031 [245 Cal.Rptr. 185, 750 P.2d 1342] footnote 15, "[b]ecause this case was tried before . . . Davenport, we do not describe the prosecutor's mistaken argument as misconduct. For the same reason, we could not treat a defense counsel's failure to object as incompetence or waiver. Our concern is not with the ethics of the prosecutor or the performance of the defense, but with the impact of the erroneous interpretation of the law on the jury."

The majority accordingly turn to the merits, but their discussion betrays a misunderstanding of the significance of the prosecutor's remarks. They conclude that since the trial court directed the jury to consider the factors only "if applicable," and since we must presume that the jury followed the instructions, we should further presume that the jurors rejected the erroneous conception urged by the prosecutor. This is nonsense. The vice of Davenport error is that it tells the jury that factors are applicable when as a matter of law they are not and that factors are aggravating when as a matter of law they are neutral or mitigating. Nothing in the judge's instructions would dispel such erroneous impressions. The trial judge did not tell the jurors how to determine which factors were applicable, that many factors were inapplicable, or that absence of evidence to support a mitigating factor did not transform it into an applicable aggravating factor. Consequently the prosecutor's erroneous argument would not strike the jury as inconsistent with the instructions. We cannot presume that the jurors rejected a plausible prosecution argument and instead adopted a view advanced by neither court nor counsel.

A53

Indeed the instructions to the jury to consider sentencing factors only "if applicable," and to follow the law as stated by the judge, are standard instructions given in all capital cases. To hold that such instructions give rise to a presumption that the jury rejected erroneous prosecution argument would give the prosecutor carte blanche to argue whatever he chose. While we have sometimes found Davenport error nonprejudicial, our cases have carefully analyzed the impact of the prosecutor's argument in light of the aggravating and mitigating evidence; none has presumed the absence of prejudice from form instructions. (See, e.g., People v. Ghent (1987) 43 Cal.3d 739, 775 [239 Cal.Rptr. 82, 739 P.2d 1250]; People v. Allen (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1222, 1284 [232 Cal.Rptr. 849, 729 P.2d 115].)

After making such an analysis, however, I agree with the majority that on the facts of this case the error was not prejudicial. Defendant was convicted of four murders in this case, and the penalty phase evidence showed his guilt of ten more. Under these circumstances, I do not believe it reasonably possible that, in the absence of the erroneous prosecution argument, the jury would have returned a different verdict. I therefore concur in the judgment of affirmance.

Arguelles, J., concurred.

A54

DOCKETED
SF S.A.
DATE

ORDER DUE
October 19, 1988

ORDER DENYING REHEARING

Crim. No. S004565
23286

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
IN BANK

PEOPLE, Respondent

v.

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, Appellant

SUPREME COURT
FILED
OCT 19 1988
Clerk
DEPUTY

Appellant's petition

for rehearing DENIED.

Chief Justice

A55

Supreme Court of the United States

No. A-457

William George Bonin,

Petitioner

v.

California

ORDER

UPON CONSIDERATION of the application of counsel for the petitioner,

IT IS ORDERED that the time for filing a petition for a writ of certiorari in the above-entitled case, be and the same is hereby, extended to and including January 17, 1989.

/s/ Sandra Day O'Connor
Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States

Dated this 8th day of December, 1988.

A56

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Amendment XIV of the United States Constitution provides, inter alia, that:

> "Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws."

Amendment VIII of the United States Constitution provides that:

> "Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted."

CALIFORNIA PENAL CODE

§ 190. Punishment for murder.
§ 190.1. Procedure in case involving death penalty.
§ 190.2. Mandatory penalty upon special findings.
§ 190.3. Determination as to imposition of death penalty or life imprisonment upon finding of special circumstance. Admission of evidence.
§ 190.4. Special finding of truth of each alleged special circumstance.
§ 190.5. Death penalty for person under age 18 prohibited.

§ 190. [Punishment for murder.] Every person guilty of murder in the first degree shall suffer death, confinement in state prison for life without possibility of parole, or confinement in the state prison for a term of 25 years to life. The penalty to be applied shall be determined as provided in Sections 190.1, 190.2, 190.3, 190.4, and 190.5.

Every person guilty of murder in the second degree shall suffer confinement in the state prison for a term of 15 years to life.

The provisions of Article 2.5 (commencing with Section 29[illegible]) of Chapter 7 of Title 1 of Part 3 of the Penal Code shall apply to reduce any minimum term of 25 or 15 years in a state prison imposed pursuant to this section, but such person shall not otherwise be released on parole prior to such time. [Former section repealed and new section added by initiative adopted at the General Election, November 7, 1978.]

§ 190.1. [Procedure in case involving death penalty.] A case in which the death penalty may be imposed pursuant to this chapter shall be tried in separate phases as follows:

(a) The question of the defendant's guilt shall be first determined. If the trier of fact finds the defendant guilty of first degree murder, it shall at the same time determine the truth of all special circumstances charged as enumerated in Section 190.2 except for a special circumstance charged pursuant to paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of Section 190.2 where it is alleged that the defendant had been convicted in a prior proceeding of the offense of murder in the first or second degree.

(b) If the defendant is found guilty of first degree murder and one of the special circumstances is charged pursuant to paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of Section 190.2 which charges that the defendant had been convicted in a prior proceeding of the offense of murder of the first or second degree, there shall thereupon be further proceedings on the question of the truth of such special circumstance.

(c) If the defendant is found guilty of first degree murder and one or more special circumstances as enumerated in Section 190.2 has been charged and found to be true, his entry on any plea of not guilty by reason of insanity under Section 1026 shall be determined as provided in Section 190.4. If he is found to be sane, there shall thereupon by further proceedings on the question of the penalty to be imposed. Such proceedings shall be conducted in accordance with the provisions of Section 190.3 and 190.4. [Former section repealed and new section added by initiative adopted at the General Election, November 7, 1978.]

§ 190.2. [Mandatory penalty upon special findings.] (a) The penalty for a defendant found guilty of murder in the first degree shall be death or confinement in state prison for a term of life without the possibility of parole in any case in which one or more of the following special circumstances has been charged and specially found under Section 190.4, to be true:

(1) The murder was intentional and carried out for financial gain.

(2) The defendant was previously convicted of murder in the first degree or second degree. For the purpose of this paragraph an offense committed in another jurisdiction which if committed in California would be punishable as first or second degree murder shall be deemed murder in the first or second degree.

(3) The defendant has in this proceeding been convicted of more than one offense of murder in the first or second degree.

(4) The murder was committed by means of a destructive device, bomb, or explosive planted, hidden or concealed in any place, area, dwelling, building or structure, and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that his act or acts would create a great risk of death to a human being or human beings.

(5) The murder was committed for the purpose of avoiding or preventing a lawful arrest or to perfect, or attempt to perfect an escape from lawful custody.

(6) The murder was committed by means of a destructive device, bomb, or explosive that the defendant mailed or delivered, attempted to mail or deliver, or cause to be mailed or delivered and the defendant knew or reasonably should have known that his act or acts would create a great risk of death to a human being or human beings.

(7) The victim was a peace officer as defined in Section 830.1, 830.2, 830.3, 830.31, 830.35, 830.36, 830.4, 830.5, 830.5a, 830.6, 830.10, 830.11 or 830.12, who, while engaged in the course of the performance of his duties was intentionally killed, and such defendant knew or reasonably should have known that such victim was a peace officer engaged in the performance of his duties; or the victim was a peace officer as defined in the above enumerated sections of the Penal Code, or a former peace officer under any of such sections, and was intentionally killed in retaliation for the performance of his official duties.

(8) The victim was a federal law enforcement officer or agent, who, while engaged in the course of the performance of his duties was intentionally killed, and such defendant knew or reasonably should have known that such victim was a federal law enforcement officer or agent, engaged in the performance of his duties; or the victim was a federal law enforcement officer or agent, and was intentionally killed in retaliation for the performance of his official duties.

(9) The victim was a fireman as defined in Section 245.1, who while engaged in the course of the performance of his duties was intentionally killed, and such defendant knew or reasonably should have known that such victim was a fireman engaged in the performance of his duties.

(10) The victim was a witness to a crime who was intentionally killed for the purpose of preventing his testimony in any criminal proceeding, and the killing was not committed during the commission, or attempted commission or the crime to which he was a witness; or the victim was a witness to a crime and was intentionally killed in retaliation for his testimony in any criminal proceeding.

(11) The victim was a prosecutor or assistant prosecutor or a former prosecutor or assistant prosecutor of any local or state prosecutor's office in this state or any other state, or a federal prosecutor's office and the murder was carried out in retaliation for or to prevent the performance of the victim's official duties.

(12) The victim was a judge or former judge of any court of record in the local, state or federal system in the State of California or in any other state of the United States and the murder was carried out in retaliation for or to prevent the performance of the victim's official duties.

(13) The victim was an elected or appointed official or former official of the Federal Government, a local or State government of California, or of any local or state government of any other state in the United States and the killing was intentionally carried out in retaliation for or to prevent the performance of the victim's official duties.

(14) The murder was especially heinous, atrocious, or cruel, manifesting exceptional depravity, as utilized in this section, the phrase especially heinous, atrocious or cruel manifesting exceptional depravity means a conscienceless, or pitiless crime which is unnecessarily torturous to the victim.

(15) The defendant intentionally killed the victim while lying in wait.

(16) The victim was intentionally killed because of his race, color, religion, nationality or country of origin.

(17) The murder was committed while the defendant was engaged in or was an accomplice in the commission of, attempted commission of, or the immediate flight after committing or attempting to commit the following felonies:

(i) Robbery in violation of Section 211.

(ii) Kidnapping in violation of Sections 207 and 209.

(iii) Rape in violation of Section 261.

(iv) Sodomy in violation of Section 286.

(v) The performance of a lewd or lascivious act upon person of a child under the age of 14 in violation of Section 288.

(vi) Oral copulation in violation of Section 288a.

(vii) Burglary in the first or second degree in violation of Section 460.

(viii) Arson in violation of Section 447.

(ix) Train wrecking in violation of Section 219.

(18) The murder was intentional and involved the infliction of torture. For the purpose of this section torture requires proof of the infliction of extreme physical pain no matter how long its duration.

(19) The defendant intentionally killed the victim by the administration of poison.

(b) Every person whether or not the actual killer found guilty of intentionally aiding, abetting, counseling, commanding, inducing, soliciting, requesting, or assisting any actor in the commission of murder in the first degree shall suffer death or confinement in state prison for a term of life without the possibility of parole, in any case in which one or more of the special circumstances enumerated in paragraphs (1), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7), (8), (9), (10), (11), (12), (13), (14), (15), (16), (17), (18), or (19) of subdivision (a) of this section has been charged and specially found under Section 190.4 to be true.

The penalty shall be determined as provided in Sections 190.1, 190.2, 190.3, 190.4, and 190.5. [Former section repealed and new section added by initiative adopted at the General Election, November 7, 1978.]

§ 190.3 [Determination as to imposition of death penalty or life imprisonment upon finding of special circumstance: Admission of evidence.] If the defendant has been found guilty of murder in the first degree, and a special circumstance has been charged and found to be true, or if the defendant may be subject to the death penalty after having been found guilty of violating subdivision (a) of Section 1672 of the Military and Veterans Code or Sections 37, 128, 219, or 4500 of this code, the trier of fact shall determine whether the penalty shall be death or confinement in state prison for a term of life without the possibility of parole. In the proceedings on the question of penalty, evidence may be presented by both the people and the defendant as to any matter relevant to aggravation, mitigation, and sentence including, but not limited to, the nature and circumstances of the present offense, any prior felony conviction or convictions whether or not such conviction or convictions involved a crime of violence, the presence or absence of other criminal activity by the defendant which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or which involved the express or implied threat to use force or violence, and the defendant's character, background, history, mental condition and physical condition.

However, no evidence shall be admitted regarding other criminal activity by the defendant which did not involve the use or attempted use of force or violence or which did not involve the express or implied threat to use force or violence. As used in this section, criminal activity does not require a conviction.

However, in no event shall evidence of prior criminal activity be admitted for an offense for which the defendant was prosecuted and acquitted. The restriction on the use of this evidence is intended to apply only to proceedings pursuant to this section and is not intended to affect statutory or decisional law allowing such evidence to be used in any other proceedings.

Except for evidence in proof of the offense or special circumstances which subject a defendant to the death penalty, no evidence may be presented by the prosecution in aggravation unless notice of the evidence to be introduced has been given to the defendant within a reasonable period of time as determined by the court, prior to trial. Evidence may be introduced without such notice in rebuttal to evidence introduced by the defendant in mitigation.

The trier of fact shall be instructed that a sentence of confinement to state prison for a term of life without the possibility of parole may in future after sentence is imposed, be commuted or modified to a sentence that includes the possibility of parole by the Governor of the State of California.

In determining the penalty, the trier of fact shall take into account any of the following factors if relevant:

(a) The circumstances of the crime of which the defendant was convicted in the present proceeding and the existence of any special circumstances found to be true pursuant to Section 190.1.

(b) The presence or absence of criminal activity by the defendant which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or the express or implied threat to use force or violence.

(c) The presence or absence of any prior felony conviction.

(d) Whether or not the offense was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance.

(e) Whether or not the victim was a participant in the defendant's homicidal conduct or consented to the homicidal act.

(f) Whether or not the offense was committed under circumstances which the defendant reasonably believed to be a moral justification or extenuation for his conduct.

(g) Whether or not defendant acted under extreme duress or under the substantial domination of another person.

(h) Whether or not at the time of the offense the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was impaired as a result of mental disease or defect, or the affects of intoxication.

(i) The age of the defendant at the time of the crime.

(j) Whether or not the defendant was an accomplice to the offense and his participation in the commission of the offense was relatively minor.

(k) Any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime.

After having heard and received all of the evidence, and after having heard and considered the arguments of counsel, the trier of fact shall consider, take into account and be guided by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances referred to in this section, and shall impose a sentence of death if the trier of fact concludes that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances; outweigh the aggravating circumstances the trier of fact shall impose a sentence of confinement in state prison for a term of life without the possibility of parole. [Former section repealed and new section added by initiative adopted at the General Election, November 7, 1978.]

§ 190.4. [Special finding of truth of each alleged special circumstance.] (a) Whenever special circumstances as enumerated in Section 190.2 are alleged and the trier of fact finds the defendant guilty of first degree murder, the trier of fact shall also make a special finding on the truth of each alleged special circumstance. The determination of the truth of any or all of the special circumstances shall be made by the trier of fact on the evidence presented at the trial or at the hearing held pursuant to Subdivision (b) of Section 190.1.

In case of a reasonable doubt as to whether a special circumstance is true, the defendant is entitled to a finding that is not true. The trier of fact shall make a special finding that each special circumstance charged is either true or not true. Whenever a special circumstance requires proof of the commission or attempted commission of a crime, such crime shall be charged and proved pursuant to the general law applying to the trial and conviction of the crime.

If the defendant was convicted by the court sitting without a jury, the trier of fact shall be a jury unless a jury is waived by the defendant and by the people, in which case the trier of fact shall be the court. If the defendant was convicted by a plea of guilty, the trier of fact shall be a jury unless a jury is waived by the defendant and by the people.

If the trier of fact finds that any one or more of the special circumstances enumerated in Section 190.2 as charged is true, there shall be a separate penalty hearing, and neither the finding that any of the remaining special circumstances charged is not true, nor if the trier of fact is a jury, the inability of the jury to agree on the issue of the truth or untruth of any of the remaining special circumstances charged, shall prevent the holding of a separate penalty hearing.

In any case in which the defendant has been found guilty by a jury, and the jury has been unable to reach an unanimous verdict that one or more of the special circumstances charged are true, and does not reach a unanimous verdict that all the special circumstances charged are not true, the court shall dismiss the jury and shall order a new jury impaneled to try the issues, but the issue of guilt shall not be tried by such jury, nor shall such jury retry the issue of the truth of any of the special circumstances which were found by an unanimous verdict of the previous jury to be untrue. If such new jury is unable to reach the unanimous verdict that one or more of the special circumstances it is trying are true, the court shall dismiss the jury and in the court's discretion shall either order a new jury impaneled to try the issues the previous jury was unable to reach the unanimous verdict on, or impose a punishment of confinement in state prison for a term of 25 years.

(b) If defendant was convicted by the court sitting without a jury the trier of fact at the penalty hearing shall be a jury unless a jury is waived by the defendant and the people, in which case the trier of fact shall be the court. If the defendant was convicted by a plea of guilty, the trier of fact shall be a jury unless a jury is waived by the defendant and the people.

If the trier of fact is a jury and has been unable to reach a unanimous verdict as to what the penalty shall be, the court shall dismiss the jury and shall order a new jury impaneled to try the issue as to what the penalty shall be. If such new jury is unable to reach a unanimous verdict as to what the penalty shall be, the court in its discretion shall either order a new jury or impose a punishment of confinement in state prison for a term of life without the possibility of parole.

(c) If the trier of fact which convicted the defendant of a crime for which he may be subject to the death penalty was a jury, the same jury shall consider any plea of not guilty by reason of insanity pursuant to Section 1026, the truth of any special circumstances which may be alleged, and the penalty to be applied, unless for good cause shown the court discharges that jury in which case a new jury shall be drawn. The court shall state facts in support of the finding of good cause upon the record and cause them to be entered into the minutes.

(d) In any case in which the defendant may be subject to the death penalty, evidence presented at any prior phase of the trial, including any proceeding w Jer a plea of not guilty by reason of insanity pursuant to Section 1026 shall be considered an any subsequent phase of the trial, if the trier of fact of the prior phase is the same trier of fact at the subsequent phase.

(e) In every case in which the trier of fact has returned a verdict or finding imposing the death penalty, the defendant shall be deemed to have made an application for modification of such verdict or finding pursuant to Subdivision 7 of Section 11. In ruling on the application, the judge shall review the evidence, consider, take into account, and be guided by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances referred to in Section 190.3, and shall make a determination as to whether the jury's findings and verdicts that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances are contrary to law or the evidence presented. The judge shall state on the record the reasons for his findings.

The judge shall set forth the reasons for his ruling on the application and direct that they be entered on the Clerk's minutes. The denial of the modification of the death penalty verdict pursuant to subdivision (7) of Section 1181 shall be reviewed on the defendant's automatic appeal pursuant to subdivision (b) of Section 1239. The granting of the application shall be reviewed on the People's appeal pursuant to paragraph (6). [Former section repealed and new section added by initiative adopted at the General Election, November 7, 1978.]

In determining which penalty is to be imposed on defendant, you shall consider all of the evidence which has been received during any part of the trial of this case, except as you may be hereafter instructed. You shall consider, take into account and be guided by the following factors, if applicable:

(a) The circumstances of the crimesof which the defendant was convicted in the present proceeding and the existence of any special circumstances found to be true.

(b) The presence or absence of criminal activity by the defendant which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or the expressed or implied threat to use force or violence.

(c) The presence or absence of any prior felony conviction.

(d) Whether or not the offense was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance.

(e) Whether or not the victim was a participant in the defendant's homicidal conduct or consented to the homicidal act.

(f) Whether or not the offense was committed under circumstances which the defendant reasonably believed to be a moral justification or extenuation for his conduct.

(g) Whether or not the defendant acted under extreme duress or under the substantial domination of another person.

(h) Whether or not at the time of the offense the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was impaired as a result of mental disease or defect or the effects of intoxication.

(i) The age of the defendant at the time of the crime.

(j) Whether or not the defendant was an accomplice to the offense and his participation in the commission of the offense was relatively minor.

(k) Any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime, or any other factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation

CALJIC NO. 8.84.1

Exact Copy

Steven Lee

It is now your duty to determine which of the two penalties, death or confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole, shall be imposed on defendant.

After having heard all of the evidence, and after having heard and considered the arguments of counsel, you shall consider, take into account and be guided by the applicable factors of aggravating and mitigating circumstances upon which you have been instructed.

If you conclude that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of death. However, if you determine that the mitigating circumstances outweigh the aggravating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of confinement in the state prison for life without the possibility of parole.

You shall now retire and select one of your number to act as foreman, who will preside over your deliberations. In order to make a determination as to the penalty, all twelve jurors must agree.

Any verdict that you reach must be dated and signed by your foreman on a form that will be provided and then you shall return with it to this courtroom.

CALJIC NO. 8.84.2

Exact Copy, except adaptations

Gwen Lee

249

A67

4/1

(THE FOLLOWING PROCEEDINGS WERE HAD IN OPEN COURT IN THE PRESENCE OF THE JURY:)

THE COURT: THE RECORD WILL REFLECT THAT ALL JURORS AND ALTERNATE JURORS ARE NOW IN THE JURY BOX.

WE ARE NOW PREPARED TO PROCEED WITH ARGUMENT.

YOU MAY PROCEED, MR. BROWN.

MR. BROWN: THANK YOU, YOUR HONOR. LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, ONCE AGAIN WE HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO GO OVER THE LAW AND LOOK AT THE FACTS AS WE WANT TO APPLY THOSE TO THE LAW.

IN SOME ASPECTS, THE INSTRUCTIONS WITH RESPECT TO THIS PHASE AS ARE AS COMPLICATED AS THE INSTRUCTIONS THAT YOU HEARD BEFORE. AND SO LET ME TAKE SOME TIME TO GO INTO THOSE BECAUSE I THINK IF WE PUT THEM INTO SEVERAL DIFFERENT LOGICAL LINES OF THOUGHT, THEY DO MAKE MORE SENSE.

WE SPENT THE LAST TWO DAYS ALMOST SOLIDLY TRYING TO GET THESE THINGS TOGETHER. SO THEY'VE BEEN REWORKED AND REWORKED, AND HOPEFULLY THEY WILL MAKE SOME SENSE.

THE COURT WILL START WITH THE NORMAL INSTRUCTIONS THAT YOU'VE HEARD BEFORE, AND I WON'T COMMENT ON THOSE. THOSE ARE THE GENERAL ORDINARY THINGS, HOW YOU'RE TO TREAT THE EVIDENCE, STIPULATIONS AND THINGS LIKE THAT.

AND THEN GETTING DOWN TO THE MEAT OF THIS PHASE, THE COURT WILL INSTRUCT YOU AS FOLLOWS. THIS IS JUST A GENERAL INSTRUCTION:

THE DEFENDANT IN THIS CASE HAS BEEN FOUND GUILTY

A68

OF MURDER OF THE FIRST DEGREE. THE CHARGE THAT THE MURDER WAS COMMITTED UNDER ONE OR MORE OF THE SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCE HAS BEEN SPECIALLY FOUND TO BE TRUE.

IT IS THE LAW OF THIS STATE THAT THE PENALTY FOR A DEFENDANT FOUND GUILTY OF MURDER OF THE FIRST DEGREE SHALL BE DEATH OR CONFINEMENT IN THE STATE PRISON FOR LIFE WITHOUT POSSIBILITY OF PAROLE IN ANY CASE IN WHICH THE SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCE CHARGED IN THIS CASE HAS BEEN SPECIFICALLY FOUND TO BE TRUE.

UNDER THE LAW OF THIS STATE, YOU MUST NOW DETERMINE WHICH OF THE SAID PENALTIES SHALL BE IMPOSED ON THE DEFENDANT AS TO EACH OF THE FOUR MURDER CONVICTIONS IN THIS CASE.

HERE'S THE FIRST ISSUE THEN. YOU'LL RECEIVE FOUR SEPARATE SERIES OF VERDICTS. WITH RESPECT TO THESE VERDICTS, ONE WILL BE THAT YOU FIND IT TO BE TRUE THAT THE AGGRAVATION OUTWEIGHS THE MITIGATION.

THE OTHER ONE WILL BE THAT YOU FIND THAT THE MITIGATION OUTWEIGHS AGGRAVATION. YOU'LL RECEIVE ONE OF EACH SET FOR EACH OF THE FOUR MURDERS THAT YOU FOUND TO BE TRUE IN THE FIRST DEGREE HERE. OKAY.

NOW, THIS IS AN INSTRUCTION THAT I'D LIKE TO CONCENTRATE ON WITH RESPECT TO THE ELEMENTS THAT WE'RE TALKING ABOUT HERE. AND THIS IS THE STANDARD THAT YOU WILL JUDGE THE EVIDENCE BY THAT YOU'VE HEARD, NOT ONLY THE EVIDENCE THAT YOU HEARD HERE IN THE PENALTY PHASE, BUT THE EVIDENCE THAT YOU HEARD IN THE GUILT PHASE.

AS YOU CAN RECALL BACK TO WHAT, FIVE, SIX MONTHS AGO WHEN WE WERE IN THE JURY ROOM TALKING ABOUT THIS, AT THIS POINT IN TIME YOU CAN CONSIDER ALL OF THE EVIDENCE THAT YOU'VE HEARD WITH RESPECT TO THESE FACTORS, WITH SOME EXCEPTION, AND WE'LL GET INTO THOSE.

I'VE PUT THESE ELEMENTS ON THE BOARD IN A VERY SHORTHAND-TYPE FORM, JUST TO GIVE YOU AN IDEA OF THE DIFFERENT ELEMENTS THAT WE'RE TALKING ABOUT. THIS INSTRUCTION IS AS FOLLOWS:

IN DETERMINING WHICH PENALTY IS TO BE IMPOSED ON THE DEFENDANT, YOU SHALL CONSIDER ALL OF THE EVIDENCE WHICH HAS BEEN RECEIVED DURING ANY PART OF THE TRIAL OF THIS CASE EXCEPT AS YOU MAY BE HEREAFTER INSTRUCTED.

YOU SHALL CONSIDER, TAKE INTO ACCOUNT AND BE GUIDED BY THE FOLLOWING FACTORS, IF APPLICABLE:

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10,066; NOTHING OMITTED.)

5-1

THE FIRST ONE, THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE OFFENSE OF THE CRIMES THAT YOU FOUND THE DEFENDANT GUILTY OF AT THIS POINT. THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CRIME OF WHICH THE DEFENDANT WAS CONVICTED IN THE PRESENT PROCEEDING AND THE EXISTENCE OF ANY SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCE FOUND TO BE TRUE.

SO THIS MEANS THAT WITH RESPECT TO THIS FIRST FACTOR, YOU CAN GO BACK IN AND LOOK AT THE MURDERS OF FRANK FOX, GLEN BARKER, RUSSELL RUGH AND LAWRENCE SHARP AND SEE WHETHER YOU THINK THOSE ARE AGGRAVATING OR MITIGATING TYPE FACTORS WITH RESPECT TO THE DEFENDANT.

THE NEXT FACTOR, AND IN RESPECT TO THAT FACTOR, THAT'S ALL THAT YOU SHOULD CONSIDER, WHERE YOU HAVE TO KIND OF KEEP THIS KIND OF PIGEONHOLED SO YOU JUST CONSIDER THOSE FOUR KILLINGS AND THE EVIDENCE RELATING TO THOSE KILLINGS.

NUMBER TWO, THE PRESENCE OR ABSENCE OF CRIMINAL ACTIVITY BY THE DEFENDANT WHICH INVOLVES THE USE OR ATTEMPTED USE OF FORCE OR VIOLENCE OR EXPRESSED OR IMPLIED TO USE FORCE OR VIOLENCE.

NOW, WE'RE SPECIFICALLY TALKING ABOUT THE OTHER MURDER CHARGES THAT YOU'VE HEARD IN HERE WITH RESPECT TO THE LAST TWO WEEKS OR SO, THAT EVIDENCE, AND WE'LL GET INTO THIS IN MORE DETAIL IN LATER INSTRUCTIONS.

NUMBER TWO, IS THE PRESENCE OR ABSENCE OF ANY PRIOR FELONY CONVICTIONS. THAT'S NUMBER THREE, EXCUSE ME.

NUMBER FOUR, WHETHER OR NOT THE OFFENSE WAS COMMITTED WHILE THE DEFENDANT WAS UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF

A71

5-2

EXTREME MENTAL OR EMOTIONAL DISTURBANCE.

THE NEXT ONE IS WHETHER OR NOT THE VICTIM WAS A PARTICIPANT IN THE DEFENDANT'S HOMICIDAL CONDUCT OR CONSENTED TO THE HOMICIDAL ACT.

THE NEXT ONE WOULD BE WHETHER OR NOT THE OFFENSE WAS COMMITTED UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH THE DEFENDANT REASONABLY BELIEVED TO BE A MORAL JUSTIFICATION OR EXTENUATION FOR HIS CONDUCT.

WHETHER OR NOT THE DEFENDANT ACTED UNDER EXTREME DURESS OR UNDER SUBSTANTIAL DOMINATION OF ANOTHER PERSON.

THE NEXT ONE WOULD BE WHETHER OR NOT AT THE TIME OF THE OFFENSE THE CAPACITY OF THE DEFENDANT TO APPRECIATE THE CRIMINALITY OF HIS CONDUCT OR TO CONFORM HIS CONDUCT TO THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE LAW WAS IMPAIRED AS A RESULT OF MENTAL DISEASE OR DEFECT, OR DEFECT -- OR THE EFFECTS OF INTOXICATION. IN OTHER WORDS, WAS THE DEFENDANT'S CAPACITY TO KNOW THAT IT WAS WRONG IMPAIRED BECAUSE HE DRANK A LOT OR BECAUSE OF MENTAL DEFECT, THAT TYPE OF THING.

THE NEXT ELEMENT WOULD BE THE AGE OF THE DEFENDANT AT THE TIME OF THE CRIME.

THE NEXT ELEMENT IS WHETHER OR NOT THE DEFENDANT WAS AN ACCOMPLICE TO THE OFFENSE AND HIS PARTICIPATION IN THE COMMISSION OF THE OFFENSE WAS RELATIVELY MINOR.

AND THEN FINALLY IS A CATCH-ALL AREA WHERE ANY OTHER CIRCUMSTANCE WHICH EXTENUATES THE GRAVITY OF THE CRIME, EVEN THOUGH IT IS NOT A LEGAL EXCUSE FOR THE CRIME.

A72

5-3

THOSE ARE THE ELEMENTS THAT YOU SHOULD CONSIDER AS BENCH MARKS IN DECIDING THIS CASE. THAT'S BASICALLY THE LAW.

THE REST OF THESE INSTRUCTION IS GOING TO TELL YOU HOW TO TO APPLY THE FACTS TO THAT INSTRUCTION. OKAY.

NOW, THERE ARE TWO AREAS THAT WE TREAT DIFFERENTLY THAN THE OTHER AREAS THAT WE'VE JUST TALKED ABOUT AND THOSE AREAS ARE CRIMINAL ACTIVITY AND PRIOR FELONY CONVICTIONS. SO THERE ARE GOING TO BE SPECIAL RULES THAT YOU MUST FOLLOW WITH RESPECT TO EVIDENCE OF CRIMINAL ACTIVITY AND PRIOR FELONY CONVICTIONS, AND THESE ARE AS FOLLOWS. THIS INSTRUCTION DEALS WITH CRIMINAL ACTIVITY.

EVIDENCE HAS BEEN INTRODUCED FOR THE PURPOSE OF SHOWING THAT THE DEFENDANT, WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, HAS COMMITTED THE FOLLOWING CRIMINAL ACTIVITY WHICH INVOLVED THE USE OR ATTEMPTED USE OF FORCE OR VIOLENCE OR THE EXPRESS OR IMPLIED THREAT TO USE FORCE OR VIOLENCE.

AND NOW WHAT I AM GOING TO DO AND WHAT THIS INSTRUCTION WILL DO IS LIST THE CRIMINAL ACTIVITY THAT YOU CAN CONSIDER IN THIS RESPECT FOR THIS ONE ISSUE, THIS ONE POINT. YOU CANNOT CONSIDER ANY OTHER ACTIVITY AS CRIMINAL ACTIVITY OTHER THAN THIS.

THE HOMICIDE OF MARCUS GRABS ON OR ABOUT AUGUST 6TH, 1979; THE HOMICIDE OF DONALD HYDEN ON OR ABOUT AUGUST 27TH, 1979; THE HOMICIDE OF DAVID MURILLO ON OR ABOUT SEPTEMBER 12TH, 1979.

6/1

THE HOMOCIDE OF CHARLES MIRANDA ON OR ABOUT FEBRUARY 3RD, 1980.

THE HOMOCIDE OF JAMES MACABE ON OR ABOUT FEBRUARY 3RD, 1980.

THE HOMOCIDE OF RONALD GATLIN ON OR ABOUT MARCH 15TH, 1980.

THE HOMOCIDE OF HARRY TODD TURNER ON OR ABOUT MARCH 25TH, 1980.

THE HOMOCIDE OF STEVEN WOOD ON OR ABOUT APRIL 11, 1980.

THE HOMOCIDE OF DARIN LEE KENDRICK ON OR ABOUT APRIL 30TH, 1980.

AND FINALLY, THE HOMOCIDE OF STEVEN WELLS ON OR ABOUT JUNE 3RD, 1980.

BEFORE YOU MAY CONSIDER ANY OF SUCH CRIMINAL ACTIVITY AS AN AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE IN THIS CASE, YOU MUST BE SATISFIED BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT THAT THE DEFENDANT, WILLIAM GEORGE BROWN (SIC), DID IN FACT COMMIT SUCH CRIMINAL ACTIVITIES.

YOU MAY NOT CONSIDER ANY EVIDENCE OF ANY OTHER CRIMINAL ACTIVITY AS AN AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE OTHER THAN THOSE WHICH ARE SET FORTH IN THIS INSTRUCTION.

OKAY. NOW, THIS IS THE REASON THAT THIS PARTICULAR AREA, CRIMINAL ACTIVITY, IS DIFFERENT. AND IT IS BECAUSE, ONE, YOU CAN ONLY CONSIDER THESE THINGS THAT I HAVE READ TO YOU AND THAT THE JUDGE WILL READ TO YOU. THAT'S ALL

6/2

YOU CAN CONSIDER UNDER THIS ONE ASPECT OF YOUR DECISION MAKING, CRIMINAL ACTIVITY.

IN CONSIDERING THIS, YOU CANNOT USE ANY OF THIS MATERIAL AS CRIMINAL ACTIVITY UNLESS YOU'RE CONVINCED BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT THAT MR. BONIN DID THAT.

IF FOR SOME REASON YOU FELT THAT MR. BONIN DIDN'T DO ANY OF THE CRIMES THAT WE'VE MENTIONED HERE IN THIS INSTRUCTION, THEN YOU WOULD NOT BE ABLE TO -- IT WOULD BE OBVIOUS -- YOU WOULD NOT BE ABLE TO CONSIDER THAT AS CRIMINAL ACTIVITY THAT THE DEFENDANT HAS DONE.

SO THE SPECIAL RULES WITH RESPECT TO THE CATEGORY OF CRIMINAL ACTIVITY INVOLVED, ONE, THAT YOU BE CONVINCED BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT THAT THE DEFENDANT DID IN FACT COMMIT SUCH ACTIVITY. AND YOU CAN ONLY CONSIDER THE ACTIVITY THAT'S ON THIS INSTRUCTION.

BY THE WAY, AT THE END OF THE INSTRUCTIONS THAT THE COURT READS TO YOU, YOU WILL ALSO GET THESE INSTRUCTIONS IN THE JURY ROOM SO THAT YOU CAN HAVE THIS FOR YOURSELF TO LOOK AT BACK THERE.

NOW, THE ONLY OTHER AREA THAT REQUIRES SPECIAL TREATMENT AGAIN IS THE AREA OF FELONY CONVICTIONS. AND THE INSTRUCTION IS AS FOLLOWS WITH RESPECT TO THAT:

EVIDENCE HAS BEEN INTRODUCED FOR THE PURPOSE OF SHOWING THAT PRIOR TO THE OFFENSES OF MURDER IN THE FIRST DEGREE OF WHICH HE HAS BEEN FOUND GUILTY IN THIS CASE, THE DEFENDANT, WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, HAS BEEN CONVICTED ON MAY 9TH,

A75

6/3

1969, OF THE CRIMES OF FELONY, TO WIT, A KIDNAPPING OF WILLIAM VERNON JONES ON NOVEMBER 17TH, 1968; A SODOMY OF WILLIAM VERNON JONES ON NOVEMBER 17TH, 1968; A SODOMY OF JOHN R. TREADWELL ON NOVEMBER 26TH, 1968; A FELONY CHILD MOLESTING OF LAWRENCE SCOTT BREITMAN ON JANUARY 1ST, 1969; THE FORCEABLE ORAL COPULATION OF LAWRENCE SCOTT BREITMAN ON JANUARY 1ST, 1969; THE FORCEABLE ORAL COPULATION OF JESUS MAURICE MONGE ON JANUARY 12TH, 1969.

AND THE DEFENDANT, WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, HAS ALSO BEEN CONVICTED ON DECEMBER 23RD, 1975 OF THE CRIME OF FELONY, TO WIT, THE ORAL COPULATION OF DAVID ALAN MC VICKER ON SEPTEMBER 8TH, 1975.

BEFORE YOU MAY CONSIDER ANY OF SUCH ALLEGED CONVICTIONS AS AN AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE IN THIS CASE, YOU MUST BE SATISFIED BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT THAT THE DEFENDANT, WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, WAS IN FACT CONVICTED OF SUCH PRIOR CRIMES.

YOU MAY NOT CONSIDER AS AN AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE ANY EVIDENCE OF ANY OTHER CRIMINAL CONVICTIONS OCCURRING BEFORE THE FOUR MURDER CONVICTIONS FOUND BY YOU IN THIS CASE.

WHAT THIS SAYS IS THAT WITH RESPECT TO THE AREA OF THE BENCHMARKS THAT YOU ARE GOING TO LOOK AT, THE JUDGE'S EVIDENCE, WITH RESPECT TO THE FELONY CONVICTION AREA, THE ONLY FELONY CONVICTIONS THAT YOU CAN CONSIDER ARE THOSE THAT ARE LISTED IN THIS INSTRUCTION THAT WE'VE JUST GONE THROUGH AND TALKED ABOUT.

A76

6/4

HOWEVER, BUT BEFORE YOU CAN CONSIDER THOSE AS FELONY CONVICTIONS, TO AGGRAVATE THE DEFENDANT'S SENTENCE IN THIS MATTER, YOU HAVE TO BE CONVINCED BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT THAT THE DEFENDANT WAS IN FACT THE ONE THAT WAS CONVICTED.

IN OTHER WORDS, IF IT WAS SOMEONE ELSE OR IF YOU'RE NOT CONVINCED BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT THAT IT WAS THE DEFENDANT, THEN YOU CANNOT CONSIDER THESE AS AN AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE AGAINST THE DEFENDANT.

NOW, THOSE ARE THE ONLY TWO AREAS IN THIS WHOLE AREA THAT REQUIRE THIS REASONABLE -- BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT STANDARD. THE OTHER AREAS DO NOT REQUIRE BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT STANDARD.

THEY WOULD BE JUST A STANDARD OF WHAT YOU THINK OR WHAT YOU FEEL, A PREPONDERATE STANDARD.

AND ANOTHER THING THAT WE SHOULD PROBABLY MENTION AT THIS TIME, THE LAST CATEGORY, A CATEGORY OF CONSIDERING ANYTHING ELSE, I WOULD ASSUME THAT MR. CHARVET WILL PROBABLY TALK ABOUT SYMPATHY. AND SYMPATHY CAN BE USED IN THAT CATEGORY. AND YOU MAY FIND THAT YOU'RE SYMPATHETIC TO THE DEFENDANT AND MAY WANT TO FIND THAT BECAUSE OF YOUR SYMPATHY, YOU FIND THAT'S A MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCE. THAT MAY BE THE CASE.

IF THAT'S THE CASE, YOU DON'T HAVE TO FIND SYMPATHY FOR THE DEFENDANT BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT. THAT'S NOT FAIR TO THE DEFENDANT'S SIDE OF THE THING.

6/5

THE ONLY AREA THAT REASONABLE DOUBT HAS ANYTHING TO DO WITH THIS WOULD BE THE AREA OF CRIMINAL ACTIVITY AND PRIOR FELONY CONVICTIONS.

OKAY. NOW, MOVING ALONG TO THE FINAL INSTRUCTION WITH RESPECT TO THIS WHOLE AREA, THIS MAY BE A LITTLE BIT OF A CHANGE FROM WHAT YOU THOUGHT THE LAW WAS. AND IT IS AS FOLLOWS:

IT IS NOW YOUR DUTY TO DETERMINE --. THIS IS A FINAL INSTRUCTION THAT YOU'LL BE GIVEN PROBABLY. IT IS NOW YOUR DUTY TO DETERMINE WHICH OF THE TWO PENALTIES, DEATH OR CONFINEMENT IN THE STATE PRISON FOR LIFE WITHOUT POSSIBILITY OF PAROLE, SHALL BE IMPOSED ON THE DEFENDANT.

AFTER HAVING HEARD ALL OF THE EVIDENCE AND AFTER HAVING HEARD AND CONSIDERED THE ARGUMENTS OF COUNSEL, YOU SHALL CONSIDER, TAKE INTO ACCOUNT AND BE GUIDED BY THE APPLICABLE FACTORS OF AGGRAVATING AND MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES UPON WHICH YOU HAVE BEEN INSTRUCTED. THAT IS THIS LIST THAT WE ARE TALKING ABOUT.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10,074; NOTHING OMITTED.)

7-1

IF YOU CONCLUDE THAT THE AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCES OUTWEIGH THE MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES, YOU SHALL IMPOSE A SENTENCE OF DEATH. HOWEVER, IF YOU DETERMINE THAT THE MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES OUTWEIGH THE AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCES, YOU SHALL IMPOSE A SENTENCE OF CONFINEMENT IN STATE PRISON FOR LIFE WITHOUT THE POSSIBILITY OF PAROLE.

AND THEN THE INSTRUCTION GOES ON, YOU SHALL NOW RETIRE AND SELECT ONE OF YOUR NUMBER TO ACT AS FOREMAN WHO WILL PRESIDE OVER YOUR DELIBERATIONS. IN OTHER WORDS, TO MAKE A DETERMINATION AS TO PENALTY, ALL 12 JURORS MUST AGREE. ANY VERDICT THAT YOU REACH MUST BE DATED AND SIGNED BY YOUR FOREMAN ON A FORM THAT WILL BE PROVIDED, AND THEN YOU SHALL RETURN IT TO THIS COURTROOM.

THE APPLICABLE STANDARD IS "SHALL, SHALL." IN OTHER WORDS, IF YOU FIND AS A GROUP THAT THE AGGRAVATING FACTORS OUTWEIGH THE MITIGATING, THEN THE LAW REQUIRES THAT YOU SHALL RETURN A DEATH PENALTY. IF YOU FIND AS A GROUP THAT THE MITIGATING FACTORS OUTWEIGH THE AGGRAVATION, THEN YOU SHALL RETURN A VERDICT OF LIFE WITHOUT PAROLE.

IT DOESN'T GIVE ANY DISCRETION ONCE YOU HAVE FOUND THE FACTORS EITHER AGGRAVATING OR MITIGATING. YOU HAVE TO DO IT ONE WAY OR THE OTHER ONCE YOU'VE FOUND THAT TO BE TRUE.

THE DISCRETION WILL COME IN IF YOU WANT TO USE DISCRETION, COMES IN IN THE LAST ELEMENT OF THE CRITERIA WHERE YOU CAN CONSIDER ANYTHING ELSE SUCH AS SYMPATHY,

7-2

PITY, WHATEVER.

WHAT I WOULD LIKE TO DO NOW, IF I MIGHT, WOULD BE TO GO THROUGH AND SAY JUST A LITTLE BIT ABOUT EACH OF THESE FACTORS AS WE GO DOWN AND MAYBE TALK A LITTLE BIT ABOUT WHETHER IT'S AGGRAVATING OR WHETHER IT'S MITIGATING TYPE FACTOR.

THE FIRST FACTOR THAT WE'VE TALKED ABOUT ARE THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CRIME FOR WHICH THE DEFENDANT WAS CONVICTED IN THE PRESENT PROCEEDINGS AND THE EXISTENCE OF ANY SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES FOUND TO BE TRUE. OKAY.

I WON'T BELABOR ALL THESE BECAUSE THESE ARE PROBABLY STILL FRESH IN YOUR MIND, BUT WE'RE TALKING ABOUT FRANK FOX, GLEN BARKER, RUSSELL RUGH AND LAWERENCE SHARP, AND I THINK ONE OF THE CONSIDERATIONS IN GUIDING WHETHER OR NOT THIS IS AGGRAVATING WOULD BE THE AGES OF THOSE VICTIMS.

THE TESTIMONY INDICATED FRANK FOX WAS 17; GLEN BARKER WAS 14; RUSSELL RUGH WAS 15; AND LAWRENCE SHARP WAS 17.

SUFFICE IT TO SAY ALSO THAT THESE CRIMES OCCURRED BETWEEN THE VERY LAST OF NOVEMBER OF 1979, EARLY DECEMBER, 1979 AND THEN FINALLY LAWRENCE SHARP WAS, I THINK, MAY 18TH, 1980. SO THEY OCCURRED OVER A PERIOD OF SIX MONTHS; SIX-MONTH PERIOD.

I'VE GOTTEN SOME OF THE EXHIBITS OUT OF THE EXHIBIT ROOM HERE, AND WITH RESPECT TO MR. FOX, THINGS THAT WE CAN SEE THAT ARE CONSISTENT WITH FRANK FOX THROUGHOUT

7-3

ALL OF THE MURDERS THAT THE DEFENDANT HAS COMMITTED, THE BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA TO THE FACE AS DEPICTED IN PEOPLE'S 2D, THE LIGATURE MARKS AROUND THE NECK, THE DEPTH OF THE LIGATURE MARKS AROUND THE HANDS -- THE WRISTS. THAT IN CONSIDERATION WITH THE MURDER OF GLEN BARKER AND RUSSELL RUGH TAKEN TOGETHER, MURDERING BOTH OF THEM AT OR ABOUT THE SAME TIME, YOU HAVE THE SAME THING; THE TRAUMA TO THE FACE, THE MOUTH, BLEEDING FROM THE MOUTH IN THAT AREA, AND YOU CAN SEE IN PEOPLE'S 3L THE DAMAGE THAT WAS DONE TO THE INNER MOUTH OF GLEN BARKER, THE DAMAGE TO THE SCROTUM, THE TESTICLES OF GLEN BARKER.

WITH RESPECT TO RUSSELL RUGH, EXACTLY THE SAME THING; THE TRAUMA TO THE MOUTH WHERE THE INDIVIDUAL IS BEATEN AND DAMAGED, HURT PRIOR TO HIS DEATH.

THEY -- THESE BOYS DIDN'T DIE A PLEASANT DEATH, IF YOU CAN DIE A PLEASANT DEATH. THEY DIED AS OPPOSITE THAT AS YOU CAN HAVE. THEY DIED A VIOLENT DEATH, A PAINFUL DEATH.

AND THEN FINALLY LARRY SHARP, YOU SEE THE SAME THING. YOUSEE THAT HE WAS BEAT UP FIRST. HIS FACE, HIS MOUTH IS BASHED IN. THERE'S BRUISING IN THE INNER SIDE OF HIS MOUTH. YOU SEE DAMAGE TO THE TESTICLES. YOU SEE THE SAME LIGATURE MARKS ON THE NECK.

I WOULD SUGGEST TO YOU THAT BASED UPON THESE, NOT ONLY THE PHOTOGRAPHS BUT THE OTHER TESTIMONY THAT YOU HEARD DURING THE GUILT PHASE CONCERNING THE CONDITION OF THE

A81

7-4

RECTUM, CONDITION OF THE MOUTH, ET CETERA, THAT THESE ARE VERY -- ARE EXTREMELY VIOLENT DEATHS.

IT'S -- IT SEEMS TO ME FROM THE EVIDENCE THAT WE'VE SEEN HERE THAT THE EVIDENCE OF VIOLENCE IS CONSISTENT THROUGHOUT, TOO. IT'S NOT A CASE OF TWO OR THREE OF THESE BOYS DYING ACCIDENTALLY. IT'S A CASE OF INTENTIONAL KILLING AND VIOLENT INTENTIONAL KILLING. IT'S A CASE OF THE DEFENDANT DEHUMANIZING THESE BOYS AND THEN KILLING THESE BOYS WHILE THE DEFENDANT IS ATTAINING HIS SEXUAL GRATIFICATION.

I WOULD SUBMIT TO YOU BASED UPON THAT, THAT THE FIRST CIRCUMSTANCE THAT WE HAVE, THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE OFFENSE AND THE CRIMES THERE -- THE ONLY -- THE REAL ALTERNATIVE THERE IS THAT THAT'S AN AGGRAVATING CIRCUMSTANCE.

NOW, NUMBER TWO, THE CRIMINAL ACTIVITY. WE'VE TALKED ABOUT THE SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCE RULES CONCERNING THE CRIMINAL ACTIVITY.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10,078; NOTHING OMITTED.)

A82

8/1

YOU HAVE PHOTOGRAPHS OF MOST ALL OF THE CRIMINAL ACTIVITY. WHEN I SAY "CRIMINAL ACTIVITY" NOW, WHAT I MEAN BY THAT IS THE CRIMINAL ACTIVITY THAT INVOLVES THE USE OR ATTEMPTED USE OF FORCE OR VIOLENCE OR THE EXPRESS OR IMPLIED THREAT TO USE FORCE OR VIOLENCE.

I WON'T GO THROUGH THAT EACH TIME; BUT WHEN I DO MENTION CRIMINAL ACTIVITY THAT'S WHAT WE'RE TALKING ABOUT.

YOU HAVE PHOTOGRAPHS OF EACH OF THE VICTIMS OF THIS CRIMINAL ACTIVITY. AND I WON'T GO THROUGH PUTTING THOSE UP, BUT SUFFICE IT TO SAY, I WOULD LIKE YOU TO LOOK AT THOSE PHOTOGRAPHS WHEN YOU HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO DELIBERATE AND OBSERVE THE SAME COMMON CHARACTERISTICS IN EACH OF THOSE.

YOU'LL SEE BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA TO THE FACES. YOU'LL SEE THE FACT THAT THESE BOYS ARE BOUND, VIRTUALLY ALL OF THEM ARE BOUND BY THE WRISTS, THE ANKLES, AND THEN ARE LIGATURE STRANGLED, AND THEN THERE'S SOME TYPE OF BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA TO THE FACE PRIOR TO THE STRANGULATION.

LOOKING AT SOME OF THESE -- AND I WON'T TAKE THE TIME TO GO THROUGH ALL THE PHOTOGRAPHS WITH YOU -- BUT THE FIRST ONE IS MARCUS GRABS WHICH OCCURRED ON AUGUST 6TH, 1979.

I THINK IT'S ALSO PROBATIVE WITH RESPECT TO THE VIOLENCE OF THIS MAN TO KEEP THESE IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER BECAUSE YOU CAN SEE -- WHEN THEY ARE IN CHRONOLOGICAL ORDER, YOU CAN SEE HOW THE DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT HAS ESCALATED FROM THE TIME THAT WE ARE FIRST AWARE OF BACK IN 1968 AND 1969.

SO MARCUS GRABS IS AUGUST 6, 1979. AND YOU'LL

8/2

RECALL THAT MARCUS GRABS WAS A GERMAN BOY THAT WAS OVER HERE TOURING THE COUNTRY, AND SUSAN BARNES HAD PICKED HIM UP IN SURFSIDE. SUSAN WAS WITH HER BOYFRIEND. PICKED HIM UP AS HE WAS HITCHHIKING WITH A KNAPSACK ON WITH A BRITISH FLAG ON THE BACK, I BELIEVE IT WAS.

AND SHE TOOK MARCUS TO HER HOUSE, GAVE HIM SOME FOOD, KEPT HIM FOR A COUPLE OF DAYS AND THEN GAVE -- LET HIM OUT TO HITCHHIKE ON PACIFIC COAST HIGHWAY IN NEWPORT BEACH.

AND FROM THAT POINT IS WHERE MR. BONIN GOT AHOLD OF MARCUS GRABS.

WITH RESPECT TO MARCUS GRABS, YOU CAN SEE THE PHOTOGRAPHS. AND I'M NOT SURE YOU'D BE ABLE TO COUNT ALL OF THE WOUNDS ON MR. GRABS' BODY WITH THE PHOTOGRAPHS.

BUT INVESTIGATOR KUSHNER, I BELIEVE, SAID THAT HE COUNTED THE WOUNDS; AND THERE WERE 70 STAB WOUNDS ON MARCUS GRABS' BODY. ABSOLUTELY VIOLENT. UNPROVOKED ATTACK.

YOU HAVE NOT ONLY THE STAB WOUNDS, BUT YOU HAVE THE BINDINGS. THERE WAS ONE BINDING STILL LEFT ON MARCUS GRABS' LEG. A PIECE OF WIRE WAS STILL TIED ONTO ONE LEG, AND THEN THE LIGATURE STRANGULATION AROUND THE THROAT.

21 DAYS AFTER MARCUS GRABS, YOU'VE GOT DONALD HYDEN ON AUGUST 27TH, 1979.

WITH RESPECT TO THE EVIDENCE THAT YOU HAVE TO CONSIDER, WHAT I TRIED TO DO IS TO GIVE YOU CERTIFIED COPIES OF THE DEATH CERTIFICATES OF EACH OF THESE BOYS WHICH WILL TELL YOU THEIR AGE AND WHEN THEY WERE FOUND, ET CETERA, AND

8/3

THE CAUSE OF DEATH.

AND I ALSO TRIED TO KEEP THE PHOTOGRAPHS CONCERNING EACH OF THOSE BOYS WITH THEIR DEATH CERTIFICATE. FOR EXAMPLE, DONALD HYDEN. THE DEATH CERTIFICATE ON DONALD HYDEN IS PEOPLE'S 39. AND YOU'LL SEE IT.

IT'S A DEATH CERTIFICATE. IT'S GOT HIS NAME ON IT AND THEN IT'S GOT 39, A CLERK TAG FOR 39 ON IT. ALL OF THE PHOTOGRAPHS CONCERNING DONALD HYDEN WOULD BE 39A THROUGH 39D OR C OR WHATEVER, WHEREVER THEY GO TO.

SO WHEN YOU LOOK AT THE DEATH CERTIFICATE, YOU CAN GET THE NUMBER OFF THE DEATH CERTIFICATE AND THE CORRELATING PHOTOGRAPHS WILL HAVE THE SAME NUMBER WITH JUST DIFFERENT LETTERS.

WITH RESPECT TO DONALD HYDEN, YOU HAVE THE FACT NOT ONLY WAS HE STRANGLED, BUT HE WAS SODOMIZED. THERE'S BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA TO THE FACE, AND THERE ARE LIGATURE MARKS ON THE NECK. THERE'S A STAB WOUND IN THE SCROTUM THAT'S A QUARTER OF AN INCH DEEP AND TWO INCHES WIDE.

AND THERE'S A BURN MARK JUST ABOVE THE GROIN AREA.

WITH RESPECT TO BOTH MARCUS GRABS AND DONALD HYDEN, THE DEFENDANT ADMITTED THE KILLING OF BOTH OF THOSE INDIVIDUALS TO MR. LOPEZ, NOT THROUGH THE USE OF THEIR NAMES, HYDEN AND GRABS, BUT THROUGH THE USE OF THE LIST THAT THE DEFENDANT WAS AWARE OF AND THE FACT THAT THE NAMES OF HYDEN AND GRABS WERE ON THAT LIST.

8/4

AUGUST 27TH, 1979, FOR DONALD HYDEN.

APPROXIMATELY 14 DAYS LATER, SEPTEMBER 12TH, 1979 -- AND YOU KNOW ALSO AT THIS TIME THAT WE'VE JUST SKIPPED OVER FRANK FOX -- SEPTEMBER 12TH, 1979, DAVID MURILLO, WHO WAS 17.

AND AS WE'VE SEEN SO MANY TIMES HERE, DAVID MURILLO WAS A SMALL, YOUNG LAD, HAD LEFT HIS HOME ON HIS BICYCLE, APPARENTLY TO GO TO A MOVIE.

YOU REMEMBER HIS MOTHER --. SOME OF THESE THINGS ALL SEEM TO RUN TOGETHER, OR AT LEAST THEY RUN TOGETHER ON ME. BUT WITH RESPECT TO MURILLO, MRS. NELSON HAD LEFT THE HOUSE TO GO TO THE MARKET, AND DAVID WAS GOING TO GO TO THE SHOW ON HIS BIKE. SHE CAME HOME, AND DAVID AND HIS BIKE WERE GONE, SO SHE THOUGHT THAT THEY WERE AT THE SHOW.

WELL, MR. BONIN GOT AHOLD OF DAVID MURILLO, KILLED DAVID AND THEN DUMPED DAVID'S BODY UP IN THE AREA OF VENTURY ON HIGHWAY 101 IN THE CITY OF VENTURA, CALIFORNIA.

THERE WAS NO CLOTHING ON THE BODY. THE BODY WAS NUDE. THERE ARE LIGATURE STRANGULATION MARKS ON THE NECK, WRISTS AND ANKLES. AND THE CAUSE OF DEATH WAS STRANGULATION AND BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA.

HERE AGAIN, THE DEFENDANT ADMITTED TO MR. LOPEZ THAT HE KILLED DAVID MURILLO BECAUSE DAVID MURILLO WAS ON THE LIST THAT MR. LOPEZ AND THE DEFENDANT WERE TALKING ABOUT.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10,082; NOTHING OMITTED.)

FROM SEPTEMBER 12 WE SKIP TO FEBRUARY 2ND, 1980, CHARLES MIRANDA, WHO WAS 15 YEARS OF AGE.

NOW, WITH RESPECT TO CHARLES MIRANDA, YOU HAVE -- YOU'VE ALREADY SEEN PHOTOGRAPHS OF CHARLES MIRANDA WHEN YOU DELIBERATED ON THE GUILT PHASE. YOU'LL HAVE THOSE AVAILABLE TO YOU. I'M NOT SURE IF THE JUDGE INTENDS TO GIVE YOU ALL OF THAT EVIDENCE. SOMETIMES THE JUDGE MAY WANT TO JUST GIVE YOU THE PENALTY PHASE EVIDENCE. HOWEVER, I'M SURE IF YOU REQUEST THAT EVIDENCE, THEY WILL BE MADE AVAILABLE TO YOU.

HERE AGAIN, VERY BRIEFLY, LIGATURE STRANGULATION. LIGATURE MARKS ON THE NECK, WRISTS AND ANKLES. CAUSE OF DEATH, LIGATURE STRANGULATION, AND THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE LEFT IN THE AREA, WHICH IS CHARACTERISTIC OF MR. BONIN.

THE RECTUM OF CHARLES MIRANDA WAS ENLARGED. AN OBJECT HAD BEEN INSERTED INTO THE RECTUM.

IN THIS CASE, THE EVIDENCE THAT ATTACHES THE KILLING OF MR. MIRANDA TO MR. BONIN IS NOT ONLY GREGORY MILEY AND CARPET FIBERS, BUT ALSO DAVID LOPEZ AND THE STATEMENT THE DEFENDANT MADE TO DAVID LOPEZ.

YOU'LL RECALL THAT THIS WAS A TIME WHEN THE DEFENDANT HAD NOT RECEIVED THE GRATIFICATION THAT HE NEEDED, APPARENTLY, WITH CHARLES MIRANDA, AND WITH GREGORY MILEY, AFTER DUMPING THE BODY OF CHARLES MIRANDA, CONTINUED LOOKING FOR ANOTHER PERSON. AND YOU'LL RECALL THEY DROVE DOWN TO HUNTINGTON BEACH. THIS WILL BE THE SAME DAY.

THEY GET DOWN TO HUNTINGTON BEACH AND AS THEY'RE DRIVING NEAR BEACH BOULEVARD, ON BEACH BOULEVARD THEY SEE A LITTLE BOY ON A BUS STOP. THE LITTLE BOY IS JAMES MACABE WHO'S 12 YEARS OF AGE.

THEY HAVE A SHORT DISCUSSION BETWEEN BONIN AND MILEY AS TO WHETHER OR NOT THEY'RE GOING TO PICK UP JAMES MACABE.

MILEY, AS COLD AND CALCULATING AS HE IS, SAYS NO, THE KID'S TOO YOUNG. THAT WILL GIVE YOU AN IDEA OF WHERE WE KNOW MILEY -- WE CAN TELL FROM LOOKING AT MILEY, WE'VE PROBABLY, WHAT, SEEN MR. MILEY FOR TWO HOURS MAYBE, THREE HOURS, AND I WOULD VENTURE THAT EACH OF YOU HAVE PROBABLY FORMED AN OPINION THAT THE MAN IS AS COLD AN INDIVIDUAL AS YOU'D EVER WANT TO SEE IN YOUR LIFE. YET, HE WANTED TO PASS JAMES MACABE. HE DIDN'T WANT TO TAKE JAMES MACABE. HE SAID THAT BOY'S TOO YOUNG.

HOWEVER, MR. BONIN DIDN'T FEEL JAMES MACABE WAS TOO YOUNG. SO THEY STOPPED. THEY PICKED UP JAMES MACABE AND THEY TRADED POSITIONS IN THE VAN. MILEY DRIVES AND THE DEFENDANT HAS SOME TYPE OF RELATIONSHIP WITH JAMES MACABE AND ENDS UP KILLING JAMES MACABE.

THE QUESTION GOES THROUGH YOUR MIND -- GOES THROUGH MY MIND CONSTANTLY, HOW MUCH OF MR. MILEY CAN WE BELIEVE. I DON'T -- FROM THE EVIDENCE I HEARD, I DON'T HAVE THE TROUBLE BELIEVING MILEY AS I DO MUNRO. BUT THERE

9-3

WAS ONE THING THAT MILEY SAID WITH RESPECT TO JAMES MACABE THAT TO ME IS VERY TELLING ON MILEY'S CREDIBILITY, AND IT WAS IN RESPONSE TO A QUESTION EITHER BY MISS STEWART OR MR. CHARVET. I'M NOT SURE WHICH ONE IT WAS. IT WAS MISS STEWART, AND IT WAS THIS QUESTION: DID YOU PUSH DOWN ON THE TIRE IRON AFTER BONIN PUSHED DOWN ON THE TIRE IRON? THE ANSWER WAS SOMETHING LIKE YES.

DID YOU THINK THE MACABE BOY WAS DEAD YET WHEN YOU PUSHED DOWN, AND MILEY'S IMMEDIATE RESPONSE IS NO, HE WASN'T DEAD. I KILLED HIM. I JUST WANTED TO MAKE SURE IT WAS DONE, THAT TYPE OF THING.

YOU COULD EXPECT MAYBE MUNRO TO SAY OH, NO, HE WAS ALREADY DEAD WHEN I PUSHED DOWN ON IT. BUT I THINK THE EVIDENCE SHOWS THAT MILEY WAS VERY CANDID WITH US HERE. HE WAS VERY TRUTHFUL. I'M NOT SURE FOR WHAT REASON HE WOULD BE TRUTHFUL, BUT HE APPEARED TO BE VERY TRUTHFUL FROM THE EVIDENCE THAT WE HAD HEARD.

SO THAT WHEN YOU HAVE MILEY SAYING I THOUGHT THE KID WAS TOO YOUNG, I THINK FROM THE EVIDENCE THAT WE HEARD, THAT THAT'S SOMETHING WE COULD ACCEPT AS BEING TRUE, YET BONIN SAYING LET'S PICK THE KID UP, HE'S NOT TOO YOUNG FOR ME.

WITH RESPECT TO JAMES MACABE, THERE IS A LITTLE DIFFERENCE HERE BECAUSE JAMES MACABE HAD SOME CLOTHES ON. YOU'LL SEE PHOTOGRAPHS OF JAMES WHEN HE WAS DUMPED, AND I BELIEVE HE WAS DUMPED IN THE AREA OF WALNUT. YES, HE WAS

-4

IN THE WALNUT AREA NEAR THE POMONA FREEWAY, AND HE HAS SOME -- HE'S PARTIALLY CLOTHED, WHICH IS A LITTLE DIFFERENT THAN SOME OF MR. BONIN'S OTHER THINGS.

IN THE DISCUSSION THAT DAVE LOPEZ HAD WITH MR. BONIN, BONIN SAYS THE MACABE KID WAS THE EASIEST TO KILL, JUST AS YOU'D EXPECT FOR A 12-YEAR-OLD. HE PUT UP NO FIGHT WHATSOEVER, AND THEN BONIN ALSO TOLD MR. LOPEZ THAT MACABE WAS ON A BUS STOP GOING TO DISNEYLAND. AND WE KNOW FROM MRS. MACABE AND WE KNOW FROM WILLIAM MACABE, JR., THAT'S EXACTLY WHERE HE WAS GOING. HE HAD DISNEYLAND TICKETS.

RONALD GATLIN, MARCH 15, 1980. WITH RESPECT TO MR. GATLIN, WE KNOW THAT HE'S FOUND IN THE AREA OF DUARTE. HE -- HE IS NUDE. HE HAS LIGATURE MARKS ABOUT THE NECK, THE WRISTS, THE ANKLES. HE DIES OF LIGATURE STRANGULATION AND HE HAS BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA INFLICTED UPON HIM. THERE'S BLOOD COMING IN THE AREA OF THE RIGHT SHOULDER, RIGHT EAR, NOSE AND MOUTH. THERE'S A PUNCTURE WOUND IN THE RIGHT EAR AND BLOOD COMING FROM INSIDE THE RIGHT EAR.

THIS IS GOING TO BE RELEVANT WHEN YOU CONSIDER THIS WITH DARIN KENDRICK WHO HAS THE ICE PICK IN THE EAR, AND I THINK THAT WE CAN INFER FROM THE EVIDENCE THAT WE'VE SEEN THAT STEPPING AHEAD JUST FOR A MOMENT AND THEN I'LL BACK UP WITH RESPECT TO THIS ICE PICK, IT'S REASONABLE, I THINK, TO BELIEVE THAT THE DEFENDANT AND VERNON BUTTS, THE DEFENDANT'S FRIEND, DROVE THE ICE PICK INTO DARIN KENDRICK'S EAR WITH SUCH FORCE THAT THEY WEREN'T ABLE TO GET THE ICE PICK OUT.

10/1

YOU SEE, IN LOOKING AT PHOTOGRAPHS WHICH YOU'LL SEE OF DARIN KENDRICK, YOU'LL SEE AN ICE PICK WITHOUT A HANDLE ON IT. I THINK IT'S REASONABLE TO BELIEVE THAT THE HANDLE PROBABLY CAME OFF WHEN THEY TRIED TO GET IT OUT AND THEY WERE IN A HURRY TO GET OUT OF THERE, LEFT KENDRICK AT THE SCENE WITH JUST THE PICK ITSELF IN.

WITH RESPECT TO RONALD GATLIN, IT LOOKS LIKE THEY GOT THE PICK OUT OF THE EAR. THAT TIME ANYWAY.

THERE WAS ANOTHER PUNCTURE WOUND BELOW THE EAR. WITH RESPECT TO GATLIN, THE DEFENDANT ADMITTED TO DAVE LOPEZ THAT HE HAD KILLED GATLIN WITH RESPECT TO GATLIN BEING ON THE LIST THAT -- THAT THE DEFENDANT ADMITTED TO.

HARRY TODD TURNER, TEN DAYS AFTER MR. GATLIN. WE SAW IN THE RECORDS OF ATASCADERO HOSPITAL WHICH YOU'LL HAVE TO LOOK THROUGH THAT THE DEFENDANT IS MANIPULATIVE, UNTRUTHFUL, SEXUALLY DANGEROUS, AND TYPICALLY VICTIMIZED MENTALLY ILL OR RETARDED VICTIMS.

THIS IS A -- THIS IS TAKEN FROM A PAGE IN THE ATASCADERO RECORDS. IT'S ON PAGE 22, IF YOU WANT TO LOOK AT THAT WHEN YOU GET A CHANCE TO.

THE ATASCADERO RECORDS ARE GROUPED INTO THREE OR FOUR DIFFERENT PACKAGES. WHAT I'VE DONE IS I'VE TAKEN -- ON THE LEFT-HAND SIDE OF EACH PAGE OF THE ATASCADERO REPORTS, DOWN THE LEFT-HAND BOTTOM CORNER, THERE'S A LITTLE INK NUMBER DOWN THERE. I'VE NUMBERED THOSE PAGES FOR YOU SO

10/2

THAT YOU'LL BE ABLE TO FIND PAGE 22 IF YOU CHOOSE TO BY LOOKING IN THE BOTTOM LEFT-HAND CORNER; SHOULD BE IN SEQUENCE IN THE RECORDS THAT YOU GET.

THE DEFENDANT THRIVES ON VICTIMIZING OR DEHUMANIZING THE UNFORTUNATE PEOPLE IN OUR SOCIETY. EXAMPLE, HARRY TODD TURNER.

HARRY TODD TURNER WAS THE BOY FROM THE OPTIMISTS BOYS HOME, AND HE WAS THERE AT THE OPTIMISTS BOYS HOME WHICH IS IN -- A CUSTODIAL THING, APPARENTLY, A RESIDENTIAL PROGRAM BECAUSE HE KEPT GETTING IN TROUBLE AND THE PROBATION DEPARTMENT IN LOS ANGELES COUNTY PUT HARRY TODD IN THE BOYS HOME.

THE PROBLEMS THAT HARRY WAS HAVING WERE NUMEROUS. ONE, HE KEPT FANTASIZING. HE WOULD FANTASIZE THAT PEOPLE WOULD COME TO PICK HIM UP IN A VAN. HE PROBABLY WANTED AS A LITTLE BOY MORE THAN ANYTHING ELSE TO GET OUT OF THAT BOYS HOME, TO HAVE SOMEONE PICK HIM UP.

HE ALSO HAD PROBLEMS ABOUT WANTING TO KILL HIMSELF. THIS IS THE TYPE OF PERSON THAT BONIN CHOOSES TO VICTIMIZE.

LOOK AT THE TYPE OF PEOPLE THAT BONIN ASSOCIATES WITH. GREGORY MILEY. MUNRO.

HARRY TODD TURNER IS FOUND ON MARCH 25TH, 1980, AFTER HE HAD RUN AWAY FROM THE BOYS HOME. HE'S NUDE, THERE'S LIGATURE MARKS ABOUT THE NECK, BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA, AND YOU'LL RECALL DR. VALE'S TESTIMONY WHERE THERE IS A BITE MARK ON

10/3

HARRY TODD TURNER'S PENIS AND PROBABLE OR POSSIBLE BITE MARK ON THE SHOULDER. I BELIEVE YOU'LL HAVE PHOTOGRAPHS OF THOSE. I THINK THOSE ARE IN EVIDENCE.

APRIL 11TH, 1980. 11, 12 DAYS LATER. STEVEN WOOD, AGE 16.

STEVEN IS THE BOY THAT LIVED WITH HIS MOTHER, BARBARA BIEHN, AND LEFT HIS HOUSE -- I THINK IT WAS IN BELLFLOWER -- ON THE MORNING OF APRIL 10TH TO GO TO THE ORTHODONTIST. I THINK HE WAS SUPPOSED TO BE AT THE ORTHODONTIST AT 10:15 IN THE MORNING.

FROM THE ORTHODONTIST HE LEFT AND WENT TO THE LIQUOR STORE WHERE HE HAD WORKED. MANNY'S LIQUOR STORE. MANUEL MADERO THAT CAME IN HERE AND TESTIFIED.

AT THE LIQUOR STORE, AMONG OTHER THINGS, HE GOT SOME OF THOSE FOLDERS THAT HE PURCHASED. LEFT THE LIQUOR STORE GOING TO HIS DRIVER'S EDUCATION CLASS, WHICH HE WAS SUPPOSED TO BE AT COLUMBUS HIGH SCHOOL AT 1:00 IN THE AFTERNOON.

WE NEXT -- STEPPING AHEAD FOR JUST A MOMENT -- WE NEXT FIND STEVEN WOOD'S BODY THE NEXT MORNING IN LONG BEACH IN AN INDUSTRIAL AREA DOWN ON -- WHAT? -- 700 WEST ESTHER IN LONG BEACH.

THE SAME CHARACTERISTICS OF MR. BONIN REAR THEIR HEAD AGAIN. STEVEN WOOD'S NUDE, LIGATURE. ABOUT THE NECK, LIGATURE ABOUT THE WRISTS, AND ANKLES, BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA ON THE FACE.

10/4

AND YOU'LL HAVE PHOTOGRAPHS OF ALL THAT.

NOW, WITH RESPECT TO STEVEN WOOD, MR. BONIN WENT INTO MORE DETAIL THAN HE USUALLY DID WITH RESPECT TO HIS OTHER VICTIMS TO DAVE LOPEZ.

AND TO DAVE LOPEZ, BONIN SAYS THAT HE PICKED UP STEVEN WOOD AT A LIQUOR STORE NAMED MANNY'S THAT BONIN FREQUENTS.

MANNY'S LIQUOR STORE IS APPROXIMATELY -- WELL, INVESTIGATOR KUSHNER SAID IT WAS A FEW BLOCKS FROM BONIN'S HOUSE.

BONIN TOLD -- TELLS LOPEZ HE PICKED STEVEN WOOD UP AT THE LIQUOR STORE, MANNY'S, THAT BONIN FREQUENTS. STEVEN HAD A FOLDER. LOPEZ USED THE WORD PEE-CHEE FOLDER.

BONIN TOLD LOPEZ THAT STEVEN WOOD HAD COME FROM HIS DENTIST AND WAS GOING TO HIS DRIVER'S EDUCATION CLASS. AND HE WAS AT THE LIQUOR STORE BECAUSE HE HAD TO PICK SOMETHING UP PRIOR TO GOING TO THE DRIVER'S EDUCATION CLASS, WHICH IS THE PEE-CHEE FOLDER THAT HE PURCHASED FROM MANNY.

ALSO WITH RESPECT TO ATTACHING THE STEVEN WOOD MURDER TO MR. BONIN, THERE'S A CARPET FIBER FOUND IN STEVEN WOOD'S MOUTH THAT IS COMPARED BY MR. BAILEY OF THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE CRIME LAB AND FOUND TO HAVE THE SAME CHARACTERISTICS AS THE CARPET FIBERS TAKEN FROM THE DEFENDANT'S VAN.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10,090; NOTHING OMITTED.)

11-1

THAT WAS APRIL 11TH.

NINETEEN DAYS LATER, APRIL 30, DARIN KENDRICK -- STEVEN WOOD, I'M NOT SURE IF I MENTIONED IT OR NOT, 16 YEARS OF AGE.

APRIL 30TH, 1980, DARIN KENDRICK WAS WORKING AT THE LUCKY'S MARKET AT STANTON. HE WENT OUT ABOUT NINE O'CLOCK THAT NIGHT TO PICK UP SOME SHOPPING CARTS TO BRING THEM INTO THE STORE TO CLOSE THE STORE.

THE DEFENDANT IS DRIVING BY, PICKS UP DARIN, TAKES DARIN TO BUTTS' HOUSE. THE DEFENDANT TELLS MR. LOPEZ THAT DARIN WAS PICKING UP SHOPPING CARTS IN THE CITY OF CYPRESS, WHICH IS ADJACENT TO STANTON. THAT DARIN GOT IN THE CAR OR THE VAN. THE DEFENDANT PUT A KNIFE TO DARIN'S THROAT, TIED DARIN UP AND THEN THEY TOOK DARIN TO BUTTS' HOUSE WHERE THEY HAD A RITUALISTIC-TYPE KILLING THAT WASN'T REALLY BONIN'S IDEA, AND BONIN SAID TO LOPEZ THAT THEY USED AN ICE PICK AND THEY USED ACID.

NOW, WHAT DO WE KNOW WITH RESPECT TO THAT? WE KNOW DARIN WAS AT THE MARKET. WE KNOW HE WENT OUT ABOUT NINE O'CLOCK TO GET SOME SHOPPING CARTS, AND WE KNOW HIS CAR WAS LEFT IN THE MARKET AREA LOCKED.

WE KNOW THAT DARIN TURNS UP ON APRIL 30TH, THE NEXT DAY, AT -- DURING THE MORNING HOURS OVER IN CARSON IN AN INDUSTRIAL AREA, AND YOU'LL SEE FROM A PHOTOGRAPH THAT THERE ARE ACID BURNS DOWN DARIN'S MOUTH, FROM THE MOUTH DOWN THROUGH THE LOWER LIP THROUGH THE JAW ONTO THE CHEST

1-2

AREA INDICATING THAT MR. BONIN AND MR. BUTTS ATTEMPTED TO FORCE ACID DOWN DARIN'S MOUTH, AND DARIN NOT SWALLOWING IT AND TRYING TO SPIT IT OUT.

YOU'LL ALSO SEE PHOTOGRAPHS SHOWING THE ICE PICK LEFT IN DARIN KENDRICK'S EAR, DRIVEN IN THERE, LIGATURE MARKS ON THE NECK, WRISTS AND ANKLES. BLUNT FORCE TRAUMA.

THEN A RARE PIECE OF PHYSICAL EVIDENCE, SOMETHING THAT WE DON'T NORMALLY SEE AND THIS IS THE TROUBLE THAT MR. BONIN GETS INTO BY DEALING WITH THE PEOPLE THAT HE CHOOSES TO DEAL WITH. IN OTHER WORDS, HE -- HE, MEANING MR. BONIN, CHOSE TO DEAL WITH THE LOWER ELEMENTS OF OUR SOCIETY, CHOOSES TO DEAL WITH GREGORY MILEY. HE CHOOSES TO DEAL WITH JAMES MUNRO, VERNON BUTTS.

YOU CAN JUST SEE THE DEFENDANT WHO IS INTELLIGENT, YOU'LL SEE THAT IN THE ATASCADERO RECORDS, TRYING TO GET VERNON BUTTS TO MAKE SURE THERE'S NO PROPERTY LEFT. WE DON'T WANT ANY EVIDENCE LEFT AND YOU CAN SEE THAT BACK WHEN HE'S TEARING UP IDENTIFICATION AND THINGS LIKE THAT. YET BUTTS KEPT PROPERTY AND HE KEPT DARIN KENDRICK'S PHONE BOOK AND HIS CHECK-CASHING CARD WHICH WAS RECOVERED BY INVESTIGATOR KUSHNER FROM BUTTS' HOUSE SOMETIME LATER.

FINALLY WITH RESPECT TO THIS AREA OF CRIMINAL ACTIVITY, STEVEN WELLS ON JUNE 2ND, 1980, AND YOU'VE HEARD ALL OF THE EVIDENCE ON THAT.

I WON'T GO THROUGH THAT ALL AGAIN. BASICALLY NUDE, LIGATURE MARKS ON THE NECK, WRISTS AND ANKLES, BLUNT

11-3

FORCE TRAUMA TO THE FACE. CAUSE OF DEATH, LIGATURE STRANGULATION. BRUISES ON THE PENIS AND TESTICLES. RECTUM IN DILATED AND THE DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT TO MR. LOPEZ THAT WELLS WAS HITCHHIKING AND WELLS WAS A WILLING PARTICIPANT, AT LEAST PARTIALLY THROUGHOUT THIS THING.

I ASK YOU NOW AFTER EXAMINING THAT CRIMINAL ACTIVITY, AGGRAVATED OR MITIGATED WITH RESPECT TO THE DEFENDANT'S PUNISHMENT? THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION.

THE NEXT STEP OR NEXT ELEMENT WE WANT TO LOOK AT IN THIS CRITERIA THAT WE'RE TALKING ABOUT ARE PRIOR FELONY CONVICTIONS.

IN THAT RESPECT, YOU WILL HAVE COPIES OF THE REOCRDS, PEOPLE'S 35 IS A COPY OF THE RECORDS OF THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY SUPERIOR COURT WITH RESPECT TO WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN SHOWING THE CRIMES THAT MR. BONIN WAS CONVICTED OF WITH RESPECT TO WILLIAM JONES, JOHN TREADWELL, LAWRENCE BREITMAN AND JESUS MONGE.

THESE RECORDS THAT YOU HAVE WILL SHOW THAT THE DEFENDANT INITIALLY PLED GUILTY. HE WAS GIVEN AN ATTORNEY AND THEN SUBMITTED THE CASE ON THE PRELIMINARY HEARING TRANSCRIPT AND WAS FOUND GUILTY OF EACH OF THOSE CASES. THAT THE DEFENDANT WENT TO ATASCADEPO STATE HOSPITAL, CAME BACK, AND THAT THE DEFENDANT WAS EVENTUALLY GIVEN PROBATION.

NOW, WITH RESPECT TO THE OTHER CONVICTION, THE CONVICTION REGARDING MR. MC VICKER, PEOPLE'S 37 IS A COPY

11-4

OF THE ORANGE COUNTY SUPERIOR COURT RECORDS CONCERNING MR. MC VICKER.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10,094; NOTHING OMITTED.)

12/1

RECALLING NOW THAT THE STANDARD WITH RESPECT TO CRIMINAL ACTIVITY AND FELONY CONVICTIONS IS BEYOND A REASONABLE DOUBT.

GOING NOW TO WHETHER OR NOT THE OFFENSE WAS COMMITTED WHILE THE DEFENDANT WAS UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF EXTREME MENTAL OR EMOTIONAL DISTURBANCE.

WE'RE TALKING NOW AGAIN BACK ABOUT FRANK FOX, GLEN BARKER, RUSSELL RUGH AND LAWRENCE SHARP.

THERE'S ABSOLUTELY NO EVIDENCE WHATSOEVER THAT THE DEFENDANT WAS UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF EXTREME MENTAL OR EMOTIONAL DISTURBANCE. I WOULD SUGGEST TO YOU ON THAT BASIS THAT THAT'S AN AGGRAVATING FACTOR, THAT HE WAS NOT UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF EMOTIONAL DISTURBANCE.

ITEM E, WHETHER OR NOT THE VICTIM WAS A PARTICIPANT IN THE DEFENDANT'S HOMOCIDAL CONDUCT OR CONSENTED TO THE HOMOCIDAL ACT.

THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION THAT NEITHER OF THE FOUR VICTIMS IN THIS CASE CONSENTED TO BE KILLED BY THE DEFENDANT.

RUSSELL RUGH, GLEN BARKER, WE KNOW A LITTLE BIT ABOUT THEM. WE DON'T KNOW TOO MUCH ABOUT LAWRENCE SHARP AND FRANK FOX. BUT THERE'S NO EVIDENCE WHATSOEVER THAT THEY CONSENTED TO BEING KILLED. SO THAT WOULD BE AN AGGRAVATING FACTOR.

WHETHER OR NOT THE OFFENSE WAS COMMITTED UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES WHICH THE DEFENDANT REASONABLY BELIEVED TO BE A MORAL JUSTIFICATION OR EXTENUATION FOR HIS CONDUCT.

12/2

THERE CAN BE NO MORAL JUSTIFICATION FOR THIS. THIS WOULD BE -- AT LEAST, I CAN SPECULATE THAT A CASE MAY COME UP FOR MORAL JUSTIFICATION WHERE YOU HAVE SOMEONE DYING, TERMINALLY ILL OF CANCER OR SOMETHING, AND YOU DO -- YOU PARTICIPATE IN A MERCY-TYPE KILLING OR SOMETHING LIKE THAT. THAT COULD BE MORAL JUSTIFICATION. NOT -- NOTHING THAT WE HAVE SEEN HERE IN COURT. SO THAT WOULD ALSO BE AN AGGRAVATING FACTOR.

WHETHER OR NOT THE DEFENDANT ACTED UNDER EXTREME DURESS OR UNDER THE SUBSTANTIAL DOMINATION OF ANOTHER PERSON.

THE ONE THAT'S REALLY GOT THAT IS -- WOULD BE JAMES MUNRO OR GREG MILEY. IF YOU ARE PROSECUTING MILEY OR MUNRO HERE, THEY COULD PROBABLY GET UP AND MAKE A BIG WHOOP-DE-DO ABOUT THAT BECAUSE THEY WERE UNDER THE SUBSTANTIAL DOMINATION OF THE DEFENDANT, BUT IT'S NOT THE OTHER WAY AROUND. SO THAT WOULD BE AN AGGRAVATING FACTOR HERE.

THERE'S NO EVIDENCE WHATSOEVER THAT THE DEFENDANT ACTED UNDER DURESS OR DOMINATION OF ANOTHER PERSON.

WHETHER OR NOT AT THE TIME OF THE OFFENSE THE CAPACITY OF THE DEFENDANT TO APPRECIATE THE CRIMINALITY OF HIS CONDUCT OR TO CONFORM HIS CONDUCT TO THE REQUIREMENTS OF LAW WAS IMPAIRED AS A RESULT OF MENTAL DISEASE OR DEFECT OR THE EFFECTS OF INTOXICATION.

THERE'S NO EVIDENCE OF THAT.

THE ONLY EVIDENCE WE HAVE OF THAT IS THAT THE

12/3

DEFENDANT CLEANED EVERY CRIME SCENE UP METICULOUSLY SO THAT HE WOULDN'T GET CAUGHT. CAREFUL NOT TO LEAVE FOOTPRINTS, FINGERPRINTS, THAT TYPE OF THING. CAREFUL NOT TO LEAVE ANY EVIDENCE.

SO WITH RESPECT TO THE EVIDENCE CONCERNING THAT PARTICULAR FACTOR, IT'S AGGRAVATING. THERE'S NO EVIDENCE OF MENTAL DISEASE OR DEFECT OR INTOXICATION. IT'S JUST THE OPPOSITE.

THE AGE OF THE DEFENDANT AT THE TIME OF THE CRIME. YOU CAN SEE FROM THE ATASCADERO RECORDS THAT THE DEFENDANT WAS BORN JANUARY 8, 1947.

THAT MEANS, AS I COUNT ANYWAY, THAT THE DEFENDANT WAS 32 WHEN HE KILLED FRANK FOX AND WAS 33 WHEN HE KILLED RUSTY RUGH, GLEN BARKER AND LAWRENCE SHARP.

I WOULD THINK IF A PERSON WAS VERY YOUNG, THAT MIGHT BE A MITIGATING FACTOR. ONE MIGHT WANT TO SAY A YOUNG PERSON HASN'T HAD THE OPPORTUNITY TO EXPERIENCE IN LIFE THOSE EXPERIENCES WHICH MATURE A PERSON. AND HE MAY NOT BE RESPONSIBLE. WE SEE THAT ALL THE TIME.

MY KIDS. WHENEVER THEY STEP OUT OF LINE, YOU'RE SAYING TO THEM, "THEY ARE NOT REALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR EVERYTHING THEY DO," BECAUSE THEY HAVEN'T -- THEY HAVEN'T ATTAINED THE MATURITY OR THE MATURATION THAT ONE WOULD HAVE AS AN ADULT.

HERE AGAIN, WHERE SOMEONE IS VERY OLD, ONE MIGHT SAY THAT WOULD BE A MITIGATING FACTOR BECAUSE THERE MAY BE

12/4

SOME TYPE OF MENTAL IMPAIRMENT WHEN ONE GETS VERY OLD.

BUT WHEN ONE IS 32 AND 33, I WOULD SUBMIT TO YOU THAT THAT'S AN AGGRAVATING FACTOR. THAT PERSON HAS LIVED 32 YEARS, A LITTLE OVER 32 YEARS WHEN HE KILLED FRANK FOX. HE'S HAD ALL OF THE CHANCES HE COULD HAVE, AND HE STILL CHOSE TO KILL FRANK FOX, CHOSE TO MURDER HIM.

THE AGE IN THIS CASE I WOULD SUBMIT TO YOU IS AN AGGRAVATING FACTOR.

WHETHER OR NOT THE DEFENDANT WAS AN ACCOMPLICE TO THE OFFENSE AND HIS PARTICIPATION IN THE COMMISSION OF THE OFFENSE WAS RELATIVELY MINOR.

THE COURT IS GOING TO GIVE YOU SOME INSTRUCTIONS ON ACCOMPLICE SO YOU'LL KNOW WHAT ACCOMPLICE MEANS.

A GOOD EXAMPLE OF AN ACCOMPLICE IS THIS: WHERE A PERSON DRIVES A CAR WITH ANOTHER INDIVIDUAL IN IT TO A BANK, STOPS OUT IN FRONT OF THE BANK, STAYS IN THE CAR, KEEPS THE ENGINE RUNNING, LET'S THE PERSON GO INTO THE BANK AND -- FOR THE PURPOSES OF ROBBING THE TELLER IN THE BANK, COMING OUT, THE PERSON OUT IN THE CAR IS AN ACCOMPLICE.

IF THE PERSON THAT WENT INTO THE BANK TO DO THE ROBBERY KILLED THE TELLER AND A NUMBER OF OTHER PEOPLE IN THE BANK, ONE CAN SEE THAT THE GRAVITY OF THE OFFENSE WOULD NOT BE THE SAME WITH RESPECT TO THE PERSON DOING THE KILLING AS OPPOSED TO THE PERSON OUT IN THE CAR.

ONE, THE PERSON IN THE CAR MAY NOT HAVE KNOWN THAT THERE WAS GOING TO BE A KILLING OR WHATEVER.

13-1

SO YOU CAN SEE IN SOME CASES WHERE AN ACCOMPLICE IS CHARGED AND YOU'RE SEEKING A DEATH PENALTY ON AN ACCOMPLICE, THAT THAT MAY BE A MITIGATING FACTOR, I.E., THE FACT THE PERSON IS AN ACCOMPLICE IN THIS CASE, THE DEFENDANT IS, THERE'S NO EVIDENCE AT ALL THAT HE'S AN ACCOMPLICE. HE IS THE FORCE THAT CAUSES ALL THIS. HE IS THE FORCE THAT SEEKS OUT GREGORY MILEY, THE FORCE THAT SEEKS OUT JAMES MUNRO AND TURNS THEM INTO KILLERS. SO THAT WOULD BE AN AGGRAVATING FACTOR IN THIS CASE.

WE'RE DOWN TO THE FINAL FACTOR, ANY OTHER SITUATION WHICH EXTENUATES THE GRAVITY OF THE CRIME, EVEN THOUGH IT'S NOT A LEGAL EXCUSE FOR A CRIME.

THERE WOULD BE, IN MY OPINION, THE ONLY PLACE WHERE YOU CAN GET ANY MITIGATION ON ANY OF THESE FACTORS THAT WE'VE HEARD SO FAR AND I'M NOT EVEN SURE, REALLY SURE HOW YOU CAN GET MITIGATION HERE.

I FELT VERY SORRY FOR MRS. BONIN, YET I REALLY FELT SORRY FOR HER. I FELT SORRY THAT THIS DEFENDANT PUT HER IN A POSITION WHERE SHE HAD TO DO THAT. SHE HAD TO COME IN HERE AND SAY THAT.

IT WAS A VERY SAD THING FOR ME TO SEE, AND I'M SURE THAT ALL OF US WOULD BE IN THE SAME SITUATION IF ONE OF OUR CHILDREN WAS IN THE SAME PREDICAMENT.

BUT YOU CAN CONSIDER SYMPATHY AND YOU CAN CONSIDER PITY AND YOU CAN CONSIDER ANYTHING ELSE YOU FEEL YOU SHOULD CONSIDER UNDER THIS LAST CATEGORY, AND IF YOU

13-2

FEEL THAT AS UP TO MITIGATION, YOU CAN MITIGATE THAT LAST CATEGORY.

BUT FROM THE EVIDENCE THAT I'VE SEEN HERE, I DON'T THINK MR. BONIN DESERVES ANY SYMPATHY WHATSOEVER.

THERE'S A LOT OF SYMPATHY THAT I THINK CAN BE GIVEN OUT HERE. I THINK MRS. BONIN DESERVES SOME. MR. BONIN DOESN'T. THERE ARE A LOT OF OTHER PEOPLE THAT WE'VE SEEN HERE THAT DESERVE SYMPATHY, BUT NOT MR. BONIN. MR. BONIN DOESN'T DESERVE OUR PITY EITHER.

MR. BONIN HAS INTENTIONALLY CHOSEN TO EMBARK ON A COURSE OF CONDUCT TO GRATIFY HIS OWN SEXUAL INTERESTS BY KILLING YOUNG, LITTLE BOYS FROM AGE 12 TO 19. HE'S INTENTIONALLY CHOSEN TO TAKE THEIR LIVES. FOR THAT AND BECAUSE ALL THESE FACTORS ADD UP TO AGGRAVATION, I WOULD ASK YOU TO FIND THAT THE AGGRAVATION OUTWEIGHS THE MITIGATION IN THIS RESPECT IN THIS CASE AND IMPOSE THE DEATH PENALTY WITH RESPECT TO THE KILLINGS OF FRANK FOX, GLEN BARKER, RUSSELL RUGH AND LAWRENCE SHARP.

I'M VIRTUALLY THROUGH NOW. IT'S -- I'M SURE IT'S PROBABLY NOT EVEN NECESSARY TO SAY THIS.

I HAVE THE UTMOST RESPECT FOR MR. CHARVET AND MISS STEWART. THERE ARE TIMES, HOWEVER, THAT SOMETIMES AS I'M STARTING TO JUST PUDDLE A LITTLE MYSELF NOW, THERE ARE SOMETIMES WHEN ATTORNEYS GET INVOLVED TO SOME EXTENT, THEY MAY CRY THEMSELVES, AND I WOULD ASK YOU IF THAT HAPPENS, TO KEEP THAT IN PERSPECTIVE.

13-3

THANK YOU VERY MUCH. THANK YOU, YOUR HONOR. THANK YOU, COUNSEL.

THE COURT: MR. CHARVET.

MR. CHARVET: YES. BASED ON THE STATEMENT MADE BY THE PROSECUTING ATTORNEY, WOULD IT BE POSSIBLE WITH THE JURY, IT'S THREE O'CLOCK, TO HAVE A FIVE-MINUTE RECESS?

THE COURT: VERY WELL. LADIES AND GENTLEMEN, WE WILL TAKE APPROXIMATELY A FIVE-MINUTE RECESS, AND THEN WE'LL RESUME WITH THE ARGUMENT. REMEMBER THE ADMONITION.

DON'T DISCUSS THE CASE NOR ANYTHING ABOUT THE CASE EITHER AMONG YOURSELVES OR WITH ANYONE ELSE. DON'T FORM OR EXPRESS ANY OPINION AS TO ANY MATTERS CONCERNED IN THE CASE UNTIL IT IS SUBMITTED TO YOU.

(RECESS.)

No. 88-6341

ORIGINAL

Supreme Court, U.S.
FILED
FEB 27 1989
JOSEPH F. SPANIOL, JR.
CLERK

IN THE

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

OCTOBER TERM, 1988

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN,

Petitioner,

vs.

THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

Respondent.

On Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the Supreme Court of California

BRIEF OF RESPONDENT IN OPPOSITION

RECEIVED
FEB 23 1989
OFFICE OF THE CLERK
SUPREME COURT, U.S.

JOHN K. VAN DE KAMP, Attorney General
of the State of California

STEVE WHITE,
Chief Assistant Attorney General

MICHAEL D. WELLINGTON,
Supervising Deputy Attorney General

STEVEN H. ZEIGEN,
Supervising Deputy Attorney General

110 West A Street, Suite 700
San Diego, CA 92101
Telephone: (619) 237-7679

Attorneys for Respondent

QUESTION PRESENTED

Whether the prosecutor's argument, during the penalty phase, impermissibly misled the jury as to the scope of its sentencing responsibility so as to render the death judgment invalid under the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments.

PARTIES

Petitioner, William George Bonin, is a prisoner incarcerated under judgment of death at the California State Prison at San Quentin, California. Respondent is the People of the State of California.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

	Page
OPINION BELOW	1
JURISDICTION	1
CONSTITUTION, STATUTES AND PROVISIONS INVOLVED	1
STATEMENT OF THE CASE	1
STATEMENT OF FACTS	3
SUMMARY OF RESPONDENT'S ARGUMENT	8
ARGUMENT	9
THE JURY RETURNING THE DEATH PENALTY WAS PROPERLY INSTRUCTED AND GUIDED IN ITS DISCRETION	9
A. The Instructional Language	9
B. The Prosecutor's Reference to the Absence of Mitigation	13
CONCLUSION	14

TABLE OF AUTHORITIES

	Page
Cases
Caldwell v. Mississippi 472 U.S. 320, [86 L.Ed.2d 231] (1985)	12
California v. Brown 479 U.S. 538 (1987)	10
California v. Ramos 463 U.S. 992, 1005, (1983)	10
Franklin v. Lynaugh 487 U.S. ____, [101 L.Ed.2d 155, 175] (1988)	10
Jackson v. Dugger 837 F.2d 1469 (11th Cir. 1988)	12
Lockett v. Ohio 438 U.S. 586, 606 (1978)	10
Mills v. Maryland 486 U.S. ___, [100 L.Ed.2d 384, 403] (1988)	11
Peek v. Kemp 784 F.2d 1479, 1488 (11th Cir. 1986)	11
People v. Bonin 46 Cal.3d 659, 706-707, (1988)	11
People v. Brown 40 Cal.3d 512, (1985)	11
People v. Davenport 41 Cal.3d 247 (1985)	13
People v. Ghent 43 Cal.3d 739, 775 (1987)	13
People v. Melton 44 Cal.3d 713, 761 (1988)	12
Roberts v. Louisiana 428 U.S. 325 (1976)	10
Woodson v. North Carolina 428 U.S. 280 (1976)	10
Zant v. Stephens 462 U.S. 862 (1983)	14
Statutes
California Penal Code
§ 190.3	9, 13
Other Authorities
CALJIC No. 8.84.1	9, 13
CALJIC No. 8.84.2	9

OPINION BELOW

Petitioner seeks review of an opinion of the California Supreme Court affirming his judgment of death. (People v. Bonin (1988) 46 Cal.3d 659; attached in Appendix 1 (a).)

JURISDICTION

This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. section 1257(3).

CONSTITUTION, STATUTES AND PROVISIONS INVOLVED

United States Constitution, Eighth and Fourteenth amendments.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Following the returning of a 33 count indictment on June 24, 1981, by the Grand Jury of Orange County, a 33 count information was filed by the District Attorney of Orange County on August 20, 1981, in which appellant was charged with seven murders in violation of California Penal Code section 187. Each murder accusation included one or more of the following special circumstances: California Penal Code section 190.2 subdivision (a)(3) (multiple murders); section 190.2 subdivision (a)(17)(i) (murder during the course of a robbery); section 190.2 subdivision (a)(17)(vi) (murder during oral copulation); section 190.2 subdivision (a)(18) (intentional murder during which torture was inflicted); section 190.2 subdivision (a)(17)(iv) (murder during a lewd and lascivious act on a child under fourteen years of age); section 190.2 subdivision (a)(17)(ii) (murder during the commission of a kidnapping).

Appellant was also accused of seven counts of robbery (Cal. Pen. Code, § 211), during which great bodily injury was inflicted (Cal. Pen. Code, § 12022.7); seven counts of forcible oral copulation (Cal. Pen. Code, § 288a, subd. (c)); seven counts of false imprisonment (Cal. Pen. Code, § 236); two counts of forcible sodomy (Cal. Pen. Code, § 286, subd. (c)); and one count each of lewd and lascivious acts on a child under fourteen (Cal. Pen. Code § 288, subd. (a)); kidnapping (Cal. Pen. Code, § 207); and kidnapping for purposes of committing a robbery (Cal. Pen. Code, § 209). (CT 548-560.)

Appellant was arraigned and pled not guilty to all the charges, while denying the allegations. (CT 563.)

Following the striking of counts four, eight, thirteen, seventeen, and eighteen through thirty-three on a motion of the People, the information was renumbered. (CT 1489-190.) A jury was impanelled to try the case on June 7, 1983. (CT 1501.)

On July 25, 1983, the prosecution completed the presentation of its case. Thereafter, in response to appellant's motion to dismiss pursuant to California Penal Code section 1118.1, the trial court dismissed the robbery, oral copulation, and torture special circumstances in count one; the oral copulation alleged in count three; the robbery oral copulation and torture special circumstances alleged in count four; the oral copulation alleged in count six; the robbery, sodomy, oral copulation and torture special circumstances alleged in count seven; the robbery alleged in count nine; the oral copulation alleged in count ten; the robbery, oral copulation, and torture special circumstances alleged in count eleven; and the oral copulation alleged in count thirteen. As concerned the robberies of the deceased victims in counts two, five, eight, and twelve, the section 1118.1 motion was denied. (CT 1536-1537.)

On August 2, 1983, jury verdicts were returned finding appellant guilty of four counts of first degree murder (counts one, four, seven, eleven) with the special circumstance of multiple murders being found true as to each. In addition, appellant was found guilty of four counts of robbery (counts two, five, eight, twelve) during which he personally inflicted great bodily injury. (CT 1544-1560.) Thereafter, the penalty phase of the trial was held, with the jury returning a death verdict on August 22, 1983. (CT 1583-1584.)

Upon automatic appeal to the California Supreme Court, the judgment was affirmed in its entirety. (People v. Bonin, supra, 46 Cal.3d 659.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

"On December 2, 1979, the nude body of 17-year-old Dennis Frank Fox was found on the side of the Ortega Highway in Caspar's Regional Park in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Fox had been killed by ligature strangulation about November 30. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

"On March 22, 1980, the nude body of 15-year-old Russell Rugh was found off the Ortega Highway in the San Juan Campgrounds in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Rugh had been killed by ligature strangulation on March 21, or 22. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

"On the same day and in the same place that Rugh's body was discovered, the nude body of 14-year-old Glenn Barker was found; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Like Rugh, Barker has been killed by ligature strangulation on March 21, or 22. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

"On May 18, 1980, the nude body of 17-year-old Lawrence Sharp was found at a gasoline station on the corner of Westminster Boulevard and Bolsa Chica in Westminster in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Sharp had been killed by ligature strangulation on May 17, or 18. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles an wrists, as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the head hair.

"In order to establish that it was defendant who had perpetrated the killings, the prosecution presented expert testimony that the triskelion-shaped fibers discovered on the body of each of the victims were consistent with carpeting in a van owned by defendant, and that the van was stained in several places with human blood.

"To establish identity, the prosecution also introduced 'other crimes' evidence relating to the killing of Charles Miranda and Steven Wells.1/

"On February 3, 1980, the nude body of 15-year-old Charles Miranda was found in an alley in downtown Los Angeles; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Miranda had been killed by ligature strangulation in the late night of February 2 or in the early morning of February 3. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore the same kind of

---

1. The prosecution had moved to introduce "other crimes" evidence relating to James Macabe and Darin Lee Kendrick as well as Miranda and Wells. The court granted the motion as to the latter two victims but denied to as to the former.

triskelion-shaped fiber in the pubic area that the bodies of Fox, Rugh, Barker, and Sharp bore.

"Gregory Miley, a sexual partner of defendant and about 19-years-old at the time relevant here, testified that it was defendant who was responsible for the death of Miranda. Specifically, he said that he was with defendant as defendant was driving his van on the night of February 2, 1980; defendant picked up Miranda in Hollywood and consensually sodomized him in the back of the van; he then tied him up; afterwards, he said to Miley, 'Kid's going to die. Kid's going to -- this kid's going to die,' Miley responded, 'Why don't you just let the kid go?,' and defendant replied, 'No, because he'll know us and he'll know the van'; defendant then proceeded to strangle Miranda with Miley's help, dumped his body in an alley in downtown Los Angeles, and disposed of his clothing and other property in various locations.

"On June 3, 1980, the nude body of 18-year-old Steven Wells was found behind a gasoline station in Huntington Beach; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Wells had been killed by ligature strangulation on June 2. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore the same kind of triskelion-shaped fiber that the bodies of Fox, Rugh, Barker, Sharp and Miranda bore.

"James Munro, a sexual partner of defendant and about 19-years-old at the time relevant here, testified that it was defendant who was responsible for the death of Wells. Specifically, he said that he was with defendant as defendant was driving his van on June 2, 1980; defendant picked up Wells as he was hitchhiking and participated in mutual consensual oral copulation with him in the back of the van; the trio eventually arrived at defendant's home in Downey; there, defendant and Wells continued their sexual activity; soon defendant persuaded Wells to allow himself to be tied up; defendant took money and items of identification from Wells's wallet; he then proceeded with Munro's help to strangle Wells and to dump his body behind a gasoline station in Huntington Beach; defendant told Munro that he was the 'Freeway Killer,' and that Miley was involved with him in the killings.

"To establish identity, the prosecution also introduced evidence of extrajudicial admissions by defendant linking him to the charged crimes. Among other witnesses it called one David Lopez, a reporter for Los Angeles television station KNXT. Lopez testified that defendant had admitted that it was he who had killed Fox, Rugh, Barker, and Sharp, and also Miranda and Wells. Other witnesses gave testimony to the effect that defendant has said he would not leave witnesses to his criminal activity alive.

"Through the examination of its own witnesses and the cross-examination of the prosecution's, the defense attempted to show that the evidence could not support a determination beyond a reasonable doubt that it was defendant who killed Fox, Rugh, Barker, and Sharp or even Miranda and Wells. Specifically, in its case-in-chief it attacked Munro's credibility and tried to undermine the persuasiveness of the prosecution's expert testimony concerning the triskelion-shaped fibers found on the victims' bodies.

"At the penalty phase the prosecution presented evidence in aggravation. Some of that evidence related to prior adjudicated felonies and told the following tale. Defendant committed sexual attacks in late 1968 and early 1969 against 12-year-old Lawrence B., 14-year-old William J., 17-year-old John T., and 18-year-old Jesus M. As a result of his activities, in the spring of 1969 he was convicted of molesting and forcibly orally copulating Lawrence B., kidnapping and sodomizing William J., sodomizing John T., and forcibly orally copulating Jesus M., and was committed to Atascadero State Hospital as a mentally disordered sex offender amenable to treatment. In 1971 he was returned to court, declared unamenable to treatment, and committed to prison. Subsequent to his release, defendant committed a sexual attack on 14-year-old David M. in September 1975. Later that year he was convicted of forcibly orally copulating the boy and was sentenced to prison.

"The prosecution also introduced evidence relating to the Los Angeles killings. Specifically, it attempted to prove that in Southern California between August 1979 and June 1980 defendant sexually attacked and killed Marcus Grabs, Donald Hyden, David Murillo, Charles Miranda, James Macabe, Ronald Gatlin, Harry Todd Turner, Steven Wood, Darin Lee Kendrick and Steven Wells, all of whom were children or youths. It also attempted to show that Kendrick was killed in the performance of a ritual of the black art.

"In mitigation the defense presented evidence that told the following tale. Although his father caused the family serious problems as a result of drinking and gambling, defendant was a good and helpful child. At a young age he was sodomized by older men. He joined the armed forces and served in Vietnam. There he earned a medal for gallantry for saving a soldier at the risk of his own life. There also he began to engage in violent nonconsensual homosexual activity. He returned from Vietnam a changed man. His downward course into sexual criminality continued, culminating in murder. Apart from his difficulties with regard to sex, however, he was a good and helpful man." (People v. Bonin, supra, 46 Cal.3d at pp. 688-672.)

SUMMARY OF RESPONDENT'S ARGUMENT

Neither the jury instructions nor the prosecutor's argument to the jury deprived Petitioner of his right to the individualized consideration of the mitigating factors by the jury, prior to it determining death was the appropriate penalty. (Lockett v. Ohio (1978) 438 U.S. 586, 606 (plurality opinion); California v. Ramos (1983) 463 U.S. 992.) While the discretion of the jury was "suitably directed and limited" (Gregg v. Georgia (1976) 428 U.S. 153, 189), it was able to consider all relevant mitigating evidence concerning Petitioner's background, character and/or the circumstances of the offenses. (California v. Brown (1987) 479 U.S. 538, [93 L.Ed.2d at pp. 934, 942], (O'Connor, J., concurring).

ARGUMENT

THE JURY RETURNING THE DEATH PENALTY WAS PROPERLY INSTRUCTED AND GUIDED IN ITS DISCRETION

Petitioner contends the penalty phase jury was misled by a combination of the language contained in CALJIC No. 8.84.2, infra, and the argument by the prosecutor concerning the application of this instruction, as well as what constituted aggravating factors. A review of each of facet of Petitioner's argument demonstrates the jury which determined the death penalty was appropriate was properly instructed and guided in the exercise of its discretion.

A. The Instructional Language

In accordance with CALJIC No. 8.84.2 the penalty phase jury was instructed to:

". . . consider, take into account, and be guided by the applicable factors of aggravating and mitigating circumstances upon which you have been instructed.

"If you conclude that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of death.

"However, if you determine that the mitigating circumstances outweight [sic] the aggravating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of confinement in the state prison for life without the possibility of parole." (RT 10, 153.)

While Petitioner would choose to examine this instruction in a vacuum, the fact remains the jury was also instructed what constituted mitigating factors in accordance with CALJIC No. 8.84.1 and California Penal Code section 190.3. In this regard the jury was informed it could consider as mitigating "any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime, even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime or any other factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation." (RT 10, 136.) Thus, contrary to Petitioner's position (p. 6) the instructions to the jury were balanced as concerns the weighing of the aggravating and mitigating circumstances, and were unrestricted in terms of what the jury could consider as mitigating.

In California v. Brown 479 U.S. 538 (1987), this Court reiterated the two basic prerequisites to a valid death sentence.

> "First, sentencers may not be given unbridled discretion in determining the fates of those charged with capital offenses. The Constitution instead requires that death penalty statutes be structured so as to prevent the penalty from being administered in an arbitrary and unpredictable fashion. [Citations.] Second, even though the sentencer's discretion must be restricted, the capital defendant generally must be allowed to introduce any relevant mitigating evidence regarding his 'character or record and any of the circumstances of the offense.' [Citations.] Consideration of such evidence is a 'constitutionally indispensable part of the process of inflicting the penalty of death.' [Citations.]" (Id., at 93 L.Ed.2d at pp. 939-940.)

If the statutory scheme under consideration fails to provide the requisite guided discretion, this Court has simply struck it down. (See e.g. Woodson v. North Carolina 428 U.S. 280 (1976); Roberts v. Louisiana 428 U.S. 325 (1976).) Similarly, a scheme which does not permit "individualized consideration of mitigating factors" is unconstitutional. (Lockett v. Ohio 438 U.S. 586, 606 (1978).) California's death penalty statutes have passed both structural hurdles. (California v. Ramos 463 U.S. 992, 1005, (1983), n. 19); California v. Brown, supra, 93 L.Ed.2d n. at p. 939.)

When reviewing the sentencing procedure in a specific case, the issue is whether the jury was prevented "from giving mitigating effect to any evidence relevant to petitioner's character or background or to the circumstances of the offense. (Franklin v. Lynaugh 487 U.S. ___, [101 L.Ed.2d 155, 175]

(1988), (O'Connor, J., concurring).) Jury instructions are examined from the perspective of how a "reasonable jury" would understand and apply them. (Mills v. Maryland 486 U.S. ___, [100 L.Ed.2d 384, 403] (1988), (White, J., concurring).)

As the California Supreme Court noted in its opinion, the "shall" language of the instruction could not be said to have confused the jury. (People v. Bonin 46 Cal.3d 659, 706-707, (1988).) There was no likelihood the jurors understood the instruction to mean they were to mechanically weigh the various aggravating and mitigating circumstances, reaching the appropriate conclusion only after an imaginary scale tilted one way or the other. (Ibid.) Nor was there any possibility the jury determined the penalty should be death even though believing it an inappropriate sentence. (Ibid.) Thus, the concerns addressed by the court in People v. Brown 40 Cal.3d 512, (1985) were not present in the instant case.

This conclusion is unassailable. First, Petitioner fails to note the "shall" language of the instruction pertains to both the aggravating and the mitigating circumstances, with the latter factors mentioned last.[2] Certainly, the language in this regard is balanced and did nothing to "skew the jury towards death." (See, Peek v. Kemp 784 F.2d 1479, 1488 (11th Cir. 1986).)

The prosecutor's argument to the jury did nothing to misconstrue the meaning of the instruction. The prosecutor began his argument by going through the various instructions the jury would be guided by. In so doing, the prosecutor related the various charges facing Petitioner and stated

> "The applicable standard is 'shall, shall.' In other words, if you find as a group that the aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating, then the law requires that you shall return a death penalty. If you find as a group that the mitigating factors outweigh the aggravation, then you shall return a verdict of life without parole.

2. In Peek, the error in the instructions was its defining only the aggravating factor, and not what was meant by mitigating. (784 F.2d at p. 1488.) Thus, unlike the present case there was an imbalance caused by the langauge of the instruction.

"It doesn't give any discretion once you have found the factors either aggravating or mitigating. You have to do it one way or the other once you've found that to be true." (RT 10,074.)

Immediately thereafter, the prosecutor told the jury

"The discretion will come in if you want to use discretion, comes in in the last element of the criteria where you can consider anything else such as sympathy, pity, whatever." (RT 10,074-10,075.)

In the remaining portions of his argument the prosecutor attempted to convince the jury the facts surrounding Petitioner's offenses did not warrant any finding of mitigation. (See RT 10,075-10,099.) During defense counsel's argument to the jury he attempted to show Petitioner's ability to function in a structured environment as a reason for sparing his life. In doing so, he particularly advised the jury, its decision was not a rote, mechanical one. (See RT 10,101-10,122.)

Thus, there is nothing to undercut the conclusion reached by the California Supreme Court. At no time was the jury deprived of its ability to give individualized consideration to Petitioner's circumstances. While guided by statute, the jury was free to consider whatever mitigating evidence it thought relevant to the determination of the proper sentence. Contra. Petitioner's unsupportable assertion, there was no shred of a notion that some body other than the jury was responsible for determining the appropriate sentence. (See Caldwell v. Mississippi 472 U.S. 320, [86 L.Ed.2d 231] (1985); People v. Melton 44 Cal.3d 713, 761 (1988).)

Nor was there the positing of a "presumptive formula" as condemned in Jackson v. Dugger 837 F.2d 1469 (11th Cir. 1988). The jury was never informed death was a preferred sentence in the absence of mitigation. Instead, the jury was guided in the determination of what was an applicable aggravating factor, while at the same time being free to consider any relevant circumstance as mitigating. Clearly, prior to returning with what it thought was the appropriate penalty in light of the egregiousness of Petitioner's offenses, the jury gave Petitioner the required individualized consideration.

B. The Prosecutor's Reference to the Absence of Mitigation[3]

During his argument to the jury, the prosecutor went through the various factors enumerated in California Penal Code section 190.3 (CALJIC 8.84.1). By demonstrating to the jury there was no evidence of any of the mitigating factors specified in subdivisions (a) through (j) (RT 10,094-10,098) the prosecutor argued such an absence constituted aggravation. While a misstatement of the law in light of People v. Davenport 41 Cal.3d 247 (1985) which came down after the trial, what is clear is there was no harm.

First, the jury was to consider only those factors which were applicable. (RT 10,135.) Thus, only if an aggravating factor was applicable would the jury have considered it. Moreover, after informing the jury no mitigation could be found in subdivisions (a) through (j), the prosecutor did acknowledge,

"We're down to the final factor, any other situation which extenuates the gravity of the crime, even though it's not a legal excuse for a crime.

"There would be, in my opinion, the only place where you can get any mitigation on any of these factors that we've heard so far and I'm not even sure, really sure how you can get mitigation there." (RT 10,098.)

---

3. Petitioner ignores the fact the California Supreme Court rejected this argument on more than one ground. Before rejecting it on the merits, the Court noted there was no objection at trial which would have alerted the court and cured any error. Thus, under California law, the issue of the propriety of the prosecutor's argument was not preserved for appeal., People v. Bonin, supra, 46 Cal.3d at p. 702 citing, inter alia, People v. Ghent 43 Ca'.3d 739, 775 (1987).

At no time does Petitioner dispute the prosecutor's assertion regarding the lack of mitigation, other than in the catch-all subdivision (k). Thus, this case does not present a Zant v. Stephens 462 U.S. 862 (1983) scenario, for there is no indication the jury relied on any improper aggravating factor. Indeed, as even the concurring opinion of Justice Broussard recognizes (People v. Bonin, supra, 46 Cal.3d at p. 711), the sheer magnitude of the aggravating factors presented against Petitioner sealed his fate. As the California Supreme Court found, the mitigating factors were "virtually nonexistent." (Id., at p. 702.)

CONCLUSION

Respondent respectfully requests the Petition for Writ of Certiorari be denied.

Respectfully submitted,

JOHN K. VAN DE KAMP, Attorney General
of the State of California

STEVE WHITE, Chief Assistant Attorney General

MICHAEL D. WELLINGTON,
Supervising Deputy Attorney General

STEVEN E. EISEN,
Supervising Deputy Attorney General

Attorneys for Respondent

SHE:ab
1/31/89
SD88XU0011

SUPREME COURT
FILED
AUG 29 1988
Clerk
DEPUTY

COPY

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA

THE PEOPLE,

Plaintiff and Respondent,

v.

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN,

Defendant and Appellant.

Date Filed DOCKET
CR. SD
No. S3V30651
Entered by Date Rec'd 9-1-88
004565

[Crim. 23286]

(Super. Ct. No. C-47500)

This is an automatic appeal from a judgment of death (Pen. Code, § 1239, subd. (b)) imposed under the 1978 death penalty law (id., § 190.1 et seq.).

After a jury trial defendant was convicted of the first degree murder (Pen. Code, § 187) and robbery (id., § 211) of Dennis Frank Fox, Glenn Barker, Russell Rugh, and Lawrence Sharp. As to each murder count, he was found to have been convicted in the same proceeding of more than one offense of murder within the meaning of the multiple-murder special circumstance of Penal Code section 190.2, subdivision (a)(3). For each of the four murders he received the penalty of death.

As we shall explain, we conclude that the judgment must be affirmed.

I. THE FACTS

As a result of his activities in Southern California in the years 1979 and 1980, defendant--who was then in his

- SEE CONCURRING OPINION -

early 30's--was dubbed the "Freeway Killer" and his murders the "freeway killings." Before he was tried in this Orange County proceeding, he was tried by a jury in Los Angeles County action No. A360975. There he was convicted of the first degree murder and robbery of Marcus Grabs, Donald Hyden, David Murillo, Charles Miranda, James Macabe, Ronald Gatlin, Harry Todd Turner, Steven Wood, Darin Lee Kendrick, and Steven Wells; as to each murder count, special circumstance allegations of multiple murder and felony murder-robbery (Pen. Code, § 190.2, subd. (a)(17)(i)) were found true; and for each murder he received the penalty of death.

The tale that is told by the evidence introduced at the guilt phase of the lengthy trial of this action is as follows.

On December 2, 1979, the nude body of 17-year-old Dennis Frank Fox was found on the side of the Ortega Highway in Casper's Regional Park in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Fox had been killed by ligature strangulation about November 30. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

On March 22, 1980, the nude body of 15-year-old Russell Rugh was found off the Ortega Highway in the San Juan Campgrounds in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Rugh had been killed by ligature strangulation on March 21 or 22. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

On the same day and in the same place that Rugh's body was discovered, the nude body of 14-year-old Glenn Barker was found; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Like Rugh, Barker had been killed by ligature strangulation on March 21 or 22. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the pubic area.

On May 18, 1980, the nude body of 17-year-old Lawrence Sharp was found at a gasoline station on the corner of Westminster Boulevard and Bolsa Chica in Westminster in Orange County; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Sharp had been killed by ligature strangulation on May 17 or 18. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists, as well as an approximately one-half inch ligature mark on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore triskelion-shaped fibers in the head hair.

In order to establish that it was defendant who had perpetrated the killings, the prosecution presented expert testimony that the triskelion-shaped fibers discovered on the body of each of the victims were consistent with carpeting in a van owned by defendant, and that the van was stained in several places with human blood.

To establish identity, the prosecution also introduced "other crimes" evidence relating to the killing of Charles Miranda and Steven Wells.1/

On February 3, 1980, the nude body of 15-year-old Charles Miranda was found in an alley in downtown Los Angeles; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Miranda had been killed by ligature strangulation in the late night of February 2 or in the early morning of February 3. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore the same kind of

---

1/ The prosecution had moved to introduce "other crimes" evidence relating to James Macabe and Darin Lee Kendrick as well as Miranda and Wells. The court granted the motion as to the latter two victims but denied it as to the former.

triskelion-shaped fiber in the pubic area that the bodies of Fox, Hugh, Barker, and Sharp bore.

Gregory Miley, a sexual partner of defendant and about 19 years old at the time relevant here, testified that it was defendant who was responsible for the death of Miranda. Specifically, he said that he was with defendant as defendant was driving his van on the night of February 2, 1980; defendant picked up Miranda in Hollywood and consensually sodomized him in the back of the van; he then tied him up; afterwards, he said to Miley, "Kid's going to die. Kid's going to--this kid's going to die," Miley responded, "Why don't you just let the kid go?," and defendant replied, "No, because he'll know us and he'll know the van"; defendant then proceeded to strangle Miranda with Miley's help, dumped his body in an alley in downtown Los Angeles, and disposed of his clothing and other property in various locations.

On June 3, 1980, the nude body of 18-year-old Steven Wells was found behind a gasoline station in Huntington Beach; no clothing or other identifying evidence was discovered at the scene. Wells had been killed by ligature strangulation on June 2. The body showed signs of beating about the face and elsewhere, exhibited ligature marks on the ankles and wrists as well as on the neck, revealed indications of sexual activity before death, and bore the same kind of triskelion-shaped fiber that the bodies of Fox, Hugh, Barker, Sharp, and Miranda bore.

James Munro, a sexual partner of defendant and about 19 years old at the time relevant here, testified that it was defendant who was responsible for the death of Wells. Specifically, he said that he was with defendant as defendant was driving his van on June 2, 1980; defendant picked up Wells as he was hitchhiking and participated in mutual consensual oral copulation with him in the back of the van; the trio eventually arrived at defendant's home in Downey; there, defendant and Wells continued their sexual activity; soon defendant persuaded Wells to allow himself to be tied up; defendant took money and items of identification from Wells's wallet; he then proceeded with Munro's help to strangle Wells and to dump his body behind a gasoline station in Huntington Beach; defendant told Munro that he was the "Freeway Killer," and that Miley was involved with him in the killings.

To establish identity, the prosecution also introduced evidence of extrajudicial admissions by defendant linking him to the charged crimes. Among other witnesses it called one David Lopez, a reporter for Los Angeles television station KNXT. Lopez testified that defendant had admitted that it was he who killed Fox, Hugh, Barker, and Sharp, and also Miranda and Wells. Other witnesses gave testimony to the effect that defendant had said he would not leave witnesses to his criminal activity alive.

Through the examination of its own witnesses and the cross-examination of the prosecution's, the defense attempted to show that the evidence could not support a determination beyond a reasonable doubt that it was defendant who killed Fox, Rugh, Barker, and Sharp or even Miranda and Wells. Specifically, in its case-in-chief it attacked Munro's credibility and tried to undermine the persuasiveness of the prosecution's expert testimony concerning the triskelion-shaped fibers found on the victims' bodies.

At the penalty phase the prosecution presented evidence in aggravation. Some of that evidence related to prior adjudicated felonies and told the following tale. Defendant committed sexual attacks in late 1968 and early 1969 against 12-year-old Lawrence B., 14-year-old William J., 17-year-old John T., and 18-year-old Jesus M. As a result of his activities, in the spring of 1969 he was convicted of molesting and forcibly orally copulating Lawrence B., kidnapping and sodomizing William J., sodomizing John T., and forcibly orally copulating Jesus M., and was committed to Atascadero State Hospital as a mentally disordered sex offender amenable to treatment. In 1971 he was returned to court, declared unamenable to treatment, and committed to prison. Subsequent to his release, defendant committed a sexual attack on 14-year-old David M. in September 1975. Later that year he was convicted of forcibly orally copulating the boy and was sentenced to prison.

The prosecution also introduced evidence relating to the Los Angeles killings. Specifically, it attempted to prove that in Southern California between August 1979 and June 1980 defendant sexually attacked and killed Marcus Grebs, Donald Hyden, David Murillo, Charles Miranda, James Macabe, Ronald Gatlin, Harry Todd Turner, Steven Wood, Darin Lee Kendrick, and Steven Wells, all of whom were children or youths. It also attempted to show that Kendrick was killed in the performance of a ritual of the black art.

In mitigation the defense presented evidence that told the following tale. Although his father caused the family serious problems as a result of drinking and gambling, defendant was a good and helpful child. At a young age he was sodomized by older men. He joined the armed forces and served in Vietnam. There he earned a medal for gallantry for saving a soldier at the risk of his own life. There also he began to engage in violent nonconsensual homosexual activity. He returned from Vietnam a changed man. His downward course into sexual criminality continued, culminating in murder. Apart from his difficulties with regard to sex, however, he was a good and helpful man.

II. GUILT ISSUES

Defendant makes three claims bearing on the issue of guilt. As we shall explain, none establishes reversible error.

A. Denial of Motion for Change of Venue

Defendant contends that the court erred when it denied a motion he made seeking a change of venue because of pretrial publicity.

Penal Code section 1033 (hereinafter section 1033) provides in relevant part as follows. "In a criminal action pending in the superior court, the court shall order a change of venue: [¶] (a) On motion of the defendant, to another county when it appears that there is a reasonable likelihood that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county." The provision is in essence a codification of the "standard of reasonableness" that we laid down in Maine v. Superior Court (1968) 68 Cal.2d 375, to guide trial courts in ruling on motions for change of venue and appellate courts in reviewing such rulings. (Id. at p. 383.) The Maine standard, in turn, is ultimately an implementation of Sixth and Fourteenth Amendment safeguards relating to the right of a criminal defendant to receive a fair trial before an impartial trier of fact. (See id. at pp. 381-384.)

Under section 1033 a criminal defendant may make a motion for change of venue based on pretrial publicity and its effect on the community from which the jurors for his trial are drawn. (E.g., People v. Anderson (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1104, 1130; People v. Harris (1981) 28 Cal.3d 935, 948 (plur. opn.).)

In passing on such a motion, the trial court looks to the following factors, among others: the nature and gravity of the offense, the size of the community, the status of the defendant, the popularity and prominence of the victim, and of course the nature and extent of the publicity. (See, e.g., People v. Anderson, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 1130 [stating the factors as guides for an appellate court's review of a change-of-venue ruling]; People v. Harris, supra, 28 Cal.3d at p. 948 [same].)

The ultimate question that the trial court must resolve, however, is whether on the peculiar facts of the individual case (see Maine v. Superior Court, supra, 68 Cal.2d at p. 388) there is a reasonable likelihood that the jurors who will be, or have been, chosen for the defendant's trial have formed such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they cannot make the determinations required of them with impartiality. (Cf. Patton v. Yount (1984) 467 U.S. 1025, 1035 [holding that for the resolution of a claim that pretrial publicity so infected a criminal trial as to deny the defendant his Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury, "The relevant question is . . . whether the jurors . . . had such fixed opinions that they could not judge impartially the guilt of the defendant"].)

The phrase "reasonable likelihood," we have explained, means something less than "more probable than not." (E.g., Martinez v. Superior Court (1981) 29 Cal.3d 574, 578.) But in view of the plain meaning of its words it must also mean something more than merely "possible."

Finally, as the moving party the criminal defendant seeking change of venue bears the burden of proof. People v. Boyce (1982) 128 Cal.App.3d 850, 856-859; People v. Whalen (1973) 33 Cal.App.3d 710, 716.)

The facts relevant to defendant's claim are as follows. In June 1980 defendant was arrested in connection with the "freeway killings." He was subsequently charged in Los Angeles County and Orange County. In October 1981 trial in the Los Angeles action commenced with jury selection. In the course of trial, evidence of the four Orange County murders was introduced to establish identity. In January 1982 the jury found defendant guilty of 10 counts of robbery and 10 counts of first degree murder with special circumstances as to each count, and fixed the punishment for each murder at death. In March 1982 the court entered judgment in accordance with the jury's verdicts. The news coverage relating to defendant and to the "Freeway Killer" and the "freeway killings" was extensive.

In July 1982, prior to commencement of trial in this action, defendant moved for change of venue because of pretrial publicity. After a lengthy hearing, the court denied the motion in November of the same year. Its reasoning was as follows.

"Bearing in mind the criteria which the court must take into consideration in evaluating the pending motion, the court has made the following determinations.

"First of all, with reference to the nature and gravity of the offense, certainly the court can think of no offense or offenses which would be more grave than those which are pending in this particular case. [¶] There are pending the four murder charges.

"Secondly, with reference to the size of the community, the evidence is clear that we have a community that is approximately two million people--consists of approximately two million people. [¶] Additionally, the voter registration is in excess of one million. [¶] The court . . . also notes that the panels now drawn also consist of both people who have registered to vote, and, in addition thereto, we also draw from people who have obtained driver's licenses that may not be registered. [¶] Consequently, it is the court's determination from those facts that the pool which would be available is in excess of the number of people who are registered to vote.

"The next criteria is the status of the defendant in the community or of the victims in the community. Certainly there is nothi[illegible] in the record that would indicate that either of the individuals have any particular status except when we are dealing with numerous victims, then we do have a situation where, within isolated groups within particular communities which comprise the county as a whole, then a certain status does arise.

"And then the last is the nature and extent of the coverage. Obviously this is a case that has commanded a great deal of media coverage both by radio--pardon me, both television and newspaper, and in addition thereto, some radio coverage. [¶] The determination that the court has to make just what effect has this coverage had on the minds of the community which would lead the court to believe that the defendant could not--there is a reasonable likelihood that the defendant would not obtain a fair trial within this county.

"Where the court has some difficulty, and I might state for the record a reason that I have this question, I have sat on cases which in my mind have commanded a great deal of publicity when I've thought there's absolutely no way that we can get anyone who has not heard of this case, and whether they've even formed an opinion, but they've never heard of the case.

". . . . . .

"In this case, I don't have anything, be it a poll taken informally by somebody at a shopping center, I don't have a poll that was taken in what might be called a formal way of someone, what percentage of the people have heard of the case, formed any opinions with reference to the case.

"I don't have any evidence as to who watched what on television, what channels they watched, if in fact they do watch, what newspapers they take, if in fact they take any newspapers, and what effect, if in fact they do take newspapers, anything that they might have read has had upon them.

"Additionally, it appears to the court that we're not talking, and one of the manners in which the court can perhaps dilute adverse publicity, if it determines that some exists, is for continuances so that the coverage has been diluted to the extent that perhaps it would not reflect adversely upon the defendant's right for a fair trial.

"In this case, the court does note that there has been a minimum amount of publicity regarding this case, at least since the imposition of the sentence in Los Angeles County.

"The court, in taking the totality of the evidence that has been presented, makes a determination at this time that there has been an inadequate showing that the defendant is likely not to receive a fair trial in Orange County.

"I think based upon the size of the community, that there is undoubtedly a large group of individuals who either have not heard about the case or if they have heard of it, heard so little that in no way is the defendant not going to be able to get a fair trial in Orange County.

". . . . . .

"The motion for change of venue is denied." (Some paragraphing not original.)

In March 1983 trial commenced with jury selection. A total of 204 prospective jurors were subjected to voir dire. Of this number, 174 had been exposed in some degree to pretrial publicity either directly or indirectly, including 60 who had been exposed to news coverage relating to the Los Angeles action; of the 204 prospective jurors, 39 were excused because of bias. In the course of the selection process, but before he had exhausted the 26 challenges allotted to the defense, defendant moved for 8 to 10 additional peremptory challenges. The court denied the motion without prejudice to renewal later in the process. Subsequently, defendant exhausted his peremptory challenges but did not renew his motion. Twelve jurors and four alternates were eventually selected. Ten of the jurors and all the alternates had been exposed to pretrial publicity, including three jurors and one alternate who had come upon news coverage relating to the Los Angeles action. Most of these persons, however, had been exposed to such publicity indirectly and to a minimal degree.

In June 1983, after selection of the jury was completed, defendant renewed his motion for change of venue in light of the record of voir dire. He argued, in substance, that practically all the jurors and alternates had been exposed to pretrial publicity and that their memories would be refreshed by the evidence introduced at trial. The court denied the motion. Its reasoning was as follows.

"The court has examined the transcripts relating to the various prospective jurors. The court has reached the determination that there does not exist a reasonable likelihood that in the absence of a change of venue the defendant would not obtain a fair trial in this particular county.

"I think based on the court's interpretation of the answers given by the prospective jurors and those who ultimately were seated as jurors in this particular case, it is the court's opinion that the defendant will, in fact, receive a fair trial as it relates to the pending charges against him.

"The matter can be subject to much speculation as to what people potentially can do based upon having memories refreshed. The whole question is that there is no evidence that any of them have memories that would, in fact, be refreshed; any memories of the incidents that would in fact be refreshed based upon the information that they provided to the court and to counsel in the examination.

"In totality, the court has exercised its discretion in various--as it relates to various prospective jurors. The court has excused certain ones because of the evaluations made by the court based upon the demeanor, the method of answering questions and the answers given to the various questions propounded to the prospective jurors.

"Those that the court did not excuse for cause, the court in its view did so justifiably.

"In the court's ultimate decision, there is no reason to grant a change of venue. The motion is denied."

Defendant now claims that the court erred by denying his motion for change of venue. In considering his point, we review the trial court's resolution of factual questions under the deferential substantial-evidence standard. (People v.

Louis (1986) 42 Cal.3d 969, 985.) We review its resolution of legal questions under the nondeferential de novo standard. (Ibid.) And we generally review its resolution of mixed questions of law and fact--i.e., its application of law to fact--under the de novo standard as well. (Id. at pp. 985-987.) The ultimate question of the reasonable likelihood of a fair and impartial trial is plainly such a mixed question. (Cf. id. at p. 988 [concluding that the issue of whether the prosecution has exercised due diligence in procuring a witness's attendance is a mixed question of law and fact].)

We believe that the trial court did not err when it denied the original motion. Specifically, the court's essentially factual determination that the crimes charged were grave; that the size of the community was very large; that defendant had no particular status in the county; that the victims were similarly without status in the community as a whole; and that pretrial publicity, though extensive in the period preceding imposition of sentence in the Los Angeles action in March 1982, had been minimal in the time that followed--each of these findings is clearly supported by substantial evidence.

Further, the court's determination of the ultimate mixed law-fact question of the reasonable likelihood of an unfair trial was proper: on independent review, we believe that defendant failed to carry his burden.

To begin with, the factors relating to the size of the community, the status of the defendant, and the popularity and prominence of the victims weigh in favor of the likelihood of a fair trial.

It is true that the factors relating to the nature and gravity of the offense and the nature and extent of pretrial publicity go in the other direction. Among other things, the record reveals the following. As noted above, news coverage concerning defendant was extensive. There were reports that defendant had a hand in the "freeway killings" and was in fact the "Freeway Killer"; he had a history of mental illness and of prior convictions for sexual offenses against young men and boys; he was involved in homosexuality, torture, and "black magic"; he had been linked to the killing of as many as 44 young men and boys; he was implicated in certain murders by alleged accomplices; and he had himself admitted to 21 killings. It was also reported that a dispute had arisen between prosecutors in Los Angeles and Orange Counties as to who would try defendant first. Further, there were reports concerning the Los Angeles action. Among other things, these stories recounted the evidence introduced at trial--including the four Orange County murders--and stated that defendant was convicted of 10 murders and sentenced to death.

We believe, however, that the weight of the factors relating to the nature and extent of the pretrial publicity must be reduced to less than that of the other countervailing factors. The potentially prejudicial effect of the news coverage here must be presumed to have diminished. As the trial court observed, the coverage had been minimal since imposition of sentence in the Los Angeles action. "That time soothes and erases is a perfectly natural phenomenon, familiar to all." (Patton v. Yount, supra, 467 U.S. at p. 1034.)

In conclusion, we are of the opinion that defendant failed to carry his burden of proving that there was a reasonable likelihood that jurors drawn from Orange County would have formed such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they could not make the determinations required of them with impartiality. Defendant, we concede, may have shown the possibility of an unfair trial in Orange County. But such a showing, as we have explained, is insufficient. Hence, the court did not err by denying the original change-of-venue motion.

We also believe that the trial court did not err when it denied the motion for change of venue as renewed on completion of jury selection: on independent review and after consideration of the record of voir dire, we are of the opinion that defendant failed to carry his burden. The record, to be sure, reveals that 10 of the 12 jurors and 3 of the 4 alternates had in fact been exposed to news coverage relating to defendant--although most of them indirectly and to a minimal degree. But it simply does not support the conclusion that there was a reasonable likelihood that any of those 16 persons had formed such a fixed opinion as a result of pretrial publicity that he could not make the determinations required of him with impartiality.

Against our conclusion, defendant argues in effect as follows. The pretrial publicity in this case, he begins, carried a great potential for prejudice: this proposition, he asserts, is established by the number and enormity of the crimes involved and the extensiveness of the coverage, and is confirmed by the fact that 39 of the 204 prospective jurors subjected to voir dire were excused because of bias. This great potential for prejudice, he goes on, cannot be deemed to have diminished substantially between March 1982, when sentence was imposed in the Los Angeles action and coverage became minimal, and March 1983, when jury selection in this proceeding began: a year is simply too brief a period of time. In view of this great and undiminished potential for prejudice, he concludes, we must presume that, at least when they had their memories refreshed by the evidence introduced at trial, the jurors and alternates might not have been able or willing to be fair and impartial.

Defendant's argument is to no avail. To begin with, it appears to be essentially empty of persuasive force, supported as it is more by conjecture than by evidence. In any event, it seems to establish at the very most the mere possibility of an unfair trial. But such a showing, as we have explained, is insufficient.

Defendant may also be understood to argue that the fact that he exhausted his 26 peremptory challenges supports his claim that there was a reasonable likelihood of an unfair trial before partial jurors. Such an argument, however, would be unpersuasive. On this record the exhaustion of peremptory challenges establishes only defendant's dissatisfaction with 26 prospective jurors and not the reasonable likelihood of bias on the part of any of the jurors or alternates actually selected.

In conclusion, we are of the opinion that defendant failed to carry his burden of proving that there was a reasonable likelihood that the jurors and alternates actually selected for his trial had formed, or would at trial form, such fixed opinions as a result of pretrial publicity that they could not make the determinations required of them with impartiality. Hence, the court did not err by denying the renewed change-of-venue motion.

B. Denial of Motion for Additional Peremptory Challenges

Defendant contends that the court erred by denying his motion for additional peremptory challenges. Specifically, he argues that in view of the pretrial publicity in this case and its potentially prejudicial effect the federal and state constitutional guaranties of a fair trial before an impartial jury required the court to grant his motion. We do not agree.

We believe that the court's ruling was justified on procedural grounds. As noted above (see pt. II.A, ante), defendant made his motion for additional peremptory challenges before he had exhausted the 26 peremptory challenges allotted to the defense. The court denied the motion without prejudice to renewal later in the process of jury selection. Defendant, however, never renewed the motion. On these facts, we conclude, defendant's motion was premature and properly denied as such.

We also believe that the court's ruling was sound on the merits. We are of the opinion that to establish the constitutional entitlement to additional peremptory challenges argued for here, a criminal defendant must show at the very least that in the absence of such additional challenges he is reasonably likely to receive an unfair trial before a partial jury. (Cf. Sheppard v. Maxwell (1966) 384 U.S. 333, 363 ["where there is a reasonable likelihood that prejudicial news prior to trial will prevent a fair trial, [to protect the criminal defendant's due process rights] the judge should continue the case until the threat abates, or transfer it to another county not so permeated with publicity"].) But as we concluded above (see pt. II.A, ante), defendant has failed to make such a showing. Accordingly, we hold the court's denial of his request was proper.

C. Prosecutorial Misconduct

Defendant contends that the prosecutor engaged in misconduct by eliciting from television reporter David Lopez testimony to the effect that defendant had admitted to 14 killings in addition to the murders of Fox, Barker, Rugh, and Sharp--for which he was on trial--and the murders of Miranda and Wells--which were introduced to establish identity. The facts relevant to this claim must be presented at length.

As noted above (see fn. 1, ante), the court had previously ruled admissible only that "other crimes" evidence which related to the killing of Miranda and Wells. After Lopez took the witness stand but before his examination commenced, a colloquy ensued among the court and counsel at the bench out of the hearing of the jury. In relevant part the discussion was as follows.

"[DEFENSE COUNSEL TRACY] STEWART: When Bryan [Brown, the prosecutor,] and I discussed this morning before lunch that Lopez might be called this afternoon and I told Bryan I would prefer that [Defense Counsel William Charvet] do the cross-examination of Lopez because I didn't have any transcript and Bryan was nice enough to photocopy some transcripts for me. [¶] But in looking at those briefly, I'm concerned that a number of things may come up that would be very prejudicial. [¶] He testified in the L.A. trial of all of the--I think 23--23 murders. [¶] I don't know to what extent he's been cautioned not to mention the others.

"THE COURT: Let me indicate this. I don't know where we are going for sure. Before we get into other things, because once again I don't know where we are going, be sure to let me have a chance to find out what it is. In other words, if you want to do it now or what--

"MR. BROWN: Would you like an offer at this time?

"THE COURT: Sure.

"MR. BROWN: Can I get my notes?

"THE COURT: Sure.

". . . . . .

"MR. BROWN: Mr. Lopez is a reporter for KNXT Channel Two News. He will testify that he has had a number of different conversations with Mr. Bonin starting in December of 1980 and proceeding through April 1981; that Mr. Bonin has described approximately 21 different killings to Mr. Lopez. [¶] I don't know if the court wants me to make an offer of proof of what I intend to elicit at this time.

"THE COURT: Well, what I'm interested in, based upon what Tracy said, obviously if Bonin admitted the four that we are concerned with down here and the two that were admitted as similar acts, I don't have any great problem with those. [¶] Now, if we're getting into 17 other murders, then I want to know why.

"MR. BROWN: Okay. I don't intend to elicit any conversations between Bonin and Lopez with respect to murders other than Fox, Rugh, Barker, Sharp, Wells and Miranda. [¶] Mr. Bonin has told Mr. Lopez about other murders, but I do not intend to do that at this time.

"THE COURT: Okay.

"MR. BROWN: I was going to save those in the event that we do reach a penalty phase.

"THE COURT: All right.

"MS. STEWART: The only problem I have is as far as I know, Lopez has never testified that Bonin mentioned names specifically; at least, it doesn't appear in Lopez' testimony.

"MR. BROWN: He has. Bonin mentioned Rugh and Barker's name and the--there is an issue here that Tracy's talking about. This is the issue: [¶] With respect to Fox, Bonin never mentioned Fox' name. But in that respect--I don't mind if you read my notes; that's okay. That's all right. [¶] With respect to Fox, Lopez said--or excuse me. There were 21--there was a list of 21 homicide victims that was generally recognized and that Mr. Lopez and Mr. Bonin had talked about and agreed on. [¶] Fox' name was on that list at the time Mr. Lopez talked to Bonin. The defendant said that he killed everyone on the list except one. The one he did not kill was a fellow named Lundgren, L-U-N-D-G-R-E-N. And Lundgren was a kid that was killed in Los Angeles and has his penis severed, and Bonin indicated to Mr. Lopez that Bonin does not cut dicks off little kids, are the words he used. [¶] So Bonin admitted to Lopez that he killed everyone on the list of 21 except Lundgren. [¶] Fox is on the list. Okay? [¶] Bonin also said that he dumped two kids, Rugh and Barker, not far from where he dumped another body off, which would be Fox, in that Fox is just several miles down the Ortega towards the I-5 freeway. [¶] And that's the only--Fox is the only person that the defendant was talking about when he was talking about the other body dumped. [¶] Now, with respect to Rugh and Barker, Bonin gives Lopez their names. Rugh and Barker's names.

"THE COURT: Well, I might indicate, I'm not sure that I need to go into a whole lot more. I was concerned into the breadth of what you were going to go into; in other words, whether you're going to talk to him about 21 murders. [¶] And as I understand, all that you're doing right now is you're going to talk to him about the four with which he's charged here in the manner that you've described. [¶] And in some way they have to be tied into it. I mean, either directly by name or some other circumstantial deal. [¶] And the other two, Miranda and Wells, and so I don't have any particular problem with it.

"MR. BROWN: Okay.

"THE COURT: So, you know, it appears to me to be--

"MR. BROWN: That's fair.

"THE COURT: Okay.

"MS. STEWART: Are you offering this as an admission?

"MR. BROWN: Yes.

"THE COURT: Well, it's an admission and/or confession.

"MR. BROWN: Right, it's really a confession." (Italics added.)

Thereupon the prosecutor began to question Lopez. He elicited testimony that defendant admitted to the killing of Barker and Rugh. He then turned to the killing of Fox.

"Q Now, with respect to Frank Fox, did you have a conversation with Mr. Bonin concerning Frank Fox?

"A Never by name.

"Q Okay. Mr. Bonin at no time mentioned Frank Fox' name?

"A Never.

"Q Did Mr. Bonin talk to you about a--an individual that he had killed and dumped near the Ortega Highway?

"A He said it--

"MS. STEWART: Objection, relevance.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"THE WITNESS: He said it in this manner: 'I dumped Rugh and Barker not far from where I dumped the other kid.' And I never pursued who the other kid was.

"MS. STEWART: Objection. Nonresponsive.

"THE COURT: What was the last, Miss Stewart?

"MS. STEWART: As to his answer, he's nonresponsive. Motion to strike everything after the response, which was yes or no.

"THE COURT: Overruled. Motion to strike denied.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: Had Mr. Bonin--or did Mr. Bonin at any time indicate to you that he had, though, killed Frank Fox without using Mr. Fox' name?

"A Well, again, the way he said it is that he dumped the bodies of Rugh and Barker--

"MS. STEWART: Objection.

"THE WITNESS: --not far from where he dumped the other kid.

"MR. BROWN: There's an objection pending.

"THE COURT: What was the objection?

"MS. STEWART: The answer was nonresponsive to the question. It called for a yes or no answer. I would request that the court--

"THE COURT: No, I think the answer was responsive. The question was objectionable as calling for a conclusion. [¶] Proceed.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: Did you talk to Mr. Bonin about a list of homicide victims, murder victims, that included the name of Frank Fox?

"A Yes.

"Q What was that particular conversation?

"MS. STEWART: Objection. Lack of foundation of the list itself. The question is not relevant.

"THE COURT: Lack of foundation and what's the latter part?

"MS. STEWART: Relevance.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"THE WITNESS: In answering that question, I'm going to have to refer to some names that deal with the Los Angeles case. Do you want me to answer that question?

"MR. BROWN: No.

"THE COURT: Just listen very carefully to the questions and just answer the questions if you will.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: It's not comfortable being up on the witness stand, is it?

"A Well, it's--

"Q Because you--

"A I would much rather be doing a story that I'm supposed to be doing today, to be quite honest with you.

"Q We all understand that.

(Laughter.)

"Let me ask you this: did you talk to Mr. Bonin about a list of homicide victims that included the name of Frank Fox?

"A That's correct, yes, I did.

"Q How many victims were on that list?

"MS. STEWART: Objection. Relevance. And also on the court's prior ruling.

"THE COURT: Overruled. He may answer that.

"THE WITNESS: There were 21 names on that list.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: And was Mr. Fox' name included on that list?

"A Yes.

"Q Was this list at some time published?

"A Yes.

"Q And was it published in a number of different media?

"A Yes.

"Q Newspapers and television?

"A Yes.

"Q And specifically was it published in the Orange County Register?

"A Yes.

"Q At the time it was published at least in the Register, were there photographs of these 21 individuals published with the list?

"A I think there were actually 20 photographs--

"MS. STEWART: Objection.

"THE WITNESS: With one John Doe. But to answer the question--

"THE COURT: Just a minute, Mr. Lopez.

"MS. STEWART: Objection on the grounds of relevancy as to the photographs. And it's hearsay.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"Q BY MR. BROWN: Now, was Frank Fox' photograph also included--

"A Yes, it was.

"Q --in the photographs with the list?

"A Yes, it was.

"Q Did Mr. Bonin indicate to you whether or not he had murdered the people that were on that list?

"MS. STEWART: Objection. The question is ambiguous, and it's not relevant.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"THE WITNESS: I asked him that point blank. And his answer was, through a quote, 'I killed all but one. I didn't kill Lundgren because I don't cut the dicks off little kids.'

"MS. STEWART: Can we approach the bench, Your Honor?

"THE COURT: Yes."

Thereupon Defense Counsel Stewart moved for a mistrial. The court denied the motion. Counsel then moved to strike the testimony under challenge. The court denied that motion as well. The relevant colloquy was as follows.

"MS. STEWART: Why did you have to do that?

"MR. BROWN: I didn't do anything. What did I do?

"MS. STEWART: There are 21 names on the list. You just asked him if he killed them, and he said: Yes, all of them but Lundgren.

"MR. BROWN: So? That's--that's Fox. That's what we were talking about up here.

"THE COURT: How else was he going to get in Fox?

"MS. STEWART: Then why did you--you brought out the 21 names, which is why I objected to the relevance. And now you're--now we have an admission before the jury that he's--that he's allegedly killed all of these 21 people.

"MR. BROWN: Right. That's what we talked about up here, Tracy.

"MS. STEWART: We didn't talk about 21. We only talked about--

"MR. BROWN: Yes, we did. That's what--that was my offer of proof with respect to Fox.

"MS. STEWART: It's my understanding we were only going as to the six.

"THE COURT: You know, if you keep objecting, there's no way that he can get the thing in other than this way.

"MS. STEWART: I know, but he keeps--Lopez keeps going so far beyond the question, I can't tell where he's going. But my understanding was he wasn't--

"THE COURT: What is it that you want to do now?

"MS. STEWART: I'm making a motion for a mistrial.

"THE COURT: Overruled.

"MS. STEWART: All right. Then as to--before we go away, I want to--

"THE COURT: I should say 'denied.' Pardon me.

"MS. STEWART: It was my understanding that only information as to the four here plus Wells and Miranda would be coming in through Lopez' testimony. Is that your ruling?

"THE COURT: That's all that I wanted to get in. But, you know, he was asking about these and then you object; and I don't know how else he's going to get it in. This is the way it came about.

"MS. STEWART: Well, this is why I started objecting as soon as that list came up with the 21 people because I was afraid that was going to come up.

"THE COURT: What is it you want? In other words, if you said, all right, fine, just tell them that there are six of them and he admitted that he killed all six of them, I mean, that's not the way that it went down.

"MS. STEWART: All right. Motion to strike, at least.

"MR. BROWN: I don't think it should be stricken.

"THE COURT: I'm not going to strike it unless--unless, you know--. I don't know how I can help it. If that's the way that he admitted killing these four--

"MR. BROWN: That's the only way that you can tie the defendant's confession into Fox. . . . He never mentioned Fox' name. Bonin did not mention Fox' name.

"MS. STEWART: Well, we have an admission of 21 now.

"THE COURT: Well, in my view, the probative value of this whole line far outweighs any prejudice.

"MS. STEWART: It's--

"MR. BROWN: It's really the only evidence on Fox that ties the defendant to Fox.

"MS. STEWART: All right. Then is it the court's ruling that he can continue to refer to any--the number 21 on the list? And--

"THE COURT: This is the only thing--. As I understand it from Mr. Brown, this is the only one that we need to do that in. Fox is the only one that he didn't mention by name, as I understand it,--

"MR. BROWN: That's correct.

"THE COURT: --of our six.

"MR. BROWN: That is correct.

"THE COURT: And the only way we could tie Fox in as one of Bonin's victims is in this manner. That's my understanding of what he said.

"MR. BROWN: That's correct.

"THE COURT: Okay." (Italics added.)

Resuming his examination, the prosecutor elicited testimony that defendant admitted to the killing of Sharp, Wells, and Miranda.

At the threshold we must determine whether the claim that the prosecutor engaged in misconduct by eliciting from Lopez defendant's admission to the 14 killings not relevant to the issue of guilt is properly before this court. To preserve such a point, the defendant must generally assign the conduct in question as error at trial and request the court to instruct the jury to disregard its effect. (People v. Chi Ko Wong (1976) 18 Cal.3d 698, 723, disapproved on another point in People v. Green (1980) 27 Cal.3d 1, 34.) Simply to object or make an assignment of misconduct without seeking a curative admonition is generally not enough. (People v. Beivelman (1968) 70 Cal.2d 60, 75.) "The reason for this rule, of course, is that 'the trial court should be given an opportunity to correct the abuse and thus, if possible, prevent by suitable instructions the harmful effect upon the minds of the jury.'" (People v. Green, supra, at p. 27.)

As the facts stated above reveal, defense counsel Stewart failed to strictly comply with the requirements of the rule. But she did achieve substantial compliance: by making her motions for a mistrial and to strike the challenged portion of Lopez's testimony, Stewart effectively gave the court more than ample opportunity to "correct the abuse."

We turn now to the merits. Defendant's claim is substantial. It is, of course, misconduct for a prosecutor to "intentionally elicit inadmissible testimony." (People v. Sims (1976) 64 Cal.App.3d 544, 554; accord, People v. King (1968) 266 Cal.App.2d 437, 464, citing authorities.) It appears that the prosecutor must have known that the testimony he elicited concerning the 14 other killings was inadmissible: that evidence was plainly irrelevant to the issues material to the question of guilt, and had been ruled such by the court. It also appears that the prosecutor elicited such testimony intentionally. Had it been his intent to elicit only defendant's admission to the killing of Fox, he would simply have pressed Lopez to answer the question he had already asked: "[D]id Mr. Bonin at any time indicate to you that he had . . . killed Frank Fox without using Mr. Fox' name?" Had he failed in his attempt, he could then have asked whether Fox's name appeared on the list of homicide victims and, if so, whether defendant admitted to killing him either expressly or by implication.

In response to defendant's claim, the Attorney General may be understood to argue to the following effect. "Prosecutorial misconduct," he begins in his brief, "involve[s] the resorting to the use of deceptive or reprehensible methods in an attempt to persuade the jury." No such methods, he continues, were used here: the only way that the prosecutor could elicit the admission at issue was to question Lopez as he did; moreover, the prosecutor did not violate the court's ruling--the purpose of that ruling being merely to govern how he should elicit defendant's admission to the killing of Fox, not to bar him from eliciting defendant's admission to the 14 other killings; finally, if the prosecutor did in fact elicit inadmissible evidence, he did so unintentionally.

The Attorney General's argument is not lacking in persuasive force. It is true that not all his points are strong. For example, it is plain that the purpose of the court's ruling was not to govern the form of the prosecutor's examination: the court recognized, and declared, that the 14 other killings were not relevant to the issue of guilt. It is also plain that the prosecutor could have elicited defendant's admission to the Fox murder without eliciting his admission to the 14 other murders: we explained above how the prosecutor could have conducted his examination, and hence reject the opinion of the trial judge, who stated that the "only way [the prosecutor] could tie Fox in as one of Bonin's victims is in th[e] manner [he used]." One of the Attorney General's points, however, cannot be rejected out of hand. The record is not without support for an inference that the prosecutor may have elicited the inadmissible evidence unintentionally, having lost his concentration at a crucial point as he was questioning a hard-to-control witness.

But whether the prosecutor's examination of Lopez can be held to be misconduct is a question we need not resolve: having reviewed the record in its entirety, we have come to the conclusion that the conduct under challenge could not be deemed prejudicial. Defendant argues that the "misconduct" was so egregious as to render the trial fundamentally unfair and as such requires reversal whether or not it can be shown to have caused specific prejudice. We are not persuaded. To our mind, the "misconduct" could not properly be termed "egregious." Moreover, it constituted an isolated instance in a lengthy and otherwise well-conducted trial, and therefore could not have rendered the proceeding fundamentally unfair.

Defendant next argues that even if not prejudicial per se, the "misconduct" requires reversal under the "reasonable probability" standard of People v. Watson (1956) 46 Cal.2d 818, 836. Again, we are not persuaded. We recognize that in the abstract such misconduct as is claimed here could pose a not insubstantial threat of prejudice. Nevertheless, we believe that in this case the threat would not have been realized: since the evidence of guilt--albeit in large part circumstantial--was overwhelming, there is not a reasonable probability that in the absence of the "misconduct" an outcome more favorable to defendant would have resulted.2/

III. SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCE ISSUES

Defendant raises a single contention as to the validity of the special circumstance findings. Specifically,

---

2/ Defendant also contends that the introduction of Lopez's testimony about his admission to the 14 other killings amounted to reversible error in and of itself. The point must be rejected. The testimony, to be sure, was plainly irrelevant to the issue of guilt and as such inadmissible. But as the discussion above shows, it did not subject defendant to prejudice.

he claims that it was error for the prosecution to allege four multiple-murder special circumstances instead of one. He is correct. As we explained in People v. Anderson, supra, 43 Cal.3d at page 1150: "The plain words of section 190.2(a)(3)--'The defendant has in this proceeding been convicted of more than one offense of murder'--suggest that no matter how many murder charges are tried together, they constitute a single multiple-murder special circumstance. That reading is supported by certain constitutional considerations: '. . . "alleging two special circumstances for a double murder improperly inflates the risk that the jury will arbitrarily impose the death penalty, a result also inconsistent with the constitutional requirement that the capital sentencing procedure guide and focus the jury's objective consideration of the particularized circumstances of the offense and the individual offender. [Citations.]" . . . [Accordingly,] appropriate charging papers should allege one multiple-murder special circumstance separate from the individual murder counts.' [Citation.]" It follows that three of the four multiple-murder special-circumstance findings must be vacated.

IV. PENALTY ISSUES

Defendant makes several claims bearing on the issue of penalty. As we shall explain, none establishes reversible error.

A. Refusal to Allow Two Members of Defense Team to Present Closing Argument

Defendant contends that by refusing to allow Defense Counsel Stewart to make a closing argument the court committed error under Penal Code section 1095 (hereinafter section 1095) and in fact denied him, or at least infringed on, his constitutional right to the assistance of counsel. The facts relevant to this claim are as follows.

Prosecutor Brown delivered a closing argument. Defense Counsel Charvet then followed with a full and unrestricted argument of his own. When he finished, the following colloquy ensued in open court.

"THE COURT: Mr. Brown.

"MR. BROWN: I don't have any rebuttal.

"THE COURT: All right. May I see counsel just for a moment? If you would approach."

Thereupon the colloquy continued at the bench out of the hearing of the jury.

"THE COURT: The reason that the court is having counsel approach, it is my understanding that Miss Stewart has indicated that she was going to argue in the penalty phase and I'll be very honest with you, that I know that the law says that two counsel can argue in the penalty phase. Whether or not that would apply like where we are right now where the prosecution has not exercised its right to, in essence, rebut the argument of the defense, and I don't really know what the answer is.

"MS. STEWART: Can I make a suggestion?

"THE COURT: Sure.

"MS. STEWART: Since it's almost four o'clock, I could research tonight and we'll return in the morning. I can either give it or--

"MR. BROWN: Let's get it over with today.

"MS. STEWART: I don't think I can do it that quick.

"THE COURT: What I am getting at, I don't want to put anybody at a disadvantage here. I don't want to prevent the right of the defendant to have Miss Stewart argue if he has a right to argue under these circumstances.

"MR. CHARVET: May we have five minutes just to look it up? [¶] It's my understanding and I can be wrong that we have a right to two arguments only if he exercises his right.

"THE COURT: That is the normal situation.

"MS. STEWART: What is it, 1095, I think.

"MR. CHARVET: I think we can look it up in just a few moments.

"THE COURT: All right. Let's take a couple minutes. That may be worthwhile."

The colloquy soon concluded as follows out of the hearing of the jury.

"THE COURT: All right. The record should reflect that the court has reviewed the annotations to section 1095 of the Penal Code, and it appears to the court that the existing law prescribes that argument where you have two counsel to argue should proceed alternately. [¶] And in this particular case, inasmuch as Mr. Brown has waived his rebuttal argument, there would be no rebuttal argument provided.

"MR. CHARVET: I understand that, and it's--of course, he doesn't have to tell us, but had we known that, it would have been a different situation. But anyway--

"MR. BROWN: I told everybody.

"MR. CHARVET: --I think we can go to final argument at this point.

"MR. BROWN: I told everybody.

"MR. CHARVET: He told us, but I didn't believe him.

"THE COURT: Okay."

The court then proceeded to deliver the penalty phase instructions.

We agree with defendant that in ruling as it did the court erred. Section 1095 provides: "If the offense charged is punishable with death, two counsel on each side may argue the cause. In any other case the court may, in its discretion, restrict the argument to one counsel on each side." The statute plainly gives each side in a capital case the right to present argument by two counsel. Further, it does not require alternation of arguments or allow two counsel on one side to argue only if the other side presents two arguments.

As is revealed by a perusal of the cases collected following section 1095 in both 50A West's Annotated Penal Code (1970 ed.) at page 572 and Deering's Annotated Penal Code (1971 ed.) at page 281, the court's ruling is evidently based on the decision in People v. Fair (1872) 43 Cal. 137. Fair, however, does not govern the issue at bar. In holding that alternation was required, the Fair court merely followed section 364 of the Criminal Practice Act of 1851 (hereinafter section 364). That provision declared as follows: "If the indictment be for an offense punishable with death, two counsel on each side may argue the cause to the jury, in which case they must do so alternately. If it be for any other offense the court may in its discretion restrict the argument to one counsel on each side." (Stats. 1851, ch. 29, § 364, p. 252, italics added.) Of course, the Criminal Practice Act of 1851 is no longer in effect. (Stats. of 1873, continued in force, ch. 52, § 664, p. 361.) Hence, section 364, together with its requirement of alternation, cannot govern the question we address here.

We recognize that in light of the similarity of language section 364 should be presumed to be the source of section 1095. But we cannot infer from such a relationship that the later provision continues the requirement of alternation contained in the earlier. First, section 1095 does not impose such a requirement by its express terms. Second, it cannot reasonably be read to impose such a requirement by implication. In enacting section 1095 in the form that it did, the Legislature chose not to continue the express requirement of alternation contained in section 364. In so doing, it evidenced an intent to change the former law by removing the requirement. Hence, section 1095 must be read as lacking such a requirement.3/

Although we agree with defendant that the court's ruling was error, we cannot agree that it amounted to a constitutional violation as a denial of or an infringement on his right to the assistance of counsel. We recognize, of course, that the criminal defendant has a constitutional right to assistance of counsel. (U.S. Const., Amend. VI; Cal. Const., art. I, § 15.) That right "ensures to the 3/ The Attorney General argues that our decision in People v. Bandhauer (1967) 66 Cal.2d 524, requires alternation of arguments and allows two counsel on one side to argue only if the other side presents two arguments. He is incorrect. In Bandhauer we did not even consider section 1095. In that case we held only that even though in criminal trials generally the prosecution opens the argument, the defendant responds, and the prosecution closes, at the penalty phase of a capital trial the defense must be given the opportunity to close with a second argument. (Id. at pp. 530-531.) In arriving at our conclusion, we recognized, to be sure, the practice of alternation. But we did not state or imply that two counsel on one side may be allowed to argue only if the other side presents two arguments.

---

defense in a criminal trial the opportunity to participate fully and fairly in the adversary factfinding process." (Herring v. New York (1975) 422 U.S. 853, 858.) We further recognize that the constitutional right to the assistance of counsel encompasses the right to have counsel present closing argument. (Herring v. New York, supra, at pp. 856-862; In re William F. (1974) 11 Cal.3d 249, 255.) Nevertheless, we cannot conclude that the court's erroneous ruling effected a constitutional violation here.

First, the ruling did not amount to a denial of the constitutional right. As noted above, Defense Counsel Charvet presented a full and unrestricted argument on behalf of defendant. That Defense Counsel Stewart was not allowed to make an argument is, to our mind, constitutionally immaterial on this point: the federal and state Constitutions impliedly grant the criminal defendant the right to have defense counsel present closing argument, not each member of the defense team.

Second, the ruling did not amount to an infringement of the constitutional right. In our view, the right is not infringed when "the opportunity [of the defense] to participate fully and fairly in the adversary factfinding process" (Herring v. New York, supra, 422 U.S. at p. 858) is not significantly limited. Here, we believe, the defense's opportunity to participate was not significantly limited: as noted above, Defense Counsel Charvet presented a full and unrestricted argument. We recognize, to be sure, that the court did not allow Defense Counsel Stewart to make an argument. But we cannot conclude that it thereby significantly limited the defense's opportunity to participate. Indeed, as the record reveals, Charvet himself apparently considered his argument to be sufficient and further argument by Stewart to be dispensable.

Defendant maintains that "The omission of Ms. Stewart's argument was critical inasmuch as she had assumed the primary defense responsibilities. . . . Her rapport with the jury was probably better than Mr. Charvet's, and her familiarity with the evidence was probably greater. This made her perspective of greater significance than Mr. Charvet's." In urging his point defendant asks us in effect to leave analysis behind and to embark on the path to speculation and conjecture. There, however, we cannot and will not go. Thus, we must reject his point.

Accordingly, we conclude that the court's ruling did not significantly limit the defense's opportunity to participate in the adversary process and hence did not infringe on defendant's constitutional right to the assistance of counsel.1/

1/ To the extent that In re William F., supra, 11 Cal.3d 249--a case in which no argument at all was permitted--implies that error adversely affecting defense counsel's closing argument necessarily infringes on the defendant's constitutional right to the assistance of counsel (see id. at p. 256, fn. 6), it is unsound and is hereby disapproved.

But even though the court's ruling did not amount to a constitutional violation, it was, as we have concluded, error under section 1095. The question to which we must now turn is whether the error was prejudicial. We believe that it was not. Of course, we do not and cannot know what Defense Counsel Stewart may have said to the jurors or whether she may have moved them or in what way. But as we have noted above, Defense Counsel Charvet apparently considered his argument to be sufficient and further argument by Stewart to be dispensable. Lacking any indication as to the nature and likely effect of Stewart's intended argument, we can do nothing other than accept Charvet's assessment. Accordingly, we are compelled to hold that under any standard of prejudice the error must be deemed harmless.5/

5/ Defendant requests that pursuant to Evidence Code sections 452, subdivision (d), and 459, we take judicial notice of the record on appeal in People v. Buono (B003499, app. pending) and People v. Maxwell (B007390, app. pending). In support he argues that Buono and Maxwell have each been convicted of crimes as egregious as those of which he has been convicted, but have nevertheless received the penalty of life imprisonment without the possibility of parole. He then argues that the records in their cases are relevant to the issue whether any errors that occurred at the penalty phase of his trial were prejudicial. We are not persuaded. Under the modern system of capital punishment, which "require[s] a particularized inquiry into '"the circumstances of the offense together with the character and propensities of the offender"'" (McCleskey v. Kemp (1987) ___ U.S. ___, ___ [107 S.Ct. 1756, 1772]), we fail to see how the record in one case can be relevant to the evaluation of prejudice in another, no matter how similar the cases appear to be. Accordingly, we are compelled to reject defendant's request.

B. Claims Relating to CALJIC Nos. 8.84, 8.84.1, and 8.84.2

Defendant makes a number of claims relating to the core penalty instructions delivered by the court. In accordance with CALJIC No. 8.84 as modified and ultimately with section 190.2 of the Penal Code (hereinafter section 190.2), the court instructed the jurors as follows. "The defendant in this case has been found guilty of four counts of murder of the first degree. The charge that each of said murders was committed under a special circumstance has been specially found to be true.

"It is the law of this state that the penalty for a defendant found guilty of murder of the first degree shall be death or confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole in any case in which the special circumstance [sic] charged in this case have [sic] been specially found to be true.

"Under the law of this state, you must now determine which of said penalties shall be imposed on defendant as to each of the four murder convictions in this case."

In accordance with former CALJIC No. 8.84.1 as modified and ultimately with section 190.3 of the Penal Code (hereinafter section 190.3), the court then gave the following instruction to the jurors. "In determining which penalty is to be imposed on defendant, you shall consider all of the evidence which has been received during any part of the trial of this case, except as you may be hereafter instructed. You shall consider, take into account and be guided by the following factors, if applicable:

"(a) The circumstances of the crimes of which the defendant was convicted in the present proceeding and the existence of any special circumstances found to be true.

"(b) The presence or absence of criminal activity by the defendant which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or the expressed or implied threat to use force or violence.

"(c) The presence or absence of any prior felony conviction.

"(d) Whether or not the offense was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance.

"(e) Whether or not the victim was a participant in the defendant's homicidal conduct or consented to the homicidal act.

"(f) Whether or not the offense was committed under circumstances which the defendant reasonably believed to be a moral justification or extenuation for his conduct.

"(g) Whether or not the defendant acted under extreme duress or under the substantial domination of another person.

"(h) Whether or not at the time of the offense the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was impaired as a result of mental disease or defect or the effects of intoxication.

"(i) The age of the defendant at the time of the crime.

"(j) Whether or not the defendant was an accomplice to the offense and his participation in the commission of the offense was relatively minor.

"(k) Any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime, or any other factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation."

Finally, in accordance with former CALJIC No. 8.84.2 as modified and ultimately with section 190.3, the court instructed the jurors in relevant part as follows.

"It is now your duty to determine which of the two penalties, death or confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole, shall be imposed on defendant.

"After having heard all of the evidence, and after having heard and considered the arguments of counsel, you shall consider, take into account and be guided by the applicable factors of aggravating and mitigating circumstances upon which you have been instructed.

"If you conclude that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of death. However, if you determine that the mitigating circumstances outweigh the aggravating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of confinement in the state prison for life without the possibility of parole."

1. Failure to Explain "Life Imprisonment Without Possibility of Parole" Sua Sponte

Defendant contends that the court erred when it failed to explain to the jury sua sponte that the phrase of CALJIC No. 8.84.2, "confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole," actually means what its words declare--i.e., confinement for life without possibility of parole. The point must be rejected.

When a term is commonly understood by those familiar with the English language and is not used in a technical sense peculiar to the law, the court is not required to give an instruction as to its meaning in the absence of a request. (People v. Anderson (1966) 64 Cal.2d 633, 639.) In this case, the term "confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole" was used in the common and nontechnical sense that the plain meaning of its words convey. Accordingly, the court was not required to give an instruction as to its meaning sua sponte.

Defendant argues that jurors share a "common and widespread misconception" that the sentence of "confinement in the state prison for life without possibility of parole" does not actually mean confinement for life without possibility of parole, and hence should be instructed on the court's own motion that "without possibility of parole" means "without possibility of parole." We are not, however, persuaded that the argument's factual premise is supported. We recognize that 10 out of the total of 204 prospective jurors examined on voir dire--none of whom was selected as a juror or alternate--may have labored under the "misconception" of which defendant speaks. But we cannot conclude from that fact--or from any other fact presented by defendant--that such a "misconception" was "common and widespread." Because we cannot accept defendant's premise, we must reject his conclusion.

2. Failure to Delete Sentencing Factors Inapplicable on the Evidence

Defendant contends that the court erred by instructing on all the statutory sentencing factors and by failing to delete such factors as were inapplicable on the facts of this case. We rejected a similar point in People v. Ghent (1987) 43 Cal.3d 739, 776-777, and we reject this point here.

Section 190.3, the statutory source of CALJIC No. 8.84.1, states in relevant part: "In determining the penalty, the trier of fact shall take into account any of the [specified] factors if relevant . . . ." (Italics added.) We read the provision (1) to direct the trier of fact to the criteria that the legislative body has determined to be significant in choosing between life and death and (2) to require the trier to consider those criteria, insofar as they are actually applicable, in making that choice. Under such a reading of the statute, all the factors are "relevant" in a broad sense: together they establish the normative framework within which the penalty determination in the individual case must constitutionally be made. Further, under such a reading only those factors that are applicable on the evidence adduced at trial are to be taken into account in the penalty determination in the individual case: the statutory provision "seems to contemplate that not all factors will be relevant in all cases and further that a factor which is not relevant to the evidence in a particular case should be disregarded." (People v. Davenport (1985) 41 Cal.3d 247, 289 (plur. opn.).)

Defendant argues that instructing the jurors on factors inapplicable on the evidence adduced at trial may cause them to focus on constitutionally irrelevant matters: "The focus," he maintains in words quoted from Enmund v. Florida (1982) 458 U.S. 782, 798, "must be on his culpability, . . . for [the United States Supreme Court] insist[s] on 'individualized consideration as a constitutional requirement in imposing the death sentence.'" We do not find defendant's argument to be persuasive.

In this case, the jurors were instructed: "You shall consider, take into account and be guided by [specified] factors, if applicable . . ." (Italics added.) In other words, they were directed to focus on defendant's culpability and on the evidence relevant to that issue. We presume that jurors follow the court's instructions. (E.g., Delli Paoli v. United States (1957) 352 U.S. 232, 242, overruled on other grounds in Bruton v. United States (1968) 391 U.S. 123.) We are presented with no reason to believe that the jurors in this case did not follow the instruction here.

3. Failure to Instruct That Absence of Evidence in Mitigation Does Not Establish a Factor in Aggravation

Defendant contends that the court erred by failing to instruct the jury sua sponte that the absence of evidence in mitigation does not establish a factor in aggravation. The point must be rejected.

We recognize that section 190.3 impliedly provides that the trier of fact should disregard a factor that is inapplicable on the evidence adduced at trial (see pt. IV.B.2, ante), and that in so doing it necessarily bars the trier from considering such a factor as aggravating (see People v. Rodriguez (1986) 42 Cal.3d 730, 788-789; People v. Davenport, supra, 41 Cal.3d at p. 289).

We believe, however, that the court adequately instructed the jury in this regard. As we concluded above (see pt. IV.B.2, ante), the court properly directed the jurors to consider the sentencing factors only "if applicable." Defendant argues in substance that the court should have amplified or explained its words. But when as here the instruction under challenge is adequate, the court is under no obligation to amplify or explain in the absence of a request. (People v. Anderson, supra, 64 Cal.2d at p. 639.)

Defendant may be understood to claim that the prosecutor committed misconduct by making comments in closing argument that were predicated on, and thereby communicated, an erroneous understanding of the law in this regard. The remarks under challenge were as follows.

"Going now to whether or not the offense was committed while the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance.

". . . . . .

"There's absolutely no evidence whatsoever that the defendant was under the influence of extreme mental or emotional disturbance. I would suggest to you on that basis that that's an aggravating factor, that he was not under the influence of emotional disturbance.

"Item E, whether or not the victim was a participant in the defendant's homicidal conduct or consented to the homicidal act. [¶] There can be no question that neither of the four victims in this case consented to be killed by the defendant. [¶] Russell Rugh, Glen[n] Barker, we know a little bit about them. We don't know too much about Lawrence Sharp and Frank Fox. But there's no evidence whatsoever that they consented to being killed. So that would be an aggravating factor.

"Whether or not the offense was committed under circumstances which the defendant reasonably believed to be a moral justification or extenuation for his conduct. [¶] There can be no moral justification for this. This would be--at least, I can speculate that a case may come up for moral justification where you have someone dying, terminally ill of cancer or something, and you do--you participate in a mercy-type killing or something like that. That could be moral justification. Not--nothing that we have seen here in court. So that would also be an aggravating factor.

"Whether or not the defendant acted under extreme duress or under the substantial domination of another person. [¶] The one that's really got that is--would be James Munro or Greg Miley. If you are prosecuting Miley or Munro here, they could probably get up and make a big whoop-de-do about that because they were under the substantial domination of the defendant, but it's not the other way around. So that would be an aggravating factor here. [¶] There's no evidence whatsoever that the defendant acted under duress or domination of another person.

"Whether or not at the time of the offense the capacity of the defendant to appreciate the criminality of his conduct or to conform his conduct to the requirements of law was impaired as a result of mental disease or defect or the effects of intoxication. [¶] There's no evidence of that.

". . . . . .

"So with respect to the evidence concerning that particular factor, it's aggravating. There's no evidence of mental disease or defect or intoxication. It's just the opposite.

". . . . . .

"Whether or not the defendant was an accomplice to the offense and his participation in the commission of the offense was relatively minor.

". . . . . .

". . . [T]he defendant is, there's no evidence at all that he's an accomplice. He is the force that causes all this. He is the force that seeks out Gregory Miley, the force that seeks out James Munro and turns them into killers. So that would be an aggravating factor in this case." (Italics added.)

Having reviewed the matter closely, we are of the opinion that defendant's claim of prosecutorial misconduct must be rejected at the threshold. As stated above, it is settled that a defendant cannot complain on appeal of misconduct at trial unless he made a timely objection thereto and requested that the jury be instructed to disregard the improper remark. (E.g., People v. Green, supra, 27 Cal.3d at pp. 27-34.) In this case defendant made no objection whatever. It is true that the rule stated above does not apply in a situation in which a timely objection and admonition would not have cured the harm. (Ibid.) Such a situation, however, is not present here. Accordingly, we conclude that defendant's point is not preserved for review on appeal. (See, e.g., People v. Ghent, supra, 43 Cal.3d at p. 775; People v. Allen (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1222, 1283-1284 (lead opn. by Grodin, J.).)

We are also of the opinion that defendant's claim must be rejected on the merits. The prosecutor's remarks, to be sure, amounted to a misstatement of the law. Though erroneous, however, they cannot be characterized as misconduct. "[A] prosecutor is not guilty of misconduct because in his argument of the law to the jury, he is wrong as to the law. Misconduct occurs only where an erroneous proposition of law was argued in bad faith [citation]." (People v. Meneley (1972) 29 Cal.App.3d 41, 61; accord, People v. Pineiro (1982) 129 Cal.App.3d 915, 923; People v. Calpito (1970) 9 Cal.App.3d 212, 222; People v. Jones (1962) 205 Cal.App.2d 460, 467; People v. Gould (1959) 170 Cal.App.2d 489, 492.) In this case evidence of bad faith is altogether lacking, and defendant makes no claim to the contrary. Hence, we find no misconduct.

But even if we could characterize the prosecutor's comments as misconduct, we could not hold that they require reversal. The court instructed the jurors to consider the sentencing factors only "if applicable" and to "accept and follow the rules of law as I state them to you." The court thereby told the jurors, in effect, to be guided by its proper statement of the law and not by the prosecutor's misstatement. As we said above, we generally presume that jurors follow the court's instructions. We are presented with no reason to believe that the jurors in this case acted contrary to that presumption. Further, having reviewed the record in its entirety, we believe that the remarks could have had no marginal effect on the balance of aggravating and mitigating factors or on the consequent determination of the appropriateness of death: under the sentencing guidelines as properly construed and applied, the factors in aggravation were overwhelming and the factors in mitigation virtually nonexistent. Accordingly, even if the prosecutor's comments amounted to misconduct, they were neutralized by the court's instructions and in any event could not be deemed prejudicial on this record.

4. Statutory Sentencing Factor (a) and "Multiple" Multiple-murder Special Circumstance

Defendant contends that the court's instruction as to statutory sentencing factor (a) was prejudicial error because it effectively directed the jurors to consider four multiple-murder special-circumstance findings instead of one. We agree that the instruction was erroneous: as we concluded above (see pt. III, ante), there can be only one such finding in a proceeding. We cannot agree, however, that the error requires reversal. Although we presume that the jurors considered the invalid special-circumstance findings independent of their underlying facts, we cannot conclude that they could reasonably have given them any significant independent weight.

5. The Scope of Statutory Sentencing Factor (b)

Defendant contends that the court's instruction as to statutory sentencing factor (b) was error. In support he argues that section 190.3 must be construed to limit the scope of that factor to crimes other than those of which the defendant was convicted in the capital proceeding. He then argues that the court's instruction failed to so limit the scope of that factor and thereby invited the jury to "double count" the circumstances of the capital offense under both factors (a) and (b).

We agree that section 190.3 should be construed to contain the limitation defendant discerns. (People v. Miranda (1987) 44 Cal.3d 57, 105-106.)

We cannot agree, however, that the factor (b) instruction was erroneous. In determining the meaning conveyed by an instruction, we give the charge the meaning that a reasonable juror would give. (E.g., California v. Brown (1987) 479 U.S. ___, ___ [107 S.Ct. 837, 839].) "To determine how a reasonable juror could interpret an instruction, we 'must focus initially on the specific language challenged.' [Citation.] If the specific instruction fails . . . muster, we then review the instructions as a whole to see if the entire charge delivered a correct interpretation of the law." (Id. at p. ___ [107 S.Ct. at p. 839].)

When we focus on the specific language challenged, we are unable to conclude that "the [factor (b)] instruction per se amounts to error. As we stated in Miranda, supra, 44 Cal.3d 57[, 105-106,] we doubt a reasonable jury would 'double count' under [factors] (a) and (b), in the absence of misleading argument by the prosecutor inviting it to do so." (People v. Kimble (1988) 44 Cal.3d 480, 505 [construing identical instruction under 1977 death penalty law, former Pen. Code, § 190 et seq., Stats. 1977, ch. 316, § 5 et seq., p. 1256 et seq.].) In this case there was no such misleading argument.

Nor can we conclude that the factor (b) instruction was erroneous when we review the charge in its entirety. Elsewhere in the instructions the court made it plain that factor (b) was limited to crimes other than those of which defendant was convicted in this proceeding. Specifically, the court delivered the following charge to the jury.

"Evidence has been introduced for the showing that the defendant WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN has committed the following 'criminal activity' which involved the use or attempted use of force or violence or the express or implied threat to use force or violence: [¶] The homicide of Marcus Grabs . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of Donald Hyden . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of David Murillo . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of Charles Miranda . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of James MaCabe [sic] . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of Ronald Gatlin . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of Harry Todd Turner . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of Steven Wood . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of Darin Lee Kendrich [sic] . . .[;] [¶] The homicide of Steven Wells . . .[.] [¶] Before you may consider any of such criminal activity as an aggravating circumstance in this case, you must first be satisfied beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN did in fact commit such criminal activities. You may not consider any evidence of any other criminal activity as an aggravating circumstance other than those which are set forth in this instruction." (Italics added.)

When the factor (b) instruction is considered in connection with the foregoing instruction, no error appears: the latter properly limits the former. (See People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at p. 787.)

6. Failure to Instruct on "Burden of Proof" in Determining Penalty

Defendant contends that the due process clause required the court to instruct the jurors that they might return a verdict of death only if they were persuaded beyond a reasonable doubt that the evidence in aggravation outweighed the evidence in mitigation and that death was the appropriate penalty. We rejected the substance of this claim, however, in People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d 730, 778, footnote 15.

7. The Meaning of Statutory Sentencing Factor (i)

Defendant contends in substance that contrary to the legislative intent informing section 190.3, the language of factor (i) of the instruction on the sentencing factors may have misled the jurors to consider his "age . . . at the time of the crime" as a circumstance in aggravation. The point is without merit.

As we recently held in People v. Lucky (1988) 45 Cal.3d 259, 302, "It is true that 'mere chronological age . . . should not of itself be deemed an aggravating factor.' [Citations.] By the same token, mere chronological age of itself should not be deemed a mitigating factor. Age alone is plainly 'a factor over which one can exercise no control' [citation] and as such is not relevant to the issue of penalty. . . . [¶] In our view, the word 'age' in statutory sentencing factor (i) is used as a metonym for any age-related matter suggested by the evidence or by common experience or morality that might reasonably inform the choice of penalty."

Thus, we are of the opinion that the language of factor (i) of the instruction on the sentencing factors was not misleading. First, that language is identical to the relevant language of section 190.3. Second and more important, it would be understood by a reasonable juror in accordance with the interpretation of the statute set forth above. Accordingly, we hold that the court's instruction was not erroneous.6/

6/ Defendant claims in substance that the prosecutor's comments on factor (i) were improper. Those remarks were as follows.

"The age of the defendant at the time of the crime. . . . [T]he defendant was born January 8, 1947. [¶] That means, as I count anyway, that the defendant was 32 when he killed Frank Fox and was 33 when he killed Rusty Rugh, Glen[n] Barker and Lawrence Sharp. [¶] I would think if a person was very young, that might be a mitigating factor. One might want to say a young person hasn't had the opportunity to experience in life those experiences which mature a person. And he may not be responsible. We see that all the time. [¶] My kids. Whenever they step out of line, you're saying to them, 'they are not really responsible for everything they do,' because they haven't--they haven't attained the maturity or the maturation that one would have as an adult. [¶] Here again, where someone is very old, one might say that would be a mitigating factor because there may be some type of mental impairment when one gets very old. [¶] But when one is 32 and 33, I would submit to you that that's an aggravating factor. That person has lived 32 years, a little over 32 years when he killed Frank Fox. He's had all of the chances he could have, and he still chose to kill Frank Fox, chose to murder him. [¶] The age in this case I would submit to you is an aggravating factor."
(Footnote continued on next page.)

8. Brown Error

Defendant contends that former CALJIC No. 8.84.2, incorporating the section 190.3 mandatory sentencing language, may have misled the jurors to his prejudice as to the scope of their sentencing responsibility and discretion in violation of the constitutional principles set forth in People v. Brown (1985) 40 Cal.3d 512, 538-544, reversed on other grounds sub nomine California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. ___ [107 S.Ct. 837].

Section 190.3 states in relevant part that "the trier of fact shall consider, take into account and be guided by the aggravating and mitigating circumstances referred to in this section, and shall impose a sentence of death if the trier of fact concludes that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances." (Italics added.)

In Brown we held that section 190.3, as construed therein, was not unconstitutional. (40 Cal.3d at pp. 538-544.) In conformity with settled constitutional principles, we interpreted the statutory language to require jurors to make " . . . 'an individualized determination on the basis of the character of the individual and the circumstances of the crime'" (id. at p. 540, italics deleted) and a "'" . . . moral assessment of [the] facts . . ."' (ibid.)--and thereby decide "which penalty is appropriate in the particular case" (id. at p. 541).

(Footnote continued from previous page.)
Under the analysis set forth above, we believe that the prosecutor's comments were proper and accordingly reject defendant's claim.

Although in Brown we upheld the constitutionality of section 190.3, we nevertheless recognized that when delivered in an instruction the provision's mandatory sentencing language might mislead jurors as to the scope of their sentencing discretion and responsibility. (40 Cal.3d at p. 544, fn. 17.) Specifically, we believed that a juror might reasonably understand that language to define the penalty determination as "simply a finding of facts" (id. at p. 540) or "a mere mechanical counting of factors on each side of the imaginary 'scale'" (id. at p. 541). We also believed that a juror might reasonably understand the language to require him to vote for death if he finds that the evidence in aggravation outweighs the evidence in mitigation--even if he determines that death is not the appropriate penalty under all the circumstances. (See id. at pp. 540-544.) For this reason we directed trial courts thereafter to instruct jurors in conformity with the principles set forth therein, rather than in the bare words of the statute. (Ibid.) With respect to cases--such as the present--in which the jurors had been instructed in the statutory language, we announced that we would examine each such appeal on its merits to determine whether the jurors may have been misled to the defendant's prejudice. (Ibid.)

We turn now to the case at bar. After reviewing the record of the penalty phase in its entirety, we cannot conclude that the jurors may have been misled to defendant's prejudice by former CALJIC No. 8.84.2. We believe that they were adequately informed as to what they were to do, and how they were to proceed, in the determination of penalty, and that neither concern expressed in Brown was substantially implicated.

Defendant argues in effect that the prosecutor's closing argument made the potentially misleading language of former CALJIC No. 8.84.2 misleading in the context of this case. We are not persuaded.

The theme of the prosecutor's argument was that the evidence in aggravation was overwhelming and the evidence in mitigation was virtually nonexistent. In other words, the theme was that the evidence called for the penalty of death. Such a theme, of course, does not offend the principles of Brown.

We recognize that in setting forth and commenting on the instructions the prosecutor made the following statement. "The applicable standard is 'shall, shall.' In other words, if you find as a group that the aggravating factors outweigh the mitigating, then the law requires that you shall return a death penalty. If you find as a group that the mitigating factors outweigh the aggravation, then you shall return a verdict of life without parole. [¶] It doesn't give any discretion once you have found the factors either aggravating or mitigating. You have to do it one way or the other once you've found that to be true."

In spite of this erroneous comment, we do not believe that the prosecutor's argument made the language of former CALJIC No. 8.84.2 misleading in the context of this case. This is so because when the argument is considered as a whole this remark was short and isolated and hence was swallowed up in the theme that the evidence called for the penalty of death. Further, the remark did not go unchallenged. Defense counsel argued: "[I]n making the decision of whether or not you intend to kill Bill Bonin or whether you intend to allow him to live really requires not just an evaluation of all of the testimony in a very rote, numerical type fashion, but it involves a lot of soul-searching because each of you is a judge and in this particular case each of you is an executioner. [¶] So you have to look individually inside of yourself and look again at the evidence that you had during the penalty phase and look at it very carefully again, then look at the evidence that was presented during the--. I mean, that was the guilt phase. I'm sorry. [¶] But then look at the evidence that was presented during the penalty phase and look very deeply for the reasons as to why a person--and in this case, Mr. Bonin as he sits there--why he should live or why he should die. And that's why we're here."

In conclusion, on this record we find no Brown error.1/

9. Instructions on Sympathy

Defendant contends in substance that the court erred when it failed to instruct the jurors sua sponte that they (1) could consider sympathy in choosing the appropriate penalty and (2) should not be guided by the antisympathy instruction of CALJIC No. 1.00 which was given at the guilt phase. The point must be rejected.

First, we believe that the court was not required to instruct on sympathy sua sponte. To the extent defendant argues that the jurors should have been instructed that they could indulge in sympathy unrelated to any of the evidence adduced at trial, he is unpersuasive. In California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. ___ [107 S.Ct. 837], the United States Supreme Court implied that such an instruction might unchannel the

1/ Defendant claims in substance that in making the comment quoted above the prosecutor intended to minimize the jurors' sense of responsibility in determining penalty and that he effectively did so. To be sure, we recognize that such a remark is constitutionally objectionable. (Cf. People v. Brown, supra, 40 Cal.3d at pp. 538-544 [discussing the mandatory sentencing language of § 190.3].) But on the facts of this case, we cannot conclude that the prosecutor intended to minimize the jurors' sense of responsibility: as noted above, the theme of the prosecutor's argument was that the evidence called for the penalty of death, not that the "law" required that sanction. Nor can we conclude that the prosecutor effectively minimized the jurors' sense of responsibility: as also noted above, the comment in question was short and isolated.

jury's guided discretion by allowing it to rely "on extraneous emotional factors, which, we think, would be far more likely to turn the jury against a capital defendant than for him." (Id. at p. ___ [107 S.Ct. at p. 840].) It also suggested that insofar as such an instruction frees the jury to consider matters outside the record, it might frustrate "the Eighth Amendment's 'need for reliability in the determination that death is the appropriate punishment in a specific case.'" (Id. at p. ___ [107 S.Ct. at p. 840].) Finally, the court implied that by freeing the jury's penalty considerations from record evidence, such an instruction might undermine "the availability of meaningful judicial review, another safeguard that improves the reliability of the sentencing process." (Id. at p. ___ [107 S.Ct. at p. 839].)

To the extent defendant argues that the court should have instructed the jurors sua sponte that they could consider sympathy grounded in the evidence adduced at trial, he is also unpersuasive. We believe that the jurors were adequately instructed on the point when the court told them that they could consider "any . . . factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation." Defendant may be understood to claim that the court should have provided an amplification or explanation of these words. But in the absence of a request, it was under no obligation to do so. (People v. Anderson, supra, 64 Cal.2d at p. 639.)

Second, we believe that the court was not required to instruct the jurors sua sponte that they should not be guided by the antisympathy instruction of CALJIC No. 1.00 given at the guilt phase.

Defendant argues as follows: at the guilt phase the court told the jurors that the instructions given during that stage of the trial "apply to this case" (italics added), and hence might have been understood to mean that the antisympathy instruction governed the penalty phase--if such was to be had--as well as the guilt phase. We are not persuaded.

By telling the jurors that they could consider, under statutory sentencing factor (k), "any . . . factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation," in the context of this case the court would have been understood to imply that they could exercise sympathy if they believed the facts allowed them to do so. The reasons for our conclusion are two. The defense had presented background and character evidence in an attempt to minimize defendant's personal culpability and thereby arouse sympathy. Moreover, in argument defense counsel had pleaded for sympathy from the jurors, and the prosecutor had acknowledged that they could consider sympathy under statutory sentencing factor (k).

In view of the foregoing, we believe that the guilt phase antisympathy instruction cannot be deemed to have carried over to the penalty phase. Accordingly, the court did not err by failing to caution the jurors not to be guided by that instruction. (See People v. Miranda, supra, 44 Cal.3d at

p. 102; People v. Gates (1987) 43 Cal.3d 1168, 1209; People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at pp. 785-786.)8/

C. Attack on the Constitutionality of the Sentence of Death

Defendant contends that the imposition of the sentence of death was "unconstitutionally arbitrary, discriminatory, and disproportionate, considering the facts of the offense and [his] personal characteristics." He presents, however, neither evidence nor argument in support of his point. Hence, we are compelled to reject the claim as not properly raised.

D. Attack on the Constitutionality of the 1978 Death Penalty Law

Defendant contends that the 1978 death penalty law is unconstitutional on various grounds. We rejected the substance of this claim in People v. Rodriguez, supra, 42 Cal.3d at pages 777-779.2/

---

8/ Defendant may be understood to contend that on the facts of this case the giving of CALJIC No. 1.00 at the guilt phase may have misled the jurors "into believing that mitigating evidence about [his] background or character . . . must be ignored" (California v. Brown, supra, 479 U.S. at p. ___ [107 S.Ct. at p. 842] (conc. opn. of O'Connor, J.)) on the ground that they were not adequately instructed that they could and should take such evidence into consideration. The argument must be rejected because its ultimate premise is false. As noted above, the jurors were expressly instructed to "consider, take into account and be guided by" specified factors and "Any other circumstance which extenuates the gravity of the crime even though it is not a legal excuse for the crime, or any other factor offered by the defendant as a circumstance in mitigation." (Italics added.) Hence, the jurors did receive adequate instructions on background and character evidence.

The judgment is affirmed.

MOSK, J.

WE CONCUR: LUCAS, C.J.
PANELLI, J.
EAGLESON, J.
KAUFMAN, J.

2/ We are of the opinion that in view of the theories presented and the evidence introduced, the jury's guilt phase verdicts imply a finding that defendant actually killed, and intended to kill, the victims (Enmund v. Florida, supra, 458 U.S. at pp. 788-801). Having reviewed the record in its entirety, we conclude that this finding is amply supported by the evidence and adopt it as our own. Accordingly, we hold that the imposition of the penalty of death on defendant does not violate the Eighth Amendment. (Cabana v. Bullock (1986) 474 U.S. 376, 386.)

COPY

PEOPLE v. WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN

Crim. 23286

CONCURRING OPINION BY BROUSSARD, J.

I concur in the result reached by the majority opinion, but respectfully object to its discussion of penalty phase issue number 3, the prosecutor's erroneous argument that the absence of mitigating evidence renders a factor aggravating.

People v. Davenport (1985) 41 Cal.3d 247, 289-290, first established that the absence of evidence of a mitigating factors does not transform it into an aggravating factor. In the present case, tried before Davenport, apparently both prosecutor and defense counsel were unaware that such a rule might be established. Thus the prosecutor incorrectly argued that mitigating factors unsupported by evidence were aggravating factors, and defense counsel did not object.

The majority begin their discussion of this issue by noting that defendant's failure to object bars review of this issue, and that the prosecutor's misstatement of the law cannot be characterized as misconduct. This portion of the majority's discussion is pointless, for this court has unanimously resolved that in cases of this type it will review the merits of defendant's contention despite trial counsel's failure to object or the prosecutor's putative good faith. As we explained in People v. Lucero (1988) 44 Cal.3d 1006, 1031 footnote 15, "[b]ecause this case was tried before . . . Davenport, we do not describe the prosecutor's mistaken argument as misconduct. For the same reason, we could not treat a defense counsel's failure to object as incompetence or waiver. Our concern is not with the ethics of the prosecutor or the performance of the defense, but with the impact of the erroneous interpretation of the law on the jury."

The majority accordingly turn to the merits, but their discussion betrays a misunderstanding of the significance of the prosecutor's remarks. They conclude that since the trial court directed the jury to consider the factors only "if applicable," and since we must presume that the jury followed the instructions, we should further presume that the jurors rejected the erroneous conception urged by the prosecutor. This is nonsense. The vice of Davenport error is that it tells the jury that factors are applicable when as a matter of law they are not and that factors are aggravating when as a matter of law they are neutral or mitigating. Nothing in the judge's instructions would dispel such erroneous impressions. The trial judge did not tell the jurors how to determine which factors were applicable, that many factors were inapplicable, or that absence of evidence to support a mitigating factor did not transform it into an applicable aggravating factor. Consequently the prosecutor's erroneous argument would not strike the jury as inconsistent with the instructions. We cannot presume that the jurors rejected a plausible prosecution argument and instead adopted a view advanced by neither court nor counsel.

Indeed the instructions to the jury to consider sentencing factors only "if applicable," and to follow the law as stated by the judge, are standard instructions given in all capital cases. To hold that such instructions give rise to a presumption that the jury rejected erroneous prosecution argument would give the prosecutor carte blanche to argue whatever he chose. While we have sometimes found Davenport error nonprejudicial, our cases have carefully analyzed the impact of the prosecutor's argument in light of the aggravating and mitigating evidence; none has presumed the absence of prejudice from form instructions. (See, e.g., People v. Ghent (1987) 43 Cal.3d 739, 775; People v. Allen (1986) 42 Cal.3d 1222, 1284.)

After making such an analysis, however, I agree with the majority that on the facts of this case the error was not prejudicial. Defendant was convicted of four murders in this case, and the penalty phase evidence showed his guilt of ten more. Under these circumstances, I do not believe it reasonably possible that, in the absence of the erroneous prosecution argument, the jury would have returned a different verdict. I therefore concur in the judgment of affirmance.

BROUSSARD, J.

I CONCUR:

ARGUELLES, J.

PEOPLE v. BONIN

S004565 [Crim. 232861]

COUNSEL FOR PARTIES:

FOR RESPONDENT: Steven Zeigen, Esq.
Office of the Attorney General
110 West A Street
San Diego, CA 92101
(619) 237-7679

FOR APPELLANT: Monica Knox, Esq.
Office of the State Public Defender
1390 Market Street, Suite 425
San Francisco, CA 94102
(415) 557-1600

TRIAL COURT & NO.: Superior Court of Orange County
C-47500

TRIAL JUDGE: Hon. Kenneth Lee

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

WILLIAM GEORGE BONIN, PETITIONER v. CALIFORNIA

ON PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF CALIFORNIA

No. 88–6341. Decided March 20, 1989

The petition for a writ of certiorari is denied.

JUSTICE MARSHALL, with whom JUSTICE BRENNAN joins, dissenting from denial of certiorari.

Adhering to my view that the death penalty is in all circumstances cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U. S. 153, 231 (1976) (MARSHALL, J., dissenting), I would grant the petition for certiorari and vacate the death sentence in this case. Even if I did not hold this view, I would grant the petition to resolve the question whether a trial court may instruct a penalty phase jury that, "[i]f you conclude that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances, you shall impose a sentence of death." As I stated in Hamilton v. California, —— U. S. —— (1989) (MARSHALL, J., dissenting), "I have grave doubts that such an instruction permits the individualized and reliable sentencing determination that the Constitution requires in capital cases, particularly where, as here, it is coupled with prosecutorial remarks stressing the limits on jurors' discretion." Id., at ——. I dissent.